The Working Man.

The noblest men I know on earth
Are men whose hands are brown with toil,
Who backed by no ancestral groves,
Hew down the wood and till the soil;
And win thereby thereby a prouder name
Than follows king or warrior's fame.

The working men what,e'er the task,
Who carve the stone or bear the hod,
They bear upon their honest brows
The royal stamp and seal of God;
And worthier are their drops of sweat
Than diamonds in a coronet.

God bless the noble working men,
Who rear the cities of the plain,
Who dig the mines, who build the ships,
And drive the commerce of the main.
God bless them for their toiling hands
Have wrought the glory of all lands.

FULTON VS. ALBANY.

In 1864 the question of removing the capitol from Albany was seriously considered, a committee was appointed to examine different points strongly reccomended in various portions of the state and mayors of cities and presidents of villages were requested by circular to state "on what terms grounds and necessary buildings for a new capitol and public offices can be obtained." Of the many hundreds of letters received by the committee the following was singled out for special notice. In making their report to the legislature the speaker was called upon to read the letter from Fulton, which was received with rounds of applause. It was widely copied and commented upon. W. S. Nelson, Esq., was President of this village at the time:

FULTON, February 21st 1865.

Hon Wm. Laimbeer Jr., Chairman &c.

SIR:—Your circular of the 16th instant, containing a resolution adopted by the Senate appointing a committee to ascertain "on what terms grounds and necessary buildings for a new capitol and public offices can be obtained" has been received. You also say you desire to call my attention to the fact "that the question of the removal of the capitol from the city of Albany is being seriously and earnestly discussed."

Of this I am heartily glad, for that city of Albany is a terribly tough place. I always, in traveling to and from New York avoid it if possible. Either from the inherent perverse nature of its inhabitants (which I doubt) or by reason of the annual convergence, at that point, of individuals representing so diseased a constituency (which is more probable), it has become beyond question the worst place this side of the Rocky Mountains.

From whatever consideration the purpose to make the change has arisen, the object to be gained has my entire sympathy.

I proceed to answer, seriatim, the questions propounded by you.

1st. Description of the premises offered:

We have so many advantageous sites that it is difficult to particularize, and the suggestion of any one might be deemed invidious. There will be no difficulty on this point.

2nd. Availability and cost of buildings; the ease and price of procuring materials;

On this point we cannot fail to meet your expectations. All materials indigenous to the soil, as hemlock, stone, &c., can be had here as cheap as elsewhere in the state, and the pine forests of Canada are at our command. As to cost of site, it would doubtless be expected you should pay for conveyance and stamps, and as to cost for materials for building, the market price would not be an unreasonable basis.

3d. The number, rapidity and cost of traveling routes to this locality:

Here we have you.

1st. Daily communication with Hannibal by stage.

2d. Tri-weekly communications with Mexico and Gilbert's Mills by stage. These conveyances carry passengers with the usualy rapidity.

3d. The Oswego and Syracuse railroad which passes within a mile of this place. I fear I shall fail to do justice to this route of travel. It is the boast of our advancing civilization, and a single suggestion connected therewith must, I think, be conclusive as to the locality of the capitol of our state here. It is this: The "third house" would never get here—or if at all not before the adjournment of the legislature; and lest the people's representatives should be on their way at the expiration of the hundred days, there might be a quiet understanding that their pilgrimage to the capitol should commence as soon as their nominations were secured. If, in some case, the people should not ratify their nominations no great harm could come of it.

4th. The extent and character of hotel accommodations:

They are ample and of good repute.

5th. Salubrity of locality.

[illegible]

information desired should be communicated. In your special inquiries there is a suggestive omission, and that is as to the morals of our village. This is our "best hold." No place in the state can compare with ours in this respect. The people of this locality take to morality naturally, and are much aided by our municipal regulations.

The predecessors of the present municipal authorities, in addition to the ordinances restricting the "running at large of hens," (see journal of village, page, 369) did not allow any exhibition whatever to take place here, except those of approved morality. To be sure, the ordinance referred to, is at present, ineffective, and a little more liberality is exercised toward amusements; but the location of the capitol at this place, with its attending influences, would speedily restore republican rule, and with it, those good old Puritan notions which are temporarily shelved.

The climate of this locality is all that heart can desire, and in good weather, no place more enjoyable. Our moonlight evenings are our pride. I can in no way give you a better idea of these than by quoting from one of our country newspapers, showing at the same time, in what an enchanting manner sentiment is wedded to practical life, romance to agriculture. I quote:—

"'Twas a calm still night, the moon's pale light shone soft o'er hill and dale. Not a breeze stirred; not a leaf stirred; not a dog stirred; not a horse stirred; not a man stirred; not an owl stirred; not a hog stirred; not a cow stirred; not a sheep stirred; not a cat stirred; not a mouse stirred; not a hen stirred; not even a goose stirred."

Other considerations press upon me for notice, but I fear if I have not already impressed you favorably towards this locality, further effort will be in vain. I am not wholly certain that I truly represent the wishes of a majority of the citizens of this village in setting before you so many alluring inducements to locate the capitol in Fulton.

I tell you confidentially, that among our best citizens a distrust is felt toward Albany and our Legislatrors, which could not be wholly obviated by the proposed change of locality.

"You may break, you may ruin the rose if you will, but the scent of the rose will hang around it still."

Personally I don't share in these fears. I think I could take care of myself in any event.

I close by suggesting that if your circular was sent to me as a mere matter of form, without entertaining the idea seriously of locating the capitol at this point, and thus my exhaustive researches, in answer to your inquiries be of no avail, you will at once send me your check, certified, for such reasonable some as will, in your judgement, be a fair compensation for this effort.

Respectfully Yours,
W. S. NELSON, President.

P. S. If you don't locate here, don't for God's sake at Buffalo. It is a bad place, and its citizens a jealous minded people.
W. S. N.

Palpitation of the Heart.

J. M. Might Syracuse, N. Y., writes: "When I first commenced using your Burdock Blood Bitters I was troubled with fluttering and palpitation of the heart. I felt weak and languid, with a numbness of the limbs; since using, my heart has not troubled me and the numbing sensation is all gone." Price $1.00, trial size 10 cents.

Newspaper Writing.

The majority of people imagine that it is the simplest thing in the world to edit a newspaper. A man may have grave doubts about his talents for public speaking; may freely admit that he cannot turn a tune or recognize one when turned by anybody else; may confess that he is no poet, not much of a scholar, and nothing of an artist; but there is no creature so poor spirited as to avow his incapacity to edit a newspaper. On the contrary this is work for which every man has a manifest call. No matter what his actual business may be—preacher, lawyer or physician, baker or candle stick maker—he has a secret fancy that if he only had a chance he could make a newspaper a a little spicier and livelier than any thing in the shape of a public journal that has ever come in his way. This is one of the most amusing and universal weaknesses of modern times. The number of people who are infected by it are known only to druggists and physicans. The drawers and waste baskets of every leading newspaper office in the country overflow with evidences of ambition and harmless vanity of the vast public who scribble by stealth, and patiently toil over reams of composition which nobody can be induced to print.

It must be admitted that there is something enticing and enviable in editorial life as it appears to the outside world. The delight of getting into print for the first time is one of the keenest enjoyments. What, therefore, men and women reason to themselves, must be the pleasure of that happy man who daily feasts the public with his wisdom and whose smallest scribbling finds its way into type without criticism or delay? But this reasoning is altogether unsound. The editor does not look at things exactly in the same roseate light. The bright colors seen by other eyes have become to his a little clouded. The freshness, the exquisite charm of seeing his reflections in print has long since vanished. He [illegible] been dull." Every blockhead who buys his paper feels that he has purchased a right to dictate the manner in which it shall be conducted, to criticise sharply everything that appears in it, and to "elevate its tone" with his own carping lucubrations fairly written out and inclosed in a note for immediate publication, signed "A Subscriber," "An Old Patron," or "An Earnest Well-Wisher." If you were to ask this modest friend to cut you a coat, or measure you for a pair of boots, he would indignantly reply that that was not his trade; that he knew nothing about it and would not attempt it. But the diffidence which shrinks from shears and coyly draws back from the awl and the lapstone boldly grasps the pen and undertakes to so illuminate and instruct the world. Breeches and shoes require art, experience and reflection, in their making; political essays flow spontaneously from the most addled pate, or can be pumped out of it by sheer hard labor, without vulgar appliances of study, thought and knowledge. Such is life!

LIQUID GOLD.

Dan'l Plank, of Brooklyn Tioga county Pa, describes it thus: "I rode thirty miles for a bottle of Thomas' Eclectric Oil, which affected the wonderful cure of a crooked limb in six applications; it proved worth more than gold to me."

A Sad Story.

A story of disease, destitution and the abandonment of five human beings to a terrible fate, almost within the corporate limits of the city of Richmond, is related in a dispatch from that city to the New York Herald. It is that of a poor colored woman and her four children, most of whom were stricken with the small pox, and then deserted and shunned by everybody who should or could have sent them a helping hand.

Just about two hundred yards from the corporate limits of the city of Richmond on Brook avenue, and over which the jurisdiction of the city authorities extends, in the county of Henrico, lives a colored widow named Mary Pollard and four children. The mother is about thirty-six years of age, the eldest child, a girl of thirteen, and the others respectively five and three, and the youngest one year old. The house or cabin is a miserable, dilapidated frame tenement greatly exposed to the weather by reason of loose boarding and holes, through which winter winds and rain gain access.

To add to the misery of the unfortunates within, about one month ago the girl, the oldest of the children, was taken violently ill, and a physician was called in. He examined the case and pronounced it one of small-pox. This gentlemen, who it is understood stands high in the medical profession in this city, called the remaining members of the family out upon the street and there vaccinated them. This was very good and humane of the doctor, but after advising that the girl should be sent to to the small-pox hospital he announced to the suffering family that he should not call again.

The news that there was small pox in the family soon spread over the neighborhood, and the frail tenement house was shunned as pest houses are. No one went near it. Soon after this visit of the physician, the baby was also taken with the disease. The mother nursed both her stricken children with all the untiring love and devotion of a mother but she was utterly destitute. without food, without fuel, without medicine and without a friend, almost within hailing distance of a city numbering 65,000 inhabitants—brimming over with benevolence and charitable and religious institutions.

In the terrible state to which she was reduced she tore the weatherboards from the house to make a fire to keep her children from famishing, and in this way making the exposure greater than before. Then this struggling heroic mother was taken sick. "Near a whole city full, friends she had none." The malady had laid its fearful hands upon her, but still she struggled on and nursed her children. In a few days, however, and before the mother's strength had failed her the baby died. For two entire days the corpse of the dead infant lay in that house of misery and want. Not a human being came near enough to cross the threshold.

The next youngest child, three years old was taken sick and there was none left to hand even water to the sufferers excepting the boy aged five years, who now had to nurse the whole family. By this time the horrors of the situation in the desolate cabin began to dawn upon the neighbors, and charity, cold and distant, at last put in appearance. The five year old boy from the door cried out to the passers-by and told their piteous story. It had its effect. A humane colored man came with a spade and two yards from the rear of the cabin he dug a little grave. Another neighbor kindly furnished a tiny pine board box. It was laid near the door of the house.

The mother with the disease raging upon her, dragged herself from the bed. She shouldered her dead child, placed it in a charity coffin and it was buried. A day or two after the burial the mother grew worse until she had the disease in its most malignant form, but she still [illegible]. With the death [illegible] of the child the neighbors [illegible]

Persecuting the Jews.

During the Middle Ages the fury of mankind seemed to burst on the devoted heads of the unhappy Jews. The whole world appeared to have entered into a conspiracy to strip this miserable race of their treasures, and to pour out their blood like water. Kingdom after kingdom, and people after people, were bent on their destruction. Human craft was at work to devise new means to sweep them from the earth, and the Inquisition, under the name of Christianity, at one swoop deprived sunny Spain of its most industrious citizens, and consigned to a cruel grave some hundreds of thousands of Israelites.

In the East, under the Sultan Motakvel, the Jews were distinguished from the faithful by a brand mark and their houses were defaced by figures of swine, apes, or devils.

The Jewish communities in Palestine suffered a gradual extinction until only 200 descendants of Abraham were found in Jerusalem. In the Byzantine empire also the number of Jews greatly diminished through unceasing persecution.

In the West all orders were gradually arrayed against Israel in fierce and implacable animosity. Every possession was in arms against them. The monarchs were instigated by avarice, the nobility by the warlike and fanatical spirit fostered by chivalry, the clergy by bigotry, the people by all these motives, to which were added ignorance and superstition. The history of the Jews for several centuries is only a record of wholesale massacres, of rapine, of persecutions, of bloodshed. The Crusaders, under the guidance of Peter the Hermit and Walter the Penniless, recollected that while they were advancing to recover the sepulcher of their Redeemer from the infidels they were leaving behind worse unbelievers, the murderers of the Lord. Whereupon ensued a scene of pillage, violation and murder that could not have been surpassed by the most atrocious savages that ever scalped their foes. In that terrible day Israelites slew their children and their wives to save them from the fiendish iniquities of the so-called followers of Christ. Half a century later the fierce cry of Hep, Hep, rang through the cities of the Rhine and the Jews endured fresh outrages and murders.

In comparatively peaceful times the ingenuity of different potentates was exercised in passing enactments intended to fetter and restrain the Jews in every phase of life. As an instance of this special legislation, we may adduce the laws passed by the Council of Vienna in 1267. Israelites were interdicted the use of Christian baths and inns; they were not allowed to employ Christian servants, or to marry Christian women, or to farm any tolls. They were commanded to wear a distinctive badge, which consisted of a pointed cap. They were enjoined to pay certain dues to the Christian clergy, and to observe respect for Christian ceremonies. Christians at the same time were prohibited from associating with Jews. In France life was no less burdensome to the descendants of the patriarchs than in Germany. St. Louis, by a stroke of the pen, wiped out, for the welfare of his soul, one-third of all debts due to them. No bailiff might arrest or maltreat a Christian for any debt due a Jew.

In Brittany, John the Red surpassed his liege lord in his edicts against the Jews. They were banished from the country; all the debts owing to them were annulled; permission was given to those who possessed their property to retain it; no Christian who killed a Jew should be prosecuted. In other words, license was given for the robbery and murder of Jews. Fair France tolerated them for some generations longer. Kings and nobles continued to plunder them, and fanatical populations to shed their blood until they were finally expelled by an order of Charles VI. They were accused of running the country, and of individual crimes for which not the slightest proof was adduced. Four of the most wealthy among them were scourged two successive Sundays in all the cross-roads of Paris, and they bought their lives at the price of 18,000 livres. The Jews were allowed a month to wind up their affairs, and then the whole community crossed for the last time the borders of the kingdom. In Spain this unhappy race underwent various vicissitudes. The Golden Age under the Moors was followed by the Iron Age under Castile's Christian monarchs. Spoliation, persecution, and butchery were crowned by Ferdinand and Isabella's edict of exile.—London Spectator.

By the unthinking, Burdock has been considered a weed, and its luxuriant growth, unpleasant smell, etc., has rendered it, to those "not knowing its virtues," a nuisance, and yet the root has long been acknowledged by savants as most invaluable as a diuretic, aperient and blood purifier. Burdock Blood Bitters embody all its good qualities. Price $1.00, trial size 10 cents.

Scarlet fever is increasing in New York city at a threatening rate, and assuming an unusually malignant form. The health authorities have increased the number of disinfectors and more if necessary will be appointed. During the week ending Dec. 31, 274 cases were reported and 60 deaths occurred. Saturday 17 persons died, Sunday 9 and Monday 17.

THE people of New York State are treated to the spectacle of a dead lock in their State Legislature. Tammany's refusal to accept the caucus nominees for officers of the Senate and Assembly leaves the democrats without a majority, and, the republicans being in a minority, puts complete organization of either House out of the question for the present. How long the dead lock will last no one pretends to be able to guess. The hitch is chiefly in the Senate, and Senator Jacobs' nomination for President pro tem. is the declared cause.

GEN. GRANT comes out and says he believes Fitz John Porter is innocent of the charges preferred against him during the war that caused his dismissal from the army. What new light has been let into Gen. Grant's brain we do not know. As president of the United States and general of the army, covering a period of twelve years, Grant had power to do Fitz John Porter justice. The cause of this sudden transition of opinion will probably never be made public. It will be interesting to read what Gen. Pope has to say about this.

ALL men write foolish love letters, if they write any, and yet all men are ready to laugh at another fellow's folly. In a case in a New York court, recently, when a letter was read from a young man in which he called his sweetheart "tootsy-wootsy," and described how "delicious" he would feel when he folded her in his arms after the wedding ceremony and kissed that beautiful mole under her left ear, the crowd burst into a great roar, just as if every mother's son of them hadn't written a good deal worse nonsense than that many a time.

IT IS rumored that Gen. Swaim, judge advocate general, has decided in the Whittaker case that a court martial was illegal, because of the fact that the President had no right to call one except by request of the department commander, and as no such request had been made the whole work of the court martial is thrown aside. It has cost the government $100,000 so far to find out who mutilated the colored cadet's ears. The question of the legality of the court martial will be submitted to Attorney General Brewster for decision. The decision of the court martial in regard to Whittaker's case has nat been made public.

GUITEAU bounced into the court room yesterday and made a few remarks a la clown:

"I had a very happy New Year gentlemen and ladies, and I hope everybody else did. I had plenty of visitors, high-toned, middle-toned and low-toned. The general opinion is that I ought not to be hung, and I have no doubt that I shall be acquitted."

He is still noisy and impudent. The prosecution appear ready to submit the case. Witnesses are being called in surrebuttal by the defense. It is now thought next week will bring the trial to a close.

SEVERAL cases have been discovered in Washington of people receiving pensions by personating dead soldiers. No doubt they are as legally entitled to a pension as a great many who are drawing them, but the whole system should be revised in such a manner as to be able to give to worthy people alone. Many whose lives have been wrecked by dissipation and dissolute habits, finding themselves incapacitated for business, suddenly recollect that they took some important part in preserving the Union, receiving injuries; (?) and in goes an application endorsed by his old Captain, Surgeon and Chaplain, if needs be, who are to be amply remunerated when Uncle Sam shells out.

SMALL POX is raging is many places in the U. S. A dispatch published yesterday from Washington, in which it was stated that "advices received at the Post-office Department from postmasters show an alarming increase in small-pox cases in all sections of the country. In some cases—notably in New York State—the department has been applied to by postmasters to adopt some method of protecting them from infected mail matter, even to the extent of stopping the mails altogether if other means fail. [illegible] no cases reported in this vicinity [illegible] behooves our people to be [illegible] for this disease. High medical authorities say that small-pox [illegible] rapidly in cold weather.

[illegible] To tell how I was caught [illegible] this position and to warn others against nearing it, are my objects in this communication.

On the first day of June 1881, I lay at my residence in this city surrounded by my friends and waiting for death. Heaven only knows the agony I then endured, for words can never describe it. And yet, if a few years' previous, any one had told me that I was to be brought so low, and by so terrible a disease, I should have scoffed at the idea. I had always been uncommonly strong and healthy, had weighed over 200 pounds and hardly knew, in my own experience, what pain or sickness were. Very many people who read this statement realize at times that they are unusually tired and cannot account for it. They feel dull and indefinite pains in various parts of their body and do not understand it. Or they are exceedingly hungry one day and entirely without appetite the next. This was just the way I felt when the relentless malady which fastened itself upon me first began. Still I thought it was nothing; that probably I had taken a cold which would soon pass away. Shortly after this I noticed a dull, and at times neuralgic pain in my head, but as it would come one day and be gone the next, I paid but little attention to it. However, my stomach was out of order and my food often failed to digest, causing at times great inconvenience. Yet I had no idea, even as a physician, that these things meant anything serious or that a monstrous disease was becoming fixed upon me. Candidly, I thought I was suffering from Malaria and so doctored myself accordingly. But I got no better. I next noticed a peculiar color and odor about the fluids I was passing, also that there were large quantities one day and very little the next, and that a persistent froth and scum appeared upon the surface, and a sediment settled in the bottom. And yet I did not realize my danger, for, indeed, seeing these syptoms continually, I finally became accustomed to them, and my suspicion was wholly disarmed by the fact that I had no pain in the affected organs or in their vicinity. Why I should have been so blind I cannot understand.

There is a terrible future for all physical neglect, and impending danger usually brings a person to his senses even though it may be then too late. I realized, at last, my critical condition and aroused myself to overcome it. And, O! how hard I tried! I consulted the best medical skill in the land. I visited all the prominent mineral springs in America and travelled from Maine to California. Still I grew worse. No two physicians agreed as to my malady. One said I was troubled with spinal irritation; another, nervous prostration; another, malaria; another, dyspepsia; another, heart disease; another, general debility; another, congestion of the base of the brain; and so on through a long list of common diseases, the symptoms of all of which I really had. In this way several years passed, during all of which time I was steadily growing worse. My condition had really become pitable. The slight symptoms I at first experienced were developed into terrible and constant disorders—the little twigs of pain had grown to oaks of agony. My weight had been reduced from 207 to 130 pounds. My life was a torture to myself and friends. I could retain no food upon my stomach, and lived wholly by injections. I was a living mass of pain. My pulse was uncontrollable. In my agony I frequently fell upon the floor, convulsively clutched the carpet, and prayed for death. Morphine had little or no effect in deadening the pain. For six days and nights I had the death premonitory hiccoughs constantly. My urine was filled with tube casts and albumen. I was struggling with Bright's Disease of the Kidneys in its last stages.

While suffering thus I received a call from my pastor, the Rev. Dr. Foote, rector of St Paul's church, of this city. I felt that it was our last interview, but in the course of conversation he mentioned a remedy of which I had heard much but had never used. Dr Foote detailed to me the many remarkable cases which came under his observation, by means of this remedy and urged me to try it. As a practicing physician and graduate of the schools, I cherished the predjudice, both natural and common with all regular practitioners, and derided the idea of any medicine outside the regular channels being the least beneficial. So solicitous, however, was Dr. Foote, that I finally promised I would waive my predjudice and try the remedy he so highly recommended. I began its use on the first day of June and took it according to directions. At first it sickened me; but this I thought was a good sign for one in my debilitated condition. I continued to take it; the sickening sensation departed and I was able to retain food upon my stomach. In a few days I noticed a decided change for the better as also did my wife and friends. My hiccoughs ceased and I experienced less pain than formerly. I was so rejoiced at this improved condition that, upon what a few days before I believed was my dying bed, I vowed in the presence of my family and friends should I recover I would both publicly and privately make known this remedy for the good of humanity, wherever and whenever I had the opportunity. I also determined to give a course of lectures in the Corinthian academy of music of this city, stating in full the symptoms and almost hopelessness of my disease and the remarkable means by which I had been saved. My improvement was constant from that, and in less than three months I had gained 26 pounds of flesh, became entirely free from pain and I believe I owe my life and present condition wholly to Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure, the remedy which I used.

Since my recovery I have thoroughly re-investigated the subject of kidney difficulties and Bright's disease, and the truths developed are astounding. I therefore state deliberately, and as a physician that I BELIEVE MORE THAN ONE-HALF THE DEATHS WHICH OCCUR IN AMERICA ARE CAUSED BY BRIGHT'S DISEASE OF THE KIDNEYS. This may sound like a rash statement, but I am prepared to fully verify it. Bright's disease has no distinctive symptoms of its own (indeed it often develops without any pain whatever in the kidneys or in their vicinity) but has [illegible] of nearly every other known complaint. Hundreds of people [illegible] are authorized [illegible] upon facts which I am prepared to produce and truths which I can substantiate to the letter. The welfare of those who may possibly be sufferers such as I was, is an ample inducement for me to take the step I have, and if I can successfully warn others from the dangerous path in which I once walked. I am willing to endure all professional and personal consequences.

Board of Supervisors.

The Board of Supervisors met at the Court House in Oswego Saturday morning, completed their work, and adjourned sine die.

A resolution was offered and adopted fixing the salary of the clerk at $400. Clerk Nichols extended his thanks to the board.

Mr. Sperry moved a vote of thanks to Clerk Nichols. He said that it was not an empty formality, but to show respect and appreciation for the many courtesies shown the members of the board.

Mr. J. Smith warmly seconded the resolution in a few well chosen remarks. He said in him had been the pivot or the balance wheel of the board. No matter how busy Mr. Nichols might be engaged, let any number of the board go to him for information, they all received the same pleasant answer. He said that he would always feel under obligations to him for his uniform courtosy, and would recommend to his successor next year the retention of Mr. Nichols as clerk of the board as long as his name came up.

NEIGHBORING NEWS.

Rev. Henry Ward Beecher lectures at Baldwinsville this evening.

Chauncy Sales, of Virginia, son of Guy Sales, now deceased, is in Palermo settling up his father's estate.

The Oswego county agricultural society of Mexico is in debt to the amount of $1,083.50, notwithstanding the economical management.

The Oswego Palladium says the land league of that city have secured Father Sheehy to lecture before the league, on the evening of January 23d.

The Sandy Creek lecture course includes Prof. Geo. Kennan, Judge Tourgee, Dr. Willetts, Rev. C. P. Lyford, Chancellor Sims and the Royal bell ringers.

Miss Genevieve A. Merriam, formerly of New Haven, in this county, but for several years past a teacher in the graded school at Gloversville, died in the latter place on Monday last of typhoid fever.

The annual election and meeting of the Oswego Falls Agricultural Society will be held at the office of Howe & Rice, in the village of Fulton, N. Y., on the 11th day of January, 1882, at 12 o'clock noon.

The Oswego Times says it is understood that a change will soon be made in the N. Y. O. & W. railroad agency in that city. Mr. G. A. Fort, freight and passenger solicitor and excursion manager, will probably be appointed agent.

The residence of Mr. H. V. Williams, with contents, situated about four miles north of Phœnix, was consumed by fire last Wednesday evening. Mr. and Mrs. Williams barely escaped with their lives. There was an insurance of $1,000 on building and contents. Loss $1,400.

The Syracuse Sunday Herald has been enlarged to an eight page paper, containing in each issue fifty-six columns. The Herald has honestly won its way to a favorite place in the minds of Central New York readers, and since the day of its conception its growth has been steady and healthy. The Evening Herald ha an average daily circulation of 10,000.

The Oswego Palladium announces that Hon. D. G. Fort, who has been deposed from the collectorship af the port of Oswego, has been studying for the legal profession during the past year and intends to enter it. The bar of Oswego county will be the gainer if it loses Lamoree and gains Fort, for the latter is a ripe scholar and a gentleman. There are but few better public speakers in the state than Mr. Fort, and if he takes to the law he will occupy a prominent position. [Buffalo News.

Real Estate Changes.

Following are deeds recorded at the county clerk's office during the past week of local import:

Henry M. Fuller and wife to Lewis Fuller; land in Fulton, Dec. 10, 1881, $1.

Nelson Beardsley to Richard K. Sanford et al.; release of mortgage, premises in Fulton, December, 1881.

Margaret Jenkins to Sylvester Dicky; land in Volney, Dec. 17, 1881, $450.

What is Romance?

We hear much talk of romance in these days, and the dictionaries do not help us out much in ascertaining what it is, except in the history of the word; but its present meaning seems to rest chiefly on the accounts of surprisng adventures arising from the passion of love. The best hint at the thing is in Judge Tourgee's Preface to his new novel, "A Royal Gentleman." He says: "The relations between a subject and a dominant race are always fruitful of romance. Inequality of rank (which may be said to culminate in the relation of master and slave) is the burden of nearly all romantic fiction." He speaks further on in this tale as "setting forth the prime and simplest elements of the whole system of the Southern civilization—the Master and the Slave, separated by the whole diameter of the social sphere, and yet united in a common destiny by that universal passion—love,"

It seems to us that the Judge has hit the nail on the head (as, indeed, he has a habit of doing), and that he has found the true starting point of romance. Inequality of rank between lovers,—that sounds like an old world idea, with Cinderella and the King's son, King Cophetua and the beggar-maid, wandering minstrel and lovely princess; yet here we have it in our own land and in its most extreme possibility. The story as told in the Judge's book shows that he is an adept in tenderness, in the strange network of romantic complications, as well as in the "battle, murder, and sudden death" to be found in the "Fool's Errand." We do not wonder that the Atlanta Constitution called this book "as vivid as the lightning," and the Chicago Journal represented it as "absolutely thrilling in some of its situations and delineations." Whatever may be thought of Judge Tourgee's definition of romance, he has assuredly furnished a strangely interesting example of it. The reading of "A Royal Gentleman" will bring its own reward, and other books on the library-shelf will make room for it.

HOW THE TIMES IS RECEIVED.

A Few of the Opinions Expressed by our Cotemporaries.

We reproduce a few out of the multitude of complimentary notices paid THE TIMES by neighboring journals, for the purpose of showing our readers that a paper is measured by its contents wherever it goes.

It seems to have true prosperity, [Oswego Palladium.

THE FULTON TIMES is as bright as it is handsome. [Whitehall Times.

THE FULTON TIMES deserves its well earned prosperity. [Utica Herald.

THE FULTON TIMES has enlarged its columns and ideas. [New York Daily News.

THE FULTON TIMES is prospering finely under the management of W. C. Wheeler. [Mexico Independent.

THE FULTON TIMES has improved in more ways than one under its present management. [Phœnix Register.

THE FULTON TIMES has caught the improvement fever. The new editor prospers and publishes a good paper. [Carthage Republican.

Brother W. C. Wheeler, of the FULTON TIMES, is thriving splendidly. THE TIMES is always a welcome visitor to our table. We extend congratulations. [Sandy Creek News.

THE FULTON TIMES, under the proprietorship of W. C. Wheeler, has evidenced marked improvement. The new dress in which the TIMES is now robed, gives it a bright, cheery appearance. [Oswego Express.

THE FULTON TIMES appears enlarged to an eight column paper. The improvement is permanent. THE TIMES is by far the the best paper published in Fulton and is meeting with merited success. [Oswego Times.

THE FULTON TIMES is a lively and enterprising newspaper. It not only holds its own but takes in added prosperity, which is why it rejoices, and why, in company with all its friends we join in the festivities. [Rome Sentinel.

THE FULTON TIMES comes to us clothed in a new and handsome dress, in every-way befitting its character. Since the TIMES has come under the editorial conduct of Mr. W. C. Wheeler, it is not too much to say that it has shown a more elevated standard of journalism, while losing aught in the way of news or spiciness. We are glad to note the evidence of increasing prosperity. [Oneida Dispatch.

Song of the ROYAL ST. JOHN

A saint come to every home
And with my presence cheery,
I banish care and burdens bear,
Of women, worn and weary.

I run so light, and look so bright,
The ladies dote upon me,
No noise I make, no threads I break,
Though back and forth you run me.

Through every kind of goods I go,
Silk, muslin, cloth and leather;
Though all machines refuse to sew
Yet I sew on forever.

No heads I pain, no eyes I strain,
To find the way to thread me,
No holes have I, save needles eye
To make a cause to dread me,

I'm cheap and good and if you should
But for a moment doubt me,
Be sure and try, and then you'll buy
And never be without me.

I seam, I hem, I fell I bind,
I ruffle, tuck and gather;
And all machines I leave behind,
While I sew on forever.

A man appeared at the house of Chas Loungely, who resides about three miles northeast of Fulton, one day last week, to all appearances minus one arm, begging for money. Mr. Loungely gave the unfortunate a quarter and directed him to Fulton. Mr. Loungely was somewhat surprised to meet the same man the day following with two arms. He warns people to be on the lookout for him.

John Mahar and John Morway were engaged last Saturday in digging a well on the premises of G. F. Spafford on Oneida street, Mahar and his son, a young lad, were in the well which was fifty-four feet deep. Morway was working at the mouth of the well and accidentally let drop in a thirty pound sledge hammer. It struck Mahar upon his right shoulder breaking his collar bone and knocking him insensible. As soon as he could be taken out of the well he was removed to his home, and Dr. D. Pardee called. He is improving. Morway feels deeply grieved over the accident and says that it is the first that ever happened in the history of his well digging [illegible] dug a great many.

Sudden Death.

Issac Darrow received a telegram last Wednesday from Evanston, Ill., announcing his daughter, Mrs. W. A. Arnold, nee Sarah Darrow, as lying near death's door. A few hours later the dread news was wired to the waiting parents that her soul had passed away. The direct cause of her death was an affection of the heart.

Mrs. Arnold spent her school days in Fulton and was married about eighteen months ago and had taken up her residence in Evanston, where her husband is employed as an architect. Her death was sudden, and here, where she was so well and favorably known, causes anguish in the hearts of many. She was twenty years of age.

Her remains arrived in Fulton Saturday evening, accompanied by the sorrowing husband, and taken to the residence of her parents on Cayuga street. Funeral services were held at the M. E. Church Sunday at 2 1-2 P. M., largely attended by friends and acquaintances, Rev. E. C. Bruce officiating.

In Memoriam.

At a recent meeting of the Women's Christian Temperance Union, the members desiring to pay tribute to the memory of Anna B. Hamilton, the following resolutions were adopted:

WHEREAS, From our little band of Christian temperance workers, Anna B. Hamilton has been called to rest.

Resolved, That we recognize that call as the voice of the Father she loved, and whose bidding she has ever joyfully obeyed.

Resolved, That while we miss her earnest work and her kind sympathy, we will long remember her as an example of pure, unselfish Christianity, of quiet, courageous devotion to duty whenever and wherever presented, of sweetness, patience and suitability of character, in sickness as well as health.

Resolved, That we tender our heartfelt sympathy to the afflicted family, sharing with them the abiding consolation that for her to die was gain. We may submissively say, not our will, but Thine, Oh, God, be done.

Service of Praise.

Believing that God has in these latter days shown us how truth in music may have especial power of blessing, it is our purpose next Lord's day in the evening to seek such a blessing in the service of praise. A cordial invitation is extended to all who love to sing to come and take part with us. Familiar hymns, the power of a strong organ and the lead of a chorus choir will help all to participate. Let us together "sacrifice the sacrifice of thanksgiving and declare His works with rejoicing."

Night School.

Miss Mary J. Boggs, a graduate of the Normal school in Oswego, will open a night school in Upper Oswego Falls tomorrow evening, to be continued during the winter. Sessions will be held on Monday, Wednsday and Friday of each week. Terms, $1.50 per month, pupils furnishing lights.

Our Sick People.

Mr. S. N. Kenyon is still slowly improving.

Raleigh Mosher is rapidly convalescing from his attack of typhoid fever.

Mrs. John Rowlee of Volney is seriously sick with an affection of the lungs.

Mrs. O. C. Lathrop who has passed through a severe sickness is slowly recovering.

Miss Josephine Broadwell of Oswego Falls is recovering from her recent severe illness. Her sister Mrs. Dr. Chaffee returned to Rochester yesterday.

Miss. Maria Palmiter was on last Tuesday evening stricken with paralysis. She had attended the Christmas festivities at the Presbyterian church in the early part of the evening and returned home in usual health. She has since lain in a semi-stupor and has been unable to speak. Her recovery is considered doubtful. She is reported this morning to be somewhat brighter but still unable to move or speak.

Miss Lillie Pomeroy, daughter of Louis Pomeroy, died at her home in Oswego Falls Sunday evening, aged fifteen years, of consumption. Funeral was held at 10 A. M., to-day from the Church of the Immaculate Conception. Lillie was a bright and interesting girl and her parents feel keenly their loss. She was a sister of Mrs. Samuel Davis, recently deceased.

The Odd Fellows will hold the fourth of a series of sociables at their rooms in the Dexter block Friday evening.

Mr. W. A. Arnold returned with his father to Deansville, Oneida County, Monday. He will return to Evanston, Ill., in a few days.

Fred Van Wagenen, jr is spending a few days at home. His friend and classmate, Mr. James Fairgraves of Schenectady is visiting with him.

W. J. Townsend has sold his residence, corner Fourth and Buffalo streets, to Mr. Slayter Laycock. Mr. Townsend contemplates removing to New York city for the practice of law.

The body of James Doran, who was night watch in the Oswego shade cloth factory at the time of the explosion, was found last Wednesday evening buried in the ruins in an almost unrecognizable mass.

E. F. Blanchard came out to-day with his new express sleigh. It is a model of neatness and was manufactured by R. K. Harris & Son of this village expressly for Mr. Blanchard. Dick Miller did the painting and lettering.

Rev. A. A. Willets who is advertised to deliver a lecture in this village under the auspices of the Popular Lecture Course January 11th will not appear on that date. Announcement will be made next week of the date of his appearance.

The word "harvested" as used to denote the cutting and housing of ice does not appear to the Oswego Palladium as admissible. Webster, among the many definitions of the word "harvest" says it is the "product of labor." Ice might slip in under that clause.

On the first page of to-day's paper will be found an interesting and certainly humorous letter. At the time of its first publication it was received with great favor, and besides being read in the State Legislature numerous copies in pamphlet form were printed by the State for gratuitous distribution.

The editor of the Parish Mirror announces in the last issue of his paper that hereafter he will devote considerable of his time to the agency business. He will make a specialty of disposing of second-hand harness, patent rights, sleighs, and musical merchandise, and has fitted up a portion of his editorial room as a warehouse and sales room.

Martin T. Crahan, of Oswego Falls, and Miss Maggie Roberts, of Rochester, N. Y., were married in Pueblo, Col., Dec. 24th, by Rev. Father D. F. Haugh. Mr. Crahan is in business in Gunnison City, Col., and Miss Roberts journeyed from Rochester to Pueblo alone and became his bride. Mr. Crahan has an army of friends in this section who wish him and his wife years of unalloyed happiness.

The telephone line between this village and Oswego is ready for business and is in first-class working order. The charge will be twenty cents for subscribers and thirty cents for non-subscribers for five minutes' use of the line, the time to commence when a connection is made. Mr. W. E. Waugh has charge of the Fulton office and will give his personal attention to the wants of patrons.

The Oswego Falls Reading Club enjoyed a supper in their rooms Monday evening and invited a few of their friends to participate in the gracious feast. Singing, speech making and a general good time followed, supplemented by a well-conducted hop until the wee sma' hours o' morn'. Mr. G. E. Smiddy, in the absence of the president of the club, directed the evening's amusement in a highly pleasing manner.

Judge Mason's name is already mentioned by some of the powers that be as his own successor in this Congressional district. There are two republican journals in Oswego county at present bitterly opposed to Mr. Mason, but a few gilt-edged promises tendered at the proper time may serve as a magic panacea on their gall and cause the choice rhetoric these journals indulge in to flow with unusual zeal for him. We all know time works surprising changes.

Dr N. A. Haviltnd has a fresh supply of non-humanized vaccine virus with which he is vaccinating his patrons. Small-pox is prevalent in many of our sister villages and cities. The public should protect themselves. 83t1

"The Domestic Tyrant."

"The average man," quoth Mrs. Partington, "is a weak and irritable tyrant," and Mrs. P. is correct. Tyrannical to a fault the average man will enter the blissful Paradise of a happy home, scratch himself in fiendish glee, send the baby into convulsions, and for what? Why, because he has the Itching Piles, and is too mean to buy Swayne's Ointment, which is an infallible cure for the worst cases of that annoying complaint.

Month of December.

Below you will find a record of December since 1840, showing the mean temperature of the month at 7 A. M. since 1852 and the depth of snow since 1840:

Year.	Snow. Inch.	Mean at 7 Deg. Min.	Year.	Snow. Inch.	Mean at 7 Deg. Min.
1840	18		1861	7	26 7
1841	20		1862	7	26 6
1842	24		1863	28	22 7
1843	13		1864	35
1844	16		1865	17
1845	20		1866	21	22 7
1846	24		1867	27	17 6
1847	18		1868	62½	20
1848	16		1869	6	25 7
1849	26		1870	18	26
1850	31		1871	23	18 8
1851	16		1872	22	16 1
1852	16		1873	57	25 6
[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]

It will be seen by the above that the December just closed has been the warmest of all. December, 1877, came the nearest to it, and December, 1857, stands third. December, 1877, had the same fall of snow as 1881, but on the first day of the former there was eight inches of snow on the ground, whereas on the latter there was not any. About 3 3-4 inches of rain has fallen since the 21st of the present December, which far exceeds any other December for the same length of time.

Timely Suggestions.

"How many years a mortal man may live.
[Henry VI.

"Time," says a noted writer, "is the solemn inheritance to which every man is born who has a life lease of this world—a little section cut out of eternity and given to us to do our work in; an eternity before and an eternity behind; and the small stream between, flowing swiftly from one into the vast bosom of the other." Another small portion of time, which we begin to ask ourselves what our work in it has amounted to; what have we done—what left undone. Kent & Miller, the popular clothiers at 18 and 20 South Salina st., in view of the prosperous and growing trade of the year just closing signify their gratitude to their numerous friends whom they have served and whose favor has been continued. They look forward with increasing confidence to the future and send the hearty greeting of a Happy New Year to each and all of their patrons. They have in stock, by reason of the backwardness of the season, a larger amount of Winter goods—Overcoats and Warm Woolen Suits for Men and Boys—than is usual at this season. They cannot, however, or rather will not carry them over the season. Down the Prices are bound to go until every article sells. Those who have neglected to supply themselves before the Old Year went out, will have an opportunity with the coming in of the New Year, to purchase at selling prices some of the finest and best Overcoats, Storm Coats, Ulsters, Business Suits, School Suits—in fact all sorts of Clothing for all sorts of people At Kent & Miller's,

ACROSTIC.

BY A. G. TILDEN.

Justice and truth the beacon lights to guide
On every field triumphant o'er the tide.
Honor to him who elevates the man,
No friends protest no foes who fairly can.
Conscience true safeguard of the noble soul
Upright in every sphere with selfcontrol.
Revering Him by faith and works to prove Triumphs eternal for the God we love.
Inquiring man, way worn with weary care
Seek Second street to find congenial care
Substantial and well served in neatest style.
Devoted host and social without guile
Regards with manly care each waiting guest
Excepting nought that tones the stomach best
Salvation into whom in faith believes
Save then yourself and shun the Forty thieves
Eternal truth we worship at thy shrine
Receive this tribute unto thee and thine.

ACROSTIC FROM FATHER TO SON.

Joy to the man who greets the morning toil
Of useful labor on the genial soil.
Health, peace and hope shall be his recompense
Nor shall be want for wordly competence.
While youthful hope and vigor shed you on
Amid the varied scenes of life my son
Remember this. Observe the golden rule
Revere thy God. Take heed the world's thy school.

[illegible] Freedman is trying [illegible] wards, and against which [illegible] and now "A Royal Gentleman" [illegible] the first of the group. Since [illegible] some years before the war) shows in brilliant colors the typical young Southerner, with all his dashing, brave and manly qualities, and how these were dimmed and fouled by the accursed evils which slavery fastened upon the master race even more deeply than upon the slave. In point of romantic interest, "A Royal Gentleman" is undoubtedly the strongest of Judge Tourgee's novels, for while, with no political discussions, it grasps the historic lines which have formed so large a part of this author's inspiration, it mingles with them in the deft and brilliant interplay of his weaving the threads of love, mystery, adventure, crime, and the personal elements of battle field and hospital, in such a way that the reader is led on by the most absorbing interest in the characters themselves.

This book has just been issued by Judge Tourgee's New York publishers, Messrs. Ford, Howard & Hulbert, and is printed, illustrated and bound in the artistic and workmanlike style that characterizes the publications of that house. "A Royal Gentleman" is a book to be read and pondered well. It is sold exclusively by subscription.

Mrs. Ira Mulholland, Albany, N. Y. writes: "For several years I have suffered from oft-recurring bilious headaches, constipation, dyspepsia, and complaints peculiar to my sex. Since using your Burdock Blood Bitters I am entirely relieved." Price $1.00, trial size 10 cents.

"FEMALE COMPLAINTS."

Dr R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.; Dear Sir—I write to tell you what your "favorite Prescription," has done for me. I had been a great sufferer from female complaints, especially "dragging down" for over six years, during much of the time unable to work. I paid out hundreds of dollars without any benefit till I took three bottles of "Favorite Prescription," and I never had anything do me so much good in my life. I advise every sick lady to take it.

THE SUN.

NEW YORK, 1882.

THE SUN for 1882 will make its fifteenth annual revolution under the present management, shining, as always, for all, big and little, mean and gracious, contented and unhappy. Republican and Democratic, depraved and virtuous, intelligent and obtuse. The Sun's light is for mankind and womankind of every sort; but its genial warmth is for the good, while it pours hot discomfort on the blistering backs of the persistently wicked.

The Sun of 1868 was a newspaper of a new kind. It discarded many of the forms, and a multitude of the superfluous words and phrases of ancient journalism. It undertook to report in a fresh, succinct, unconventional way all the news of the world, omitting no event of human interest, and commenting upon affairs with the fearlessness of absolute independence. The success of this experiment was the success of The Sun. It effected a permanent change in the style of American newspapers. Every important journal established in this country in the dozen years past has been modelled after The Sun. Every important journal already existing has been modified and bettered by the force of the Sun's example.

The Sun of 1882 will be the same outspoken, truthtelling, and interesting newspaper.

By a liberal use of the means which an abundant prosperity affords, we shall make it better than ever before.

We shall print all the news, putting it in readable shape, and measuring its importance, not by the traditional yardstick, but by its real interest to the people. Distance from Printing House Square is not the first consideration with The Sun. Whenever anything happens worth reporting we get the particulars whether it happens in Brooklyn or in Bokhara.

In politics we have decided opinions; and are accustomed to express them in language that can be understood. We say what we think about men and events. That habit is the only secret of success of The Sun's political course.

The Weekly Sun gathers into eight pages the best matter of the seven daily issues. An Agricultural Department of unequaled merit, full market reports and a liberal proportion of literary scientific and domestic intelligence complete The Weekly Sun, and make it the best newspaper for the farmer's household that was ever printed.

Who does not know and read and like The Sunday Sun, each number of which is a Golconda of interesting literature, with the best poetry of the day, prose every line worth reading, news, humor—matter enough to fill a good sized book, and infinitely more varied and entertaining than any book, big or little?

If our idea of what a newspaper should be pleases you, send for The Sun.

Our terms are as follows:

For the daily Sun, a four page sheet of twenty-eight columns, the price by mail, post paid, is 55 cents a month, or $6.50 a year; or, including the Sunday paper, an eight page sheet of fifty-six columns, the price is 65 cents per month, or $7 70 a year, postage paid.

The Sunday edition of The Sun is also furnished separately at $1.20 a year, postage paid.

The price of the Weekly Sun, eight pages, fifty-six columns, is $1 a year, postage paid. For clubs of ten sending $10 we will send an extra copy free.

Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, which had worked so successfully in his father's case. Mr. Hicks who had been assured by the local physicians that they could do nothing more for him, tried 'Favorite Remedy,' at a venture. After two weeks use of it he passed a stone ¾ of an inch long and of the thickness of a pipe stem. Since then he has had no symptoms of the return of the trouble. Here is a sick man healed. What better results could have been expected? What greater benefit could medical science confer? The end was gained; that was surely enough. Dr Kennedy assures the public, by a reputation which he cannot afford to forfeit or imperil, that the "Favorite Remedy" does invigorate the blood, cures Liver, Kidney and Bladder complaints, as well as those diseases and weaknesses peculiar to females. For Deafness, apply a particle into the ear.

ELY'S CREAM BALM

HAVING gained an enviable local reputation, displacing all other preparations in the vicinity of discovery, is, on its merits alone recognized as a wonderful remedy wherever known. A fair trial will convince the most skeptical of its curative powers. It effectually cleanses the nasal passages of Catarrhal virus, causing healthy secretions, allays inflammation and irritation, protects the membranal linings of the head from additional colds completely heals the sores and restores the taste and smell. Beneficial results are realized by a few applications. A thorough treatment as directed will cure Catarrh. As a household remedy for cold in the head, it is unequaled. The Balm is easy to use and agreeable. Sold by Druggists at 50 cents. On receipt of 50 cents will mail a package.

Send for circular, with full information.

RESCUED FROM DEATH

William J. Coughlin of Somerville, Mass, says: In the fall of 1876 I was taken with bleeding of the lungs followed by a severe cough. I lost my appetite and flesh and was confined to my bed. In 1877 I was admitted to the hospital. The doctors said I had a hole in my lung as big as a half dollar. At one time a report went around that I was dead. I gave up hope, but a friend told me of DR WILLIAM HALL'S BALSAM FOR THE LUNGS. I got a bottle, when to my surprise I began to feel better, and to-day I feel better than for three years past.

"I write this hoping every one afflicted with diseased Lungs will take DR WILLIAM HALL'S BALSAM, and be convinced that CONSUMPTION CAN BE CURED. I can positively say it has done more good than all the other medicines I have taken since my sickness.

Poor Richard's Maxims.

The maxims of Dr. Franklin, though often printed, lose nothing of their value by repetition; they may at the present time serve to strenghthen good resolutions:

1. Plow deep while the sluggards sleep, and you will have grain to sell and keep.
2. Pride is as loud a beggar as want, and a deal more saucy.
3. Silks, satins, scarlets and velvets put out the kitchen fire.
4. Diligence is the mother of "good luck."
5. Pride breakfasted with plenty, dined with poverty and suped with infamy.
6. Extravagance and improvidence end at the prison door.
7. It is easier to build up two chimney's than to keep them in fuel.
8. If you would know the value of money, try to borrow some.
9. The eyes of the master will do more work than both of his hands.
10. What maintains one vice will bring up two children.
11. He that goes a borrowing goes a sorrowing.
12. Rather go to bed supperless, than rise in debt.
13. Slow rust consumes faster than labor wears.
14. A life of leisure and a life of laziness are two different things.
15. [illegible] are as bad as a fire.
16. [illegible] have better [illegible]

[illegible] a church. The other day Nelson was arrested on a charge of stealing a mule, and was arraigned before a justice of the peace.

"Nelson," said the justice, "this is a very serious charge that has been brought against you. I had always regarded you as an honest man. When my little daughter was sick she called for uncle Nelson, and when you came her wasted face looked brighter. When she died you dug her grave, and together we mourned over her. Your prayers moved my heart and seemed to light a candle in my sorrow darkened soul. How could you, old man, be accused of theft?"

"Boss" replied Nelson, wiping his eyes on his sleeve, "I'se as innocent of this crime as Moses hisself."

"You were seen in the stable."

"Yes, sah."

"You were seen to put a bridle on a mule and lead him out."

"Yes sah."

"Then you confess your guilt?"

"No boss, or jedge—'scuse me fur de slip—I ain't knowledged de crime. If yer'll listen a few minutes I'll 'splain de 'spicious circumstances. Like Paul, I'se thankful dot I'se permitted ter speak for myself. Our cases is jest alike, only Paul wasn't charged wid stealin' a mule. T'other night, arter workin' widout result at a revival, I was gwine home, when I 'gun ter git mighty discouraged. 'What's the use I thought, 'ob hammerin longer on de anvil ob sin? De sinners won't harken to my efforts.' Den I thought dat I'd quit preachin' and go back ter pollyticks. Jist den I thought ob de 'junction, 'Go an' preach de gospel to ebery libin' creature. De fack dawned upon me in a new light. I had not been preachin' ter every thing. By dis time I had got ter de stable whar a white man keeps his mules. One ob de animals cried wid a loud voice, sayin', 'Come and preach de gospel.' Why not? I thought; de sparrows dose fall widout notice an' probably dose mules hab got souls ter sabe.' Den I went inter de stable, tuck my tex an' [illegible] preach. 'De moon was shinin',' [illegible] could see de tears runnin' outen de eye of a big red mule. He fairly [illegible] in his penitence. Den I [illegible] dat he was de mule what [illegible] kicked de life outen a [illegible] de wah. Anudder mule put his [illegible] the troff an' wept pitiful. A young [illegible] buck of a mule what had been asleep at de udder side ob de stable come up and gun ter poke fun at de mourners. My preachin' didn't have no 'fleus on him, and I got him outen de way [illegible] put a bridle on him an' lead him out, 'tendin' fur ter hitch him till arter the sermond was ober, but when I got outside, dis white man grabbed me. [illegible] 'splenation satisfactory, judge?"

"Perfectly."

"Ise glad dat yer's come to the relief ob de gospel."

"I want you to preach a sermon to the grand jury, Nelson. For fear that you might forget the day, we'll just send you to jail until the congregation assembles." [Arkansas Gazette.

It is no Joke.

To suffer constant headache, depression of spirits, longing for food and not being able to eat when put before you, gnawing pains in the stomach, lassitude and a general feeling of goneness; but a capital joke to find that Burdock Blood Bitters remove all these symptoms and only costs $1, trial size 10 cents.

A Novel Verdict.

The jury system is perhaps the best means we have of applying the laws of retribution, but it is certainly open to many grave objections. The greatest difficulty the courts find when they have to try a case which has become celebrated on account of its atrocity, is to get hold of twelve men whose ignorance is so profound that they are considered legally eligible to the office. If a man has read the newspapers and used his brains sufficiently to form any opinion whatever he is at once challenged. He is not thought fit to decide upon a verdict unless he is so utterly indifferent to the public good that his cranium is as empty as a haunted house. Once in a while, however, the jury take the matter into their own hands and determine that the ends of justice shall be attained. Said the foreman of one such jury in the West: "Your honor, we can't bring in a verdict of manslaughter, because the person killed was a woman, but we have unanimously agreed to bring in a verdict of guilty of horse-stealing, and are determined that the prisoner shall hang for it."

Economy.

A fortune may be spent in using ineffectual medicines, when by applying Thomas' Eclectric Oil a speedy and economical cure can be effected. In cases of rheumatism lame back, bodily ailments, or pains of every description, affords instant relief.

A. J. DeVoe, the weather prophet of Hackensack, N. J., in reply to the question: "How can persons foretell changes in the weather without the aid of the telegraph or scientific instrument?" says:

First—When you see a bank of thin, hazy clouds along the northwest, and it is clear over the rest of the heavens, then the wind will be from the southeast on the morrow, and the temperature will rise, and it will rain in less than 48 hours.

Second—When there is a dark ring around the sun, there is a storm forming to the south of you; and on the morrow the wind will be from the northeast with snow.

Third—When the sky looks very black and the stars shine unnaturally bright, a storm will advance suddenly from the southeast, beginning with snow followed by rain.

If any person living in any section of our country can cite an instance when those rules did not operate as I have stated, I shall be pleased to hear from him.

How to Secure Health.

It seems strange that any one will suffer from derangements brought on by impure blood, when Scovill's Sarsaparilla and Stillingia, or Blood and Liver Syrup will restore health to the physical organization. It has been proven to be the best blood purifier ever discovered, curing scrofula, syphilitic disorders, weakness of the kidneys, erysipelas, malaria, nervous disorders, debility billious complaints, and all diseases of the blood, liver, kidneys, stomach, skin etc. A single bottle will prove a health renewer, for it acts like a charm, especially when the complaint is of an exhaustive nature.

THE INDEPENDENT.

"The foremost religious newspaper of the United States."—The Rev Joseph Cook.

Established in 1848, as an advocate of anti-slavery and of reforms in religion and politics, the Independent at once became a recognized power throughout the country. Its influence has ever since been constantly growing. As it has fought against slavery and for cheap postage, so it will fight against Mormanism, for Civil Service Reform, and for purity in politics, and general uprightness in all things. It employs the best editorial talent and speaks fearlessly on all subjects. It pays for contributed articles and for editorial services more than double the amount paid by any other weekly newspaper.

It publishes more religious discussions than the religious reviews, and more poetry and stories popular monthlies, and gives more information than an annual cyclopedia. The long cable dispatches recently published from the great Methodist Council in London are a good illustration of what the Independent is constantly doing. A list of the most prominent religious and philosophical writers, poets and story writers in the country is the list of the contributors of the Independent. Besides the space set aside for these writers and for editorials, there are twenty-two distinct departments, edited by twenty-two specialists, which include Bibical Research, Sanitary, Legal, Fine Arts, Music, Science Pebbles, Personalities, Hymn Notes, School and College, Literature, Religious Intelligence, Missions, Sunday School, News of the Week, Finance, Insurance, Stories, puzzles, and Agriculture. 32 pages in all.

It Might Have Been.

[CASSEL'S MAGAZINE.]

It might have been! When life is young
And hopes are bright, and hearts are strong
To battle with the heartless throng,
When youth and age are far between,
Who hears the words so sadly sung?
It might have been!

It might have been! When life is fair,
Youth stands beside the boundless sea
That ebbs and flows unceasingly,
And dreams of name and golden fame;
And who shall limit the To Be
That's dawning here?

It might have been! When life is bright,
And love is in its golden prime,
Youth recks not of the coming night,
Nor dreams that there may be a time
When love will fail, or change, or die
Eternally!

It might have been! When time grows gray,
And spring-tide's hopes have passed away,
Old age looks back on by-gone years—
Their many wants and doubts and fears;
And through the mist a way is seen,
The might-have-been!

It might have been! When age so sad,
Weary of waiting for the fame
That, after all, is but a name,
When life has lost the charm it had,
True knowledge makes regret more keen—
It might have been!

It might have been! When youth is dead,
And love that was so late is fled,
When all the mockeries of the past
Have lost their tinsel rags at last,
The one true love is plainly seen
That might have been!

It might have been! Ah me! Ah me!
And who shall tell the misery
Of knowing all that life has lost?
By thinking of the countless cost
Poor comfort can the sad heart glean!
It might have been!

It might have been! Nay, rather rest
Believing what has been is best!
The life whose sun is not yet set
Can find no place for vain regret.
And only folly crowns as queen
It might have been.

Chinese Immigration.

In 1877 a congressional committee was appointed to take evidence in California from all classes of the community, in order to arrive at an intelligent estimate of the influence and probable results of unrestricted Chinese immigration. After impartially investigating the question, in their report they spoke of the Chinese as "making their way by revolting characteristics and by dispensing with what would be mere necessaries in modern civilization." The late Senator Morton joined with other members of the committee in declaring "that it has become painfully evident that the Pacific coast must in time either become American or Mongolian;" also "that the Chinese have advantages which will put them far in advance in the race for possession; they can subsist where an American would starve; they can work for wages which would not furnish the barest necessities of life for an American."

The evidence taken before the California Senate committee on Chinese immigration, at Sacramento in 1878, when testimony was taken from witnesses of all classes—clergymen, judges, lawyers, ship captains, state and city officials, etc.,—fully sustained the general belief of the people of California as to the disastrous consequences of Chinese presence in this country.

The census shows that the number of Chinese in California is about 103,000 or nearly 20 per cent. greater than the number of male whites capable of bearing arms. Although forming one-eighth of the total population of California they pay less than one-four-hundredth part of the revenue required for the state government. In San Francisco alone they number from 35,000 in summer to 40,000 or 50,000 in the winter, when they come in from the country. In his testimony before the Senate committee, Alexander Badlam, city assesor of San Francisco, said Chinese in the city have personal property to the amount of $500,000 and real estate to the amount of $900,000 assessed to them—thereby only paying about one three-hundredth part of the taxes, although forming nearly one eighth of the population.

Nearly $8,000,000 is annually sent home to China by the Chinese on the Pacific coast. The Chinese women imported are brought almost wholly for purposes of prostitution, there being in San Francisco alone about 4,000 of these human chattels, the gains from the contamination and pollution of whom with the youth of the city are regularly sent back to the celestial kingdom.

The results in all occupations where the Chinese compete with white labor are most disastrous to the latter, the whites in some trades being wholly driven. Facts and figures obtained from the most reliable and official sources make showing of follows.

Boots and shoes—Previous to 1870 the white boot and shoe makers of San Francisco had plenty of work at wages averaging twenty-five dollars per week; but in that year the employment of Chinese in that trade began, and since then there has been a steady decrease in wages. For bottoming ladies' first class boots the price paid per dozen pairs in 1870 was $18; in 1872, $15 to $18; in 1874, $12 to $14; in 1876, $9, to $10; and in 1878, $6 to $7. Prices at present are about the same as in 1878. The number of Chinese in the trade is 5700; [illegible] men, 1160. Competent Chinese [illegible] are paid $20 to $30 per month, [illegible] $9 to $15 per week. [illegible] factories owned entirely by [illegible] year's engagement—the object appearing to be to compete with the white manufacturers in the finer [illegible] goods; and of course when they have learned all they can from their white cutters, the services of the latter will be dispensed with. There are 60 boot and shoe factories in San Francisco, of which 48 are run by Chinamen and 12 by whitemen, while the entire 50 slipper manufactories are run by Chinese.

Laundries—There are 510 in the city, employing 7,650 Chinese, and the number of Chinese employed in laundries with whites is 615—making 8,265 in all.

Cigars—Number of Chinese cigarmakers, 8,500; white 179. The white cigarmakers of California have suffered more from the curse of Chinese labor than any other trade, and most of them despairing of any improvement in the future, have left the state or engaged in other employments.

Clothing—Number of Chinese employed by 25 firms 6,010; on custom work and underwear 1500—total 7510; number of white tailors 1000. The wages of Chinamen run from $20 to $28 per month; wages of white tailors average $15 per week, a redution of $10 per week since the introduction of Chinese labor into the trade in 1870.

Industries entirely in Chinese hands—Manufacture of slippers, brooms, pork trade, drying and exporting fish to China.

In almost every other trade, and also in the maritime service, including United States government vessels, they are also extensively employed.

The above facts have induced the workingmen of California, through the representative assembly of the trades and labor unions of the Pacific coast, to appeal to the workingmen and women of the United States to use whatever influence they can command to stop Chinese immigration. Senator Miller will introduce a bill in congress for its total prohibition, and the other California representatives have promised to support it. Friends of the working classes of the Pacific coast are asked to agitate the question by public demonstrations at the time the bill is introduced in the senate, and thus bring the influence of public opinion to bear upon congress in its favor, and to show that the people are alive to the importance and gravity of the situation. Is Culture a Sham?

A great many people whose manners are irreproachable and whose lives are correct have had frequent occasion to feel as a prominent preacher did the other Sunday when he said that culture at times seemed a sham. Few words have ever lost their original meaning as completely as this word "culture" has done of late years. Once it signified, according to the dictionary, "enlightenment and discipline acquired by mental training," but now it means merely a smattering of things of no vital consequence to any one. Modern culture claims that it refines men and women. If it can prove that it does this it should be held in high esteem; but experience proves that ninety-nine one-hundredths of what passes for refinement is the thinnest sort of polish—a mere gloss that can be applied at short notice to any coarse, rough, or rotten material without any effect whatever upon the texture. Culture is genuine only so far as something is cultivated. A man whose manner to his intimates is courteous and to others rude is not a cultured man; he is merely a boor who is smart enough to counterfeit true courtesy. In the best of men culture is only partial; in one the effort is confined to manners; in another to the affections; some devote most attention to their intellect, and a few men especially cultivate their moral sentiments. Any one of these has as good a right as any other to be considered cultured. A careful training of tastes results in culture of taste and nothing else, for correct taste is quite as often found in discourteous, dishonest, selfish and immoral persons as in any others. All the dress, upholstery, music, pictures, bric-a-brac and blue china in the world cannot impart culture to any qualities but those that are attracted by these things, and the literary sugar-plums that pretend to be the whole of literature are equally ineffective outside of their own particular lines. The sooner the present generation realizes this, the sooner a most disagreeable class of hypocrites will pass away from a world of shams.

It takes one hundred pairs of gloves to assuage the grief of the Brooklyn officials over the death of an alderman whose life had been saved by a single bottle of Dr Bull's Cough Syrup.

If you have a fault, stifle it. If you have a virtue, hold fast to it. If you have a friend, stand by him by anticipating his needs, by prompt and full assistance in the time of trouble. If you have a wife and home, treat the former with that love and kindness which you swore so to do, and your home, the training school of your children, make that sacred place the abode of joy, and its hearth the seat of comfort, to be held with its noble influences in loving remembrance long after its honored head has paid that penalty of life, which men below term death.

He that basks in the sunlight of a great man's favor by arts best known to craft and servility, may enjoy the unworthy profit for a time, but retribution will soon overtake and [illegible]

Fashion Notes.

Black pearls are worn in mourning.

Pointed trains supercede square ones.

Bangs must not extend across the temples.

Breast feathers rival ostrich tips for small bonnets.

Feather fans have butterflies and bees upon them.

Serpent bracelets in silver and silver gilt [illegible] fashionable.

Small [illegible] ear-rings remain the favorites for [illegible] ladies.

Shoes to be fashionable must taper to a rounded point at the toes.

Necklaces, when worn at all, must be high and close around the throat.

Bangle bracelets large enough to slip over the hand are no longer in vogue.

Dolly Varden lives again in a new polonaise, a novel handkerchief, and a daintily shaped dancing shoe.

Feathers are again worn in the hair with evening dress—matrons wearing them to the exclusion of floral garniture.

White ostrich feather trimming is seen upon a very few superb and costly Parisian toilets of white satin and velvet brocade.

Wall papers are now brought out in imitation of tapestries, including even the old Gobelins, which are admirably imitated.

Among other fashionable pendant ornaments for rooms are quaint, odd-shaped little baskets of split bamboo—Japanese of course.

The luxurious silver-pointed, tiger and mottled plush trimmings for winter wraps rival those of the most costly fur in popularity.

The jaunty Hungarian costumes are exceedingly pretty for children, made of Craigievar tweed trimming with dark bottle green plush.

Large, very large bonnets are the most fashionable, but small and medium sizes and cottage and turban shapes, still continue in vogue.

Separate collars and cuffs of velvet embroidered with gold are very fashionable. These sets are not very expensive and form a pretty finish to a plain toilet.

Black velvet ribbon is revived for making bows for looping dresses, for ornamenting cloaks, and for putting on the corsages of light dresses to give them character.

THE DANGERS OF THE STOCK MARKET.

A man may be incredulous enough to risk his money in the fickle mysteries of a mercurial stock market but when he gets the itching piles, he goes straight for Dr. Swayne's ointment. Unlike the Bulls and bears of the Stock exchange who clean you out of hard earned cash, it returns your money with interest, in the way of allaying the intense itching and insuring sweet repose.

Some Confederate Christmases.

Mr. James D. McCabe has recorded some interesting experiences of Christmas under the Confederacy. The dinner of 1861, he says, did not differ materially from its predecessors in the "piping times of peace," and though in 1862 the feast was home made, it was enjoyable. Turkeys were only $11 a piece, and salt had fallen to 33 cents a pound. The Yule log was obtainable at $15 a cord; wines were to be had by the very rich, and sorghum rum or apple, peach or blackberry brandy cost $30 a gallon. A few toys were left in the stores in the cities, and firecrackers, essential to the Southern festival, were $5 pack. By 1863 the closest search of Santa Claus revealed no playthings, and firecrackers indicated great wealth or reckless extravagance. The few turkeys in the market were $40 and $50 a piece; whiskey or sorghum rum for egg nogg cost $75 or $80 a gallon; sugar was $5 and $10 a pound, and flour $125 a barrel. With gold at 2,800, a plain Christmas dinner for a large family cost $200 or $300. In 1864, when Christmas fell on Sunday, gold was 5,000. Flour was $600 a barrel; sugar, $2 an ounce; salt, $1 a pound; butter, $40; beef, $35 to $40. Wood was $100 a cord. Mr. McCabe describes a Christmas dinner at a country house near Richmond. The four gentlemen were in uniform, the three ladies were in homespun. They had for dinner a $500 ham, and the last turkey on the plantation, value $175, with $100 worth of cabbages, potatoes and hominy. Corn bread was served, made of corn meal at $80 a bushel, and salt at $1 a pound. The dessert was black molasses at $60 a gallon, and after one cup of tea—real tea, worth $100 a pound, treasured for the occasion as a surprise, and not sassafras—there was coffee at discretion, made from sweet potatoes cut into little squares, toasted, and ground down. "What is a promise, my boy?" asked a school teacher, whose reputation for honesty was not of the best, to one of his younger scholars. "I don't know, sir," timidly replied the youngster. "Well, suppose you should come to collect a bill of me, and I should tell you to call around the next day and I would pay you, what would that be?" "I think would be a lie, sir."

To rob a house, or pick a man's pocket, are crimes which all good citizens justly condemn. To rob a creditor by entering the court of insolvency after squandering money due him for goods received, is a crime far more contemptible, for it is the crime of intelligence, often deliberately planned and carried to dishonorable and shameful success under the cloak of friendliness; if justice were meted out to such scoundrels, how many faces would be missed from the marts of trade.

Excessive Fat.

The amount of fat on an average of a human being is about ten per cent. We may safely mark the overplus as corpulency, and when the corpulency is excessive, we may well consider it disease that is apt to introduce other diseases that render locomotion difficult and laborious. Obesity not only invites other diseases to come and stay, but renders all diseases difficult to cure. The Brahmis of Asia, are proud of their excessive corpulency. They fancy that it gives them influence, as does opulence in civilized communities; so that corpulency means opulence with them. They live according to this notion. They consume non-nitrogenous food, that they may grow fat and live lazy lives, that they may not expend any lean or fat that has once been deposited on their frames. To some extent they no doubt succeed. Some scientists have affirmed that a strictly vegetable diet produces fat more surely than any other means—and a quiet life limits the expenditure.

It is very clear to any man who looks, that two distinct classes of food exists, different in their functions, and varying in their value—nitrogenous and the non-nitrogenous. The one is plastic, or tissue-making including all fibrin and albuminous matters, as animal food, aiding in the forming of blood and muscle, bones and other tissues. The other is respiratory, or heating food, including starch dextrine, and sugar. Man seems to need a mixed diet. He needs plastic and heating foods, the one to renew or restore the tissues of the body, and the other to renew or restore the fat, and so yield material for generating body heat and life. Either class of food may be limited, as circumstances may require. Exactly what kind of diet should be given to man or beast depends upon the purpose we desire to accomplish by giving it. The ill results of obesity are so great and many that it is wise to know how to relieve ourselves of so great a burden, how to cure a disease that is sure to invite other maladies of a severer type to come and stay. Obesity shortens life in man or beast. It certainly does not lengthen it. It obstructs the normal action of the various organs and oppresses the various currents, and so at last induces distressing and fatal maladies. Nearly always when we see a very fat man or woman waddling through the streets, we pity him or her, because we know that great obesity embarrasses the activity of the mind and lessens the comforts of the body. Watch a very fat man as he moves this way or that, and you may see that he is guiltless of energy or grace, that his organs of respiration, circulation, digestion, and assimilation act too rapidly for health and comfort. "Laugh and grow fat" is a saying older than many fat [illegible] suppose—meaning that cheerfulness promotes health—and still beyond a certain limit it is not true, for flesh is not fat, and flesh only can confer health and strength. Activity is what we want. Laughing does not always mean a pure and cheerful heart, but it often means a small mind and a thoughtless tongue. Smiling is a different thing. It is the expression of the soul and manifests happiness within. An old writer says that "[illegible] and fat are boon companions." It is very certain that the fat are slow of mind and rarely possess activity of body. Some exceptions always may be found. One of the fattest men ever known was equally remarkable for [illegible] activity of mind. But give us neither lean nor fat, but enough of each to make us comely and strong.

All nations in a cold climate instinctively desire an oily diet. Butter was royal food among the prophets. The land of olive oil was a land highly prized by the ancient Hebrews. All civilized nations are fond of butter. The Esquimaux loves his oily food.

The uses of fat are various. It impedes the too rapid escape of body heat; it forms a store from which to get supplies for waste of tissue; it is the excessive amount of fat that indicates disease and that is a burden and an obstruction—a real and serious evil.

A person may be large and still not obese. The muscles may be largely grown, and still the per cent. of fat be small. We refer to a large amount of fat as a disease. May it not always be so, when the free action of the lungs is obstructed, when the respiration is difficult, when locomotion is exhausting, when it unfits us for the active duties of daily life?

The causes of excessive fatness are many. The hereditary tendency of some, the habit of excessive eating, the habit of excessive drinking, consuming chiefly starch and saccharine foods, indolence and indifference to interests and trials—all these have an influence in this direction.

The sugar cane collectors and sugar makers of the South, in sugar seasons, the laborers in Italy, become fat during the grape and fig harvests. They consume freely the sugary juices, and become stout and fat.

We see the same result when our cows feed on sweet sugary grasses, that are consumed while the sugar still remains in all its sweetness and before it has changed to fibrin. We see it in the sugar maple, that in some way develops a sugary fluid for the growth of the coming foliage. The sugar disappears as soon as the leaves begin to grow and fit themselves for the duties of the year.

And the query comes, what lesson may we learn from this state of things but that sweet food produces fat and rapid growth? Such feeding may not always change to fat, but it may to milk, so that we have the richest, most creamy milk in June, when the grasses are sugary and nutritious.—Prarie Farmer.

There is now building in the Baldwin Works, Philadelphia, a locomotive designed to be the fastest in the world, and intended to do eighty miles an hour without taking in water. It will be taken to Europe and tested on the railroads of England and the Continent.

THE NORTH AMERICAN REVIEW

[illegible] present in its February number, to be published on the 15th of the present month, Part III. of its series of articles on "The Christian Religion." It will be from the pen of Geo. P. Fisher, the eminent professor of ecclesiastical history in the Yale Divinity School,—as thorough a scholar and as able a defender of the Christian faith as this country affords. A powerful presentation of the claims of Christianity is expected.

THE LITERARY "REBELLION."

Mr. John B. Alden, who organized the "Literary Revolution," which has given the people the best of books at such wonderfully low prices, does not give up the fight with the failure of "The American Book Exchange," which failure, he claims, was in no respect the result of selling books too cheaply, but was caused by the combination of publishers and booksellers against the enterprise; infamous and baseless slander being scattered broadcast culminated in a "panic" among the creditors of the institution, causing a "run" which [illegible]ed in the failure of the company, just as it has often caused the failure of banks or other institutions perfectly solvent under ordinary conditions. He and other friends of the enterprise have organized "The Useful Knowledge Publishing Company," and a Literary Rebellion which proposes to carry on the fight. The first work published by the new company is a beautiful edition of Macaulay's "Life of Frederick the Great," which they sell for the marvelously low price of 20 cents, neatly bound in cloth. The company proposes to begin immediately the publication of a series of cyclopædias—one of history, one of biography, one of science, one of choice prose literature, one of poetry, and one of religious literature—each of which cyclopædias will be in several large, octavo volumes of over 1000 pages each, at the price of $1.25 per volume, in cloth binding and will also be published in numbers, at only two cents per number, being considerably below even the "revolution" prices! They will send specimen pages and catalogues free, and friends of choice literature at low prices will be sure to shower them with postal cards, at least. Address The Useful Knowledge Publishing Company, 162 William Street, New York.

The Sanitary Engineer.

1882. VOLUME FIVE. 1882.

The recognized authority on all matters relating to public health Food and Drug adulteration, Drainage and Water Supply, Steam and Hot Water Heating, Plumbing and Gas Fitting, Gas and Electric Lighing, Heating and ventilation.

Questions on any of these sunjects will be answered in the columns of the Sanitary Engineer, free of charge. The opinions of this journal upon all technical subjects are prepared or revised by specialists.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

Our excellent technical contemporary The Sanitary Engineer, by the by is hereafter to be published weekly, a token of prosperity that is especially gratifying as a proof of public appreciation of the very useful work which our contemporary has done for the public.—New York World.

This journal has become the leading authority upon sanitary questions.—Ohio Medical Journal.

The Sanitary Engineer shows an excellent appreciation of what may be done in the field of sanitary engineering and a practical capibility for doing it.—New York Tribune

The excellent paper published in this city, and called the Sanitary Engineer, might add to its title that of practical philanthropist, for such it proves itself to be in its constant and clear exposures of the wrongs and dangers of many of our municipal arrangements—Harper's Weekly.

Prof. Chandler, when delivering a popular and most telling lecture on sanitation, lately at Cooper Institute, advised his hearers to subscribe for the Sanitary Engineer, a publication devoted to sanitation in all its phrases. It contains the best thoughts of the best trained sanitarians of the period.—Congregationist.

Mr John Walter of the London Times has addressed a letter to the editor of the Sanitary Engineer, of this city, requesting an opinion as to the system of ventilating sewers by perforations or open gratings in the streets. The compliment paid to American Sanitary Engineering by Mr Walter's letter, is most flattering; but that it is deserved will not be questioned by those familiar with the merits of the authority Mr Walter consulted.—New York Com'l Advertiser.

The Sanitary Engineer is for sale by all newsdealers in the United States and Canada. Single copies 7 cents. Terms, three dollars per year, in advance, postage paid. Published every Thursday at 140 William Street, New York.

THE report is current in New York that Superintendent of public Works Dutcher will be appointed postmaster in New York city.

SENATOR Lynde has introduced a bill to amend the game laws, and specifies that any one can take possession of implements of illegal fishing and hunting or stop the same by any process of law afterwards.

Superintendent Phelps of the D. L. & W. Railroad has issued an order to the effect that train No. 7 will wait at Syracuse but 15 minutes for the New York Central trains. This is the train which leaves Syracuse at 2:10 p. m. and arrives at Fulton at 3:08 p. m.

THE comptroller of the currency has called upon the national banks for a report showing their condition on the 31st of December, 1881. We wonder how many unfavorable reports the comptroller will receive? But few murderers confess their guilt until the gallows stare them in the face.

GUITEAU'S brother-in-law and counsel, Scoville, has been offered $1,000 for the dead body of the assassin, and it is said will accept the offer and use the money to pay the assassin's debts. The purchaser runs the risk of Guiteau's not being hanged. Guiteau thinks it a grand scheme but says he will bring a larger price.

THE FULTON TIMES indulged in a little comment last week regarding a rumor to make Hon. J. Mason his own successor. The Oswego Express sees in this a deeply laid conspiracy to return a man to congress who has disregarded its wishes. We struck a tender chord in our neighbor and his extreme sensitiveness has been clearly shown. When the state has been redistricted we will be able to produce fact instead of rumor.

WHEN a bright looking boy rang the bell the bell the other day and asked the Rev. W. H. Bacher to lend his dictionary a moment for two men to settle a dispute about the spelling of a word, the clergymen obligingly did so. These were the last words he ever had with that boy. He did not bring back the dictionary, and complaints at police headquarters showed that he had been holding his "spelling bees" in all parts of the city, and that he had got up a "corner" in quarto dictionaries in Brooklyn.

John Dunn, of Oswego made an assignment last Saturday for the benefit of his creditors. His liabilities are placed at 109,000, anc his assets about $40,000. He was engaged in the matting business. The principal creditors are: First National Bank of Oswego, $10,000; Second National Bank of Oswego $10,000; Failing & Pratt, about $5,000; E. G. Jones, $5,000; Smith, Murdock & Co., about $5,000; First National Bank of Syracuse, $10,000; and one Berron, of New York, $20,000.

His heavy and unfortunate deal in stocks and grain during the months of November and December, have ruined him. He invested largely in wheat, corn, pork and railroad stocks, and the value of his investment has shrunk about $100,000. Since the 15th of December Mr. Dunn says he has lost $80,000. Two years ago he was worth about $185,000.

A Noctural Ramble and what Came of It

Some genius—we suspect him to belong to the jovial order of humanity—has said: "The day to drone and dream, the night to learn and ramble." We do not propose to dispute this worthy's view of the matter, but present herewith the experience of a Philadelphia journalist, Mr. William H. Cunnington, 1712 North Twentieth street, one of whose noctural rambles he thus refers to, beginning his narration rather peculiarly, however: "I am not a rheumatic and have been troubled very little with bodily pains. Last Tuesday morning I experienced a very annoying stiffness in the neck, which grew worse as the day wore on. Toward evening it became very severe, and I could scarcely turn my head in any direction. Arriving home at tea time, it was with difficulty that I could eat my meal. My wife wanted to rub my neck with St Jacob's Oil, but I refused, saying I thought the affliction would soon pass away. Tea over, against the remonstrance of my family, I left home to ramble toward the new Chestnut street Opera House, about 2 and a half miles from my residence. I started in the midst of a heavy snow storm, and remained at the theater until the close of the performance, although I could feel my neck getting worse and becoming very painful. Leaving the play the trouble came to reach home. The storm continued; the car which I was in became blocked in nearly every square, a cold current of air swept through the car, and I did not reach home until 3 a. m., by which time my neck had become perfectly rigid. Then I consented to the use of St. Jacob's Oil which my wife applied two or three times before I arose. I continued its use that day and by evening I was free from pain, and the next morning I twisted myself by twisting my [illegible] in any direction that [illegible] not a vestige of stiffness remains."

[illegible]

[illegible] BY A [illegible]

An unusual article from the Rochester N. Y. Democrat and Chronicle, was republished in this paper and was a subject of much conversation both in professional circles and on the street. Apparently it caused even more commotion in Rochester, as the following from the same paper shows:

Dr. J. B. Henion, who is well known not only in Rochester but in nearly every part of America, sent an extended article to this paper, a few days since which was duly published, [illegible] his remarkable experience [illegible] rescue from what seemed a certain [illegible]. It would be impossible to [illegible] the personal enquiries which have been made at our office as to the validity of the article but they have been so numerous that further investigation of the subject was deemed an editorial necessity.

With this end in view a representative of this paper called on Dr. Henion at his residence on [illegible] street, when the following interview occurred:

"That article of yours has created quite a whirlwind. Are the statements about the terrible condition you were in and the way you were rescued such as you can sustain?"

"Every one of them and many additional ones. Few people ever get so near the grave as I did and then return, and I am not surprised that the public think it marvelous. It was marvelous."

"How in the world did you, a physician, come to be brought so low?"

"By neglecting the first and most simple symptoms. I did not think I was sick. It is true I had frequent headaches; felt tired most of the time; could eat nothing one day and was ravenous the next; felt dull, indefinite pains and my stomach was out of order; but I did not think it meant anything serious."

"But have these common ailments anything to do with the fearful Bright's disease which took so firm a hold on you?"

"Anything? Why, they are the sure indications of the first stages of that dreadful malady. The fact is, few people know or realize what ails them, and I am sorry to say that too few physicians do either."

"This is a strange statement, Doctor.

"But it is a true one. The medical profession have been treating symptoms instead of diseases for years and it is high time it ceased. We doctors have been clipping the twigs when we should strike at the root. The symptoms I have just mentioned or any unusual irritations or action of the water channels indicate the approach of Bright's disease even more than a cough announces the coming of consumption. We do not treat the cough but try to help the lungs, We should not waste our time trying to relieve the headache, stomach, pains about the body or other symptoms but go directly to the kidneys, the source of these ailments."

"This then is what you meant when you said that one-half the deaths which occur arise from Bright's disease, is it Doctor?"

"Precisely. Thousands of so-called diseases are torturing people to-day, when in reality it is Bright's disease in some one of its many forms. It is a Hydra headed monster, and the slightest symptoms should strike terror to every one who has them. I can look back and recall hundreds of deaths which physicians declared at the time were caused by paralysis, apoplexy, heart disease, pneumonia, malarial fever and other common complaints which I see now were caused by Bright's disease."

"And did all these cases have simple symptoms at first?"

"Every one of them, and might have been cured as I was by the timely use of the same remedy—Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure. I am getting my eyes thoroughly opened in this matter and think I am helping others to see the facts and their possible danger also. Why, there are no end of truths bearing on this subject. If you want to know more about it go and see Mr. Warner himself. He was sick the same as I and is the healthiest man in Rochester to-day. He has made a study of this subject and can give you more facts than I can. Go, too, and see Dr. Lattimore, the chemist at the University. If you want facts there are any quantity of them showing the alarming increase of Bright's disease, its simple and deceptive symptoms, and that there is but one way by which it can be escaped."

Fully satisfied of the truth and force of the Doctor's words, the reporter bade him good day and called on Mr. Warner at his establishment on Exchange street. At first Mr Warner was inclined to be reticent, but learning that the information desired was about the alarming increase of Bright's disease his manner changed instantly and he spoke very earnestly:

"It is true that Bright's disease has increased wonderfully, and we find, by reliable statistics, that in the past ten years its growth has been 250 per cent. Look at the prominent men it has carried off: Everett, Sumner, Chase, Wilson, Carpenter, Bishop Haven and others. This is terrible and shows a greater growth than that of any other complaint. It must be plain to every one that something must be done to check this increase or there is no knowing where it may end."

"Do you think many people are afflicted with it to-day who do not realize it, Mr. Warner?"

"Hundreds of thousands I have a striking example of this truth which has just come to my notice. A prominent professor in a New Orleans medical college was lecturing before his class on the subject of Bright's disease. He had various fluids under microscopic analysis and was showing the students what the indications of this terrible malady were. In order to draw the contrast between the healthy and the unhealthy fluids he had provided a vial the contents of which were drawn from his own person. 'And now gentlemen' he said, 'as we have seen the unhealthy indications, I will show you how it appears in a state of perfect health' and he submitted his own fluid to the usual test. As he watched the results his countenance suddenly changed—his color and command both left him and in a trembling voice he said: 'Gentlemen, I have made a painful discovery; I have Bright's disease of the kidneys' and in less than a year he was dead."

"You believe then that it has no symptoms of its own and is frequently unknown even by the person who is afflicted with it?"

"It has no symptoms of its own and very often none at all. Usually no two people have the same symptoms, and frequently death is the first symptom. The slightest indication of any kidney difficulty should be enough to strike terror to any one. I know what I am talking about for I have been through all the stages of kidney disease."

"You know of Dr. Henion's case?"

"Yes, I have both read and heard of it."

"It is very wondeful is it not?"

"A very prominent case but no more so than a great many others that have come to my notice as having been cured by the same means."

"You believe then that Bright's disease can be cured?"

"I know it can. I know it from the experience of hundreds of prominent persons who were given up to die by both their physicians and friends."

"You speak of your experience, what was it?"

"A fearful one. I had felt languid and unfitted for business for years. But I did not know what ailed me. When [illegible] and Liver Cure."

"And this caused you to manufacture it?"

"No, it caused me to investigate. I went to the principal cities with Dr. Craig, the discoverer, and saw the physicians prescribing and using it and saw that Dr. Craig was unable with his facilities, to supply the medicine to thousands who wanted it. I therefore determined, as a duty I owed humanity and the suffering, to bring it within their reach and now it is known in every part of America, is sold in every drug store and has become a household necessity."

The reporter left Dr. Warner, much impressed with the earnestness and sincerity of his statements and next paid a visit to Dr. S. A. Lattimore at his residence on Prince Street. Dr. Lattimore, although busily engaged upon some matters connected with the State Board of Health, of which he is one of the analysts, courteously answered the questions that were propounded him:

"Did you make a chemical analysis of the case of Mr. H. H. Warner some three years ago, Doctor?"

"Yes, sir."

"What did this anlysis show you?"

"The presence of albumen and tube casts in great abundance."

"And what did the symptoms indicate?"

"A serious disease of the kidneys."

"Did you think Mr. Warner could recover?"

"No, sir. I did not think it possible. It was seldom, indeed, that so pronounced a case had, up to that time, ever been cured."

"Do you know anything about the remedy which cured him?"

"Yes, I have chemically analyzed it and upon critical analysis find it entirely free from any poisonous or deleterious substances."

We publish the foregoing statements in view of the commotion which the publicity of Dr. Henion's article has caused and to meet the protestations made. The standing of Dr. Henion, Mr. Warner and Dr. Lattimore in the community is beyond question and the statements they make, cannot for a moment be doubted. They conclusively show that Bright's disease of the kidneys is one of the most deceptive and dangerous of all diseases, that it is exceedingly common, alarmingly increasing and that it can be cured.

Court Notice.

I HEREBY order and appoint the following Terms of County Court and Court of Sessions in and for Oswego Co., during the year 1882 and until further ordered: There will be a Petit Jury for each term for the trial of questions of fact, criminal and civil. The following from the LaFayette, (Ind.) Sunday Times refers to a gentleman who has many relatives and friends in this vicinity.

On the evening of the 15th inst. about thirty members of the Brothehood of Locomotive Engineers with their families assembled at the Lodge Room on North Fourth streeth. The most enjoyable incident of the evening was the presentation by the members to their chief, Elisha Candee, of a very beautiful and substantial gold headed cane. Mr. Cale Remmel, of the Ft. Wayne Lodge, made the presentation speech in words most fitly spoken. The heartfelt and affecting answer of the recipient demonstrated the high appreciation which he had of the gift and of his brother Engineers. After the cane presentation Mrs. Joseph Watkins, in excellent and amusing original poetic rhyme, presented in behalf of the wives of the Engineers, another gift to Mr. C., which was concealed by a napkin until her presentation remarks were ended, when she disclosed to the astonished veteran Engineer an apple pie. In explanation it is proper to state that Mr. C. has a remarkable weakness for apple pie and the lunch can that accompanies him on his run to Danville is always well filled with the article mentioned for desert.

The long pending difficulty between Dennison and Rogers, of Hannibal, regarding the office of school trustee, has been decided by State Supt. Gilmour, in favor of the former.

The widow of Capt. Doran has received from the Oswego shade cloth company, a check for her husband's wages to April 1 next, being the end of his year. The company asked her by letter to send them a statement of the funeral expenses which they intend to pay.

Occurs an opportunity to buy a model farm at an immense sacrifice. The Keller farm containing 177 acres, situated two and one half miles south of Fulton is offered for sale at the astonishingly low price of $30 per acre, good buildings and fair fences, never failing brook running through whole length of farm. Land slightly undulating, very fertile easy to cultivate and pleasantly situated. Fulton is acknowledged to be the most thriving and beautiful village in the State, numbering about 5,000 inhabitants The close proximity of this farm to the village makes it for a milk and dairy farm or for gardening purposes the most desirable farm in the whole state. It can be advantageously divided into two or more parts. Will sell on terms that will enable a wide-awake farmer to pay for the same out of the products in a short time. Call or address for terms or information office of THE FULTON TIMES, or Mrs. E. J. KELLER 25 Seymour street, Syracuse, N. Y.

Song of the
ROYAL ST. JOHN

A saint come to every home
And with my presence cheery,
I banish care and burdens bear,
Of women, worn and weary.

I run so light, and look so bright,
The ladies dote upon me,
No noise I make, no threads I break,
Though back and forth you run me.

Through every kind of goods I go,
Silk, muslin, cloth and leather;
Though all machines refuse to sew
Yet I sew on forever.

No heads I pain, no eyes I strain,
To find the way to thread me,
No holes have I, save needles eye
To make a cause to dread me,

I'm cheap and good and if you should
But for a moment doubt me,
Be sure and try, and then you'll buy
And never be without me.

I seam, I hem, I fell I bind,
I ruffle, tuck and gather;
And all machines I leave behind,
While I sew on forever.

We learn that the projected road from Syracuse to Oswego, organized by the Burt interest, is preparing for operations. They are laying dywn timber for a bridge at Three River Point. The talk now is of building an independent line clear through, the conditions asked by the N. Y. O. & W. Ry. for use of their road being unsatisfactory. The proposition is reported now to be to build down on the east side of the river to Minetto, crossing there by a bridge and coming into this city on the west side.

A saloon belonging to James Hall, a colored saloon keeper at Sodus Point, was burned Friday evening. It was erected on piles and projected on to the lake. Hall's body was found in the lake Wednesday morning with the head and limbs burned off. A club found in the vicinity covered with blood and a bloody slipper go to show that he was probably murdered for his money. A few days previous to his death he was seen to have twenty-two hundred dollars and that strengthens the theory that he was murdered for his money, the house set fire and Hall then burned. Coronor Pitkin, of Palmyra held an inquest Monday.

An old Landmark Gone. Was it Incendiarism? Insurance. Rebuilding.

At 5:50 p. m. Thursday an alarm of fire was sounded, caused by the issuance of smoke from the south-east corner of the Presbyterian church. An investigation revealed that fire was rapidly making its way up the side of the church between the lath and clapboards. The fire occurred at that time of the evening when people are going home from workshops and manufactories and in a short time the streets were alive with bustling men active in lending a hand to save the imperilled property.

The fire department responded quickly to the call but before a stream was fairly upon the building the flames had made such headway that its complete destruction seemed imminent. A gentle east wind, assisted by the firemen, kept the fire from communicating with the session room and that with the east end of the church will stand. From the pulpit to the entrance the church was completely gutted.

Dr. Hall's residence on the south, only separated by a narrow driveway, was by hard work saved. The house is occupied by Dr. Hall and family and Mr. P. F. and O. P. Conger and families. The household goods were all removed into the street. The sides of the church are left standing.

Brands of fire were wafted on to the roof of the Clark house and adjoining buildings and at one time the destruction of surrounding buildings appeared to be inevitable.

The good condition of the fire apparatus and superior judgment used by department officers was never more thoroughly exhibited and feelingly appreciated.

The insurance upon the church was $4,000; $2,000 in the Hartford and $2,000 in the Insurance Co., of North America. The organ and church fixtures were insured for $2,500. The aggregate insurance is considerably below the loss.

Thursday afternoon the church was occupied by people selecting pews, at the expiration of which the organist remained to practice and the janitor, Mr. Ferris, was engaged about his duties in various parts of the church. The organist left about fifteen minutes previous to the alarm, and the janitor had only reached Robinson & Whitaker's grocery when the alarm sounded. When he left no smoke or fire was visible and returning immediately upon the sound of the alarm flames were issuing from the part above described.

The general opinion seems to point to incendiarism, and that theory is certainly strengthened from the fact that an effort was recently made to fire an isolated portion of the same structure.

The huge bell melted and out of the ruins relic hunters dug small pieces that resembled ore to be preserved as mementos of a faithful servant. The church was erected in 1844.

The M. E. society kindly placed their church at the disposal of the Presbyterians and services were held there at 3:30 p. m. Sunday.

No definite steps have been taken as to rebuilding, or place secured for future meetings. A meeting will be held to-morrow evening and some action will be taken as to the future. As soon as the insurance adjusters arrange matters and all outstanding accounts against the society are paid they will be able to take into consideration the subject of rebuilding.

Rev. Henry Lake Dead.

Rev. Henry Lake, an old resident of Granby and a man well known in this whole community, died suddenly at Otisco, Onondaga Co., Sunday of heart disease by which he has been visibly affected for many years and which he has often expressed as would be the means of his death. Mr. Lake was a peculiar man in many respects. He was an itinerant preacher, a ready and fluent speaker; and would often go about the country lecturing upon various subjects to vast assemblages of people. He was also somewhat noted as a phrenologist. He was reputed to be quite wealthy but avoided any permanent residence to escape taxation. Mr. Lake was a powerfully built man over six feet tall and of commanding presence. He was over 72 years of age. His remains were brought to Fulton and taken to the residence of his brother in Oswego Falls. Funeral services will be held to-day at 2 p. m. at the M. E. church, Rev. E. C. Bruce officiating.

John Bell, of Syracuse, attempted to commit suicide Saturday, by taking laudanum. He was probably thwarted in his design on account of an overdose. He is a man of good family, his relatives and friends being prominent in New York and New Jersey. Two years ago he married Emma Tilly, of Memphis, the daughter of a wealthy farmer. He has for some time been very dissipated and the other day, his wife left him on this account and also on account of abuse. It is supposed that this prompted the attempt. John swears he will never grasp the flowing bowl again. John Bell and Emma Tilly were married in this village something over a year ago. Emma was fifteen years old and ran away from home, the circumstances at the time being recorded in this paper.

Mr. L. S. Worden, an old and respected citizen of this village, was last Thursday prostrated with a nervous disease. His condition is reported as more favorable this p. m.

The Presbyterian society held services in the M. E. church Sunday afternoon. Rev J. S. Riggs preached from the text: "Ye see the distress that we are in; how Jerusalem lieth waste and the gates thereof are burned with fire. Come let us build up the wall of Jerusalem. So they strengthened their hands for the good work." The sermon was applicable to the society's misfortune and was well delivered.

Crushed to Death

An accident occurred in Syracuse Monday that will cause a feeling of sorrow to connect itself with its history wherever told.

Some time since a building burned on West Genesee street and the walls were left standing. Investigation was made as to their security—they looked strong. Adjoining the west wall was a saloon and restaurant owned by Cornelius Tracey and in this place were twelve or fifteen strangers eating dinner when, without warning the west wall of the burned building came tumbling in with a terrible crash killing three of the people at the table, mortally wounding two and seriously injuring the other occupants. The roof and walls of the restaurant crushed like paper and the inmates were hurled with terrible force into the cellar and buried beneath a pile of brick.

The fire department were called out and labored late into the night in extricating the dead and dying.

The dead are James Fitzgerald, aged seventeen, and Patrick Caine, aged nineteen of Amber, Onondaga Co., and Martin Finlon aged nineteen of Marcellus Onondaga county.

The wreck has been cleared up and no more bodies have been found. There is some doubt in Syracuse as to who is responsible for the condition of the wall and the subsequent loss of life. Under the charter and ordinances of the city of Syracuse, neither the chief of the fire department nor the fire commissioners have any duties or responsibility in the matter whatever. The city charter however, declares the common council shall order unsafe or dangerous walls to be torn down or removed.

WHO WAS IT?

William Kendrick, told a Courier reporter that he was in the barroom at the time of the accident and claims that he saw a woman sitting near a stove in the restaurant when the building collapsed. She was from Fulton and has not yet been seen.

Deaths.

Mrs. N. Hart aged 82, died at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. B. R. Howe, in this village Saturday. Services were held at the house yesterday, Rev. J. S. Riggs officiating. The remains were taken to Lysander for interment.

Chas. Laws an old resident of this village died at his home in the Upper Landing last Thursday, aged 62 years, of consumption. Funeral was held from the house Sunday at 2 p. m. Rev. L. Golden of the Baptist church officiating.

Rebecca J., wife of Daniel Morfa died at her home in this village last evening aged 55 years. Mrs. Morfa had been sick but a week and her death casts a gloom over a large circle of friends and acquaintances. Funeral services will be held to-morrow at 2 p. m., at the house. Rev. E. Moyses of Zion church will officiate.

John H. Case died in this village yesterday morning, at the residence of his mother in the Wilcox block, Cayuga street, aged 25 years. He was attacked about a week ago with inflammation of the brain and in spite of the best medical attendance his case proved hopeless. Funeral will be held to-morrow at 1 p.m. from his late residence. Rev E. C. Bruce of the M. E. Church will deliver the funeral sermon.

The Rentz Minstrels.

The Rentz Minstrel Company will give an entertainment in Nichols Hall, Saturday evening, Jan. 14. This company has bten in Fulton before and is always greeted with full houses. The following is from the Cincinnatti Inquirer:

"Last evening the Rentz Minstrel Company gave an amusing and enjoyable performance at the Grand Opera House. The house was packed, and this fact indicates that all must have been expecting an extraordinary and unusually fine entertainment. In this there could not have been a single spectator disappointed, for while there was a most laughable burlesque and a genuine variety of attractions, the entertainment was in no sense a 'variety show.' Free from all objectionable features, such as slang and vulgarity, the Company's rendition of a fine programme of mirth and music was exceptionally entertaining to an audience largely composed of people of good taste. As a burlesque combination with some of the best novelties given upon the stage, the Rentz Minstrel Company is a genuine success, and will always receive a hearty welcome in this city."

SPECIAL COLLECTOR'S NOTICE.

Having volunteered to collect the taxes for the town of Volney for the present year and give the entire net proceeds of the office of Collector to the widow of the late Hiram Bradway who was elected Collector at the town meeting, I would respectfully ask the tax payers to assist me in this work by prompt payment at my store that it may be well and quickly done and thus avoid all unnecessary inconvenience in the matter. Respectfully,
Jan. 11, 1882. R. E. Phillips.

Who is Boss?

It seems that last Thursday night, on the occasion of the burning of the Presbyterian church, a number of our citizens who were not connected with the Fire Department nor the church persisted in giving orders contradictory to those of our chief engineer, Newell H. Gilbert, and on being spoken to by the chief and requested not to interfere, they did not heed him. Now if such be the case, and this one and that one has the right to issue such orders, where is the necessity of having a chief engineer, and what is he for? These orders given by persons having no power whatever only confuse the men in trying to quelch the flames, and they are unable to work in harmony and work together. We think it advisable for such proceedings to be done away with. No one can say aught against our chief engineer in the manner which he has conducted the fire department, and he has done himself great credit, and if he has the power to control the men of the department, which he certainly has, why not let him continue to have the same, and why interfere?

Mrs. Laura Tremblay of Baldwinsville was discovered in the river at Baldwinsville Sunday night at 11:30 clinging to the ice and calling for help. She had wandered on the ice in her sleep and awoke when the ice broke and let her through. She was removed and properly cared for.

From various towns in the county we hear of a person engaged in selling a substance in powdered form, claimed to be a certain preventive to kerosene explosions. The vender of this article regulates his price accoading to the credulity or purse of the purchaser. We hear of some who have paid him as high as four dollars for a package, while in the same neighborhood others have bought it for three dollars, two dollars and as low as seventy-five cents. It is hardly necessary to say that any substance claimed to be a safeguard against kerosene explosion is a swindle. The quality of the oil is the only safeguard.

The concert given by Prof. Hinton and the choir of the First Presbyterian church of Syracuse, for the benefit of No. 1 school in Nichols hall last evening was a grand success. The hall was filled with an intelligent and appreciative audience and the selections were rendered in a superior manner. The exercises by the scholars were executed promptly and with the utmost satisfaction to the auditors. Prof. Simpson has engaged Chancellor Sims of Syracuse University to deliver a lecture at an early day announcement of which will be made next week.

A Valuable Invention.

Mr. William E. Taylor of this village has invented and is now securing a patent on a "Diagonal Pulp Engine" to be used in the manufacture of paper. It is considered a valuable piece of work by the paper making fraternity and several are being successfully used at present. They are in operation in several places in Canada, one in Phœnix this county, two in Bennington, Vt., and the mill being erected in Fulton by Weeks & Redhead will put in one. People conversant with mechanical contrivances bespeak for the "Diagonal Pulp Engine" a welcome place in every mill in the country.

Friday's Oswego Palladium says:

Judge R. H. Tyler's will was filed today. He bequeaths to his son, Ransom Frederick, all interest, and right in real estate in Oneonta, Otsego county, during his life and at his death to his heirs, unless he should think best to dispose of it and the executors join in the conveyance. To his wife all the rest of his property, real and personal. What is left of said property to go to the son Ransom Frederick Tyler, at his mother's death. He states that since his son started out for himself or for his benefit he has advanced him at different times in the aggregate over $5,000, which was one reason he did not see fit to make a more liberal provision for him in the will. He appoints his wife executrix and Dewitt Gardner, executor. The will was writteu by Judge Tyler himself, dated February 19, 1880. Amos Youmans and J. A. Foster were the witnesses.

[illegible] rooms [illegible] the following resolutions were unanimously adopted:

Whereas, A worthy and beloved member of Division No. 17 of the Sons of Temperance, sister Anna Hamilton, having died in peace Dec. 27th, 1881, we desire to place on our permanent records an expression of the sense of our loss, and our estimate of her worth, character and labors in the temperance reform, therefore,

Resolved, 1.—That in the removal of sister Hamilton from our number, we have met with an irreparable loss, and that we are reminded anew, that, whatever may be our relations, and our work in this life, "It is appointed unto men once to die."

2.—That the pure character of our departed sister, and her disinterested and untiring zeal in relieving suffering, in rescuing the fallen, and in carrying forward the temperance reform, have so impressed our hearts, that we will never falter in our imitation of the self denying work.

3.—That as an outward expression of the sense of our bereavements we will drape our charter and badges in mourning for thirty days.

4.—That, a copy of this be furnished for publication in the village papers.

WILLIAM HILL,
ALONZO L. HATCH,
R. B. McCULLY.

Whereas, Our Heavenly Father in his Divine Wisdom has suddenly removed from earthly life our sister Sarah Darrow Arnold in the bloom and glory of her youth, and when human ties seemed hardest to sever; while we bow with reverent submission to His will it is fitting that we give some expression of our esteem and affection and sorrow for our loss.

It is therefore resolved by the Division, That we extend to the family and immediate relatives and friends of sister Arnold assurance of our sincerest sympathy in their bereavement and mourn with them for the loss of one whom lovelines of character endeared her to all who knew her.

Resolved, That we will ever cherish the memory of our departed sister, remembering with particular pride and affection the zeal she manifested in the cause of temperance and the welfare of our order and Division.

Resolved, That as a slight tribute of respect the hall of our Division and official lodges shall be draped in mourning for thirty days.

Resolved, That the resolutions shall be entered in the minutes of this Division, and be published in the village papers and copies sent to the father, mother and husband of sister Arnold.

Books and Papers.

The Syracuse Courier, recently enlarged has dropped quietly back to its old size, the rush for holiday advertising having subsided. Inflated or contracted the courier is a newsy sheet.

The first number of the Attica News unner the management of E. D. Deming is received. It is well gotten up and he promises his readers a good paper. We hope he may meet with flattering success in his new field.

The Baldwinsville Gazette announces that Mr. Harvey S. Green of Albany, brother of its present proprietor, will take a hand in its conduct. The Gazette is a well conducted journal and is growing in frvor every day.

The firm of McGrath & Ackert, of the Rhinebeck Gazette has dissolved. Mr. T. P. McGrath continuing the publication of the paper. The Gazette is a first-class news-paper and Mr. McGrath a thorough journalist. Success.

There are few people but who have heard of Puck. Puck's annual for 1882, has made its appearance. It is brimfull of pleasantries and any one will be well repaid by perusing it. Send 25 cents to the office of Puck, 25 Warren street, New York and get a copy.

Sibley's seed catalogue and floral guide for 1882 is received. It is the most complete work of its kind ever issued and contains a fine steel engraving of the founder of the house Hiram Sibley. Send to Hiram Sibley, Rochester and procure the book. It is also replete with floral knowledge.

Under the musical editorship of Mr. Louis C. Elson, several of Boston's most eminent composers are writing music for WIDE AWAKE, to accompany the finest poems of the English poets. In the January Wide Awake, George L. Osgood Christina Rossetti's "Christmas Carol" a beautiful setting, while in the February number Mr. Elson himself writes the music for Shelley's "To a Skylark." A daughter of Senator Dawes will have an article in the February Wide Awake, entitled "Hammer of the Gentiles."

We have received the "Star" almanac for 1882. It is the most comprehensive work of the kind ever published. It contains a mass of statistical matter in relation to the City, State and Nation, arranged in a brief, intelligent manner, together with a summary of the important events of the year, as well as a large amount of useful, practical information, which makes it a hand-book of daily reference to the banker, merchant, politician and to every observing citizen.

Notwithstanding its many improvements, the price has been fixed at 10 cents. Sent by mail, postage paid, to any address on receipt of price. Address, New York Star, 24, 26 and 28 North William St., New York City.

THE SUN.

NEW YORK, 1882.

THE SUN for 1882 will make its fifteenth annual revolution under the present management, shining, as always, for all, big and little, mean and gracious, contented and unhappy, Republican and Democratic, depraved and virtuous, intelligent and obtuse. The Sun's light is for mankind and womankind of every sort; but its genial warmth is for the good, while it pours hot discomfort on the blistering backs of the persistently wicked.

The Sun of 1868 was a newspaper of a new kind. It discarded many of the forms, and a multitude of the superfluous words and phrases of ancient journalism. It undertook to report in a fresh, succinct, unconventional way all the news of the world, omitting no event of human interest, and commenting upon affairs with the fearlessness of absolute independence. The success of this experiment was the success of The Sun. It effected a permanent change in the style of American newspapers. Every important journal established in this country in the dozen years past has been modelled after The Sun. Every important journal already existing has been modified and bettered by the force of the Sun's example.

The Sun of 1882 will be the same outspoken, truthtelling, and interesting newspaper.

By a liberal use of the means which an abundant prosperity affords, we shall make it better than ever before.

We shall print all the news, putting it in readable shape, and measuring its importance, not by the traditional yardstick, but by its real interest to the people. Distance from Printing House Square is not the first consideration with The Sun. Whenever anything happens worth reporting we get the particulars whether it happens in Brooklyn or in Bokhara.

In politics we have decided opinions; and are accustomed to express them in language that can be understood. We say what we think about men and events. That habit is the only secret of success of The Sun's political course.

The Weekly Sun gathers into eight pages the best matter of the seven daily issues. An Agricultural Department of unequalled merit, full market reports and a liberal proportion of literary scientific and domestic intelligence complete The Weekly Sun, and make it the best newspaper for the farmer's household that was ever printed.

Who does not know and read and like The Sunday Sun, each number of which is a Golconda of interesting literature, with the best poetry of the day, prose every line worth reading, news, humor —matter enough to fill a good sized book, and infinitely more varied and entertaining than any book, big or little?

If our idea of what a newspaper should be pleases you, send for The Sun.

Our terms are as follows:

For the daily Sun, a four page sheet of twenty-eight columns, the price by mail, post paid, is 55 cents a month, or $6.50 a year; or, including the Sunday paper, an eight page sheet of fifty-six columns, the price is 65 cents per month, or $7 70 a year, postage paid.

The Sunday edition of The Sun is also furnished separately at $1.20 a year, postage paid.

The price of the Weekly Sun, eight pages, fifty-six columns, is $1 a year, postage paid. For clubs of ten sending $10 we will send an extra copy free.

RESCUED FROM DEATH

William J. Coughlin of Somerville, Mass, says: In the fall of 1876 I was taken with bleeding of the lungs followed by a severe cough. I lost my appetite and flesh and was confined to my bed. In 1877 I was admitted to the hospital. The doctors said I had a hole in my lung as big as a half dollar. At one time a report went around that I was dead. It gave up hope, but a friend told me of DR WILLIAM HALL'S BALSAM FOR THE LUNGS. I got a bottle, when to my surprise I began to feel better, and to-day I feel better than for three years past.

"I write this hoping every one afflicted with diseased Lungs will take DR WILLIAM HALL'S BALSAM and be convinced that CONSUMPTION CAN BE CURED. I can positively say it has done more good than all the other medicines I have taken since my sickness.

A Forest of Stone Trees.

From twenty to thirty-five miles from Denver, between Cherry Creek and Running Creek, the Denver and New Orleans rail road forces struck an unusual obstruction, it being nothing less than a buried forest. The trees are all petrified and agatized, are of all sizes, and lie buried at various depths, from ten to twenty-five feet, which is as deep as any excavations were made by the workmen. They came upon these relics of a by-gone age in at least half a dozen localities, and have met with not a little difficulty on their account. The trees are nearly perfect, and could be taken out whole if suitable machinery were employed. [Denver Times.

TO CONSUMPTIVES.

"Golden Medical Discovery" is a concentrated, potent alterative, or blood-cleansing remedy, that wins golden opinions from all who use it for any humor, from the common pimple, blotch, or eruption, to the formidable scrofulous swelling, or ulcer. Internal fever, soreness and ulceration, yield to its benign influences. Consumption, which is but a scrofulous affection of the lungs, may in its early stages, be cured by a free use of this God-given remedy. See article on consumption and its treatment in Part III. of the World's Dispensary Dime Series of pamphlets, costs two stamps post-paid. Address World's Dispensary Medical Association. Buffalo, N. He Failed to Purchase.

Never go away from home to buy your clothes. A Quincy man was in St. Louis last week, and he concluded he would buy an overcoat. So he went into a clothing store. A saturnine man with a big mouth, royal arch nose and glossy, curled hair approached him from a dark extremity of the clothing emporium.

"Well, mine frient, vat can ve do for you to-day?"

"I want to buy a plum colored overcoat," said the Quincy man affably.

"So! Vell, you shall be feeted right away queek. Isuck! Reach down dot overgoat from de top shelluf."

Isaac did as requested, and laid before the astonished Quincy man a bottle-green ulster.

"But I said," remarked the man, "that I wanted a plum-colored overcoat."

"So! mine frient," said this scion of an ancient race, "dot ish all right—blum-color."

"Do you call that plum-color?" roared the Quincyite.

"Certainly—certainly. Deese be all new style goats. But dot barticular goat vas made for General Grant, and ven it vas made blums vash green."

The Quincy man looked aghast.

"I speak de holy truth, and vill de-[illegible] no ... woman or child. I say [illegible] behind a man's face dot I vould [illegible]..."

"What is [illegible]?" asked the Quincy [illegible]...

All mine, little one, I will shield you
From trouble and labor and care;
I will robe you like some fair princess
And jewels shall gleam in your hair.
These slippers you gave me are perfect.

My darling, I wonder that Heaven
Should give such a treasure to me.

It seems but a moment I've been here,
And now—must I say it?—adieu!

AFTER MARRIAGE.

Oh! Meg, you are heavy—I'm tired!
Go sit on the rocker, I pray.
Your weight seems a hundred and ninety
When you plump down in that sort of a way.
You had better be mending my coat sleeve—
I've spoken about it before—
And I want to finish this novel
—And look over these bills from the store.

This dressing gown acts like the d—l,
These slippers run down in heel,
Strange nothing can ever look decent—
I wish you could know how they feel.
What's this bill from Morgan's? Why surely
It's not for another new dress?
Look here! I'll be a bankrupt ere New Year
Or your store bills will have to grow less.

Eight o'clock! Meg, sew on this button
As soon as you finish that sleeve.
Heigh-ho! I'm so deucedly sleepy,
I'll pile off to bed I believe.

A Mystery Solved.

An old and well known Indian who recently died in Ottawa, Canada, before his death made a confession which entirely cleared up what was a painful mystery for a full half century. Fifty years ago, Nicholas Garland, a pioneer, took a tract of land situated in what is now the town of Beckwith, in the county of Lemark, built a cabin upon it, and proceeded to clear away the dense forest standing upon the tract. At that time he had a wife and one small child, a very pretty little girl named Alice. One day Alice did not return from the edge of the clearing, where she had been playing with two other children; an alarm was raised, and all the woodsmen in the country thereabouts joined in the search, which lasted for many days, but resulted in no clue to the missing child, and the general verdict arrived at by the hunters was that Alice had been carried off and devoured by one of the bears with which the country then abounded. This conclusion seemed to be corroborated by the discovery of some clean small bones a few months afterward in a deep hollow, a couple of miles from Garland's cabin. They were gathered carefully together and buried by the father and mother of Alice near their home, all the people for miles around attending the funeral. The loss of her child, and the terrible strain of the long suspense added to the terrible discovery, broke down the strong constitution of Mrs. Garland, and she died with a broken heart not long after the funeral. Mr. Garland, after his wife's death, became hard and ascetic, never referred to his trouble, never associated with his neighbors, and has ever since lived in the cabin he first built. This old Indian who died a few days ago, however, says that he saw Alice on that day when she was playing with her companions on the clearing, became fascinated with her childish beauty, and carried her away and used her as one of his own in his family. When she became marriageable she was thoroughly Indianized, and her abductor managed to have her married to one of his sons. She is now living in Bruce county and is mother of a large family. She has never shown that she had any recollection of her parents or home, and appears to be happy. The dying Indian said that so well had she been cared for, that he believed no one could now convince her of her real origin, or induce her to change her lot, and he added that no one but himself and the son who married her, was ever made acquainted with her history. The confession is believed to be true and has aroused a profound sensation.

A single trial of the Peerless Worm Specific never yet failed to relieve the baby, and overcome the prejudices of the mother. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately. It not only frees the child from worms, but regulates the stomach and bowels, cures wind colic, corrects acidity, and cures Dysentery Diarrhœa, gives rest and health to the child, and comforts the mother. Try it. No cure, no pay.

The "Ozone" Fraud.

Just at this time there is an announcement of a new agent for the preserving of fruits, meats, provisions, &c., and it has received the euphonious title of ozone. For the benefit of our readers we give the process; Get an air tight box, purchase a pound of sulphur for a few cents; place whatever you wish to preserve in the box with a sufficient quantity of sulphur to fill the box with the fumes when burnt; ignite the sulphur; close the lid of the box and leave it alone for twelve hours. Then open it and you will find the fruits or contents so saturated with sulphur that they will not decay for some time thereafter, and giving every evidence of being completely preserved. You can place the fruit in jars filled up with water or preserve them dry, as pleases your best, and as for the flavor, that depends on your taste. [illegible]

THE INDEPENDENT.

"The foremost religious newspaper of the United States."—The Rev Joseph Cook.

Established in 1848, as an advocate of anti-slavery and of reforms in religion and politics, the Independent once became a recognized power throughout the country. Its influence has ever since been constantly growing. As it has fought against slavery and for cheap postage, so it will fight against Mormonism, for Civil Service Reform, and for purity in politics, and general uprightness in all things. It employs the best editorial talent and speaks fearlessly on all subjects. It pays for contributed articles and for editorial services more than double the amount paid by any other weekly newspaper.

It publishes more religious discussions than the religious reviews, and more poetry and stories popular monthlies, and gives more information than an annual cyclopedia. The long cable dispatches recently published from the great Methodist Council in London are a good illustration of what the Independent is constantly doing. A list of the most prominent religious and philosophical writers, poets and story writers in the country is the list of the contributors of the Independent. Besides the space set aside for these writers and for editorials, there are twenty-two distinct departments, edited by twenty-two specialists, which include Biblical Research, Sanitary, Legal, Fine Arts, Music, Science Pebbles, Personalities, Hymn Notes, School and College, Literature, Religious Intelligence, Missions, Sunday School, News of the Week, Finance, Insurance, Stories, puzzles, and Agriculture. 32 pages in all.

A Hymn for the Conquered.

W. W. S. IN BLACKWOOD'S MAGAZINE.

I sing the hymn of the conquered, who fell in the battle of life—
The hymn of the wounded, the beaten, who died overwhelmed in the strife;
Not the jubilant song of the victors, for whom the resounding acclaim
Of nations was lifted in chorus, whose brows wore the chaplet of fame,—
But the hymn of the low and the humble, the weary, the broken in heart,
Who strove and who failed, acting bravely a silent and desperate part;
Whose youth bore no flower on its branches, whose hopes burned in ashes away,
From whose hands slipped the prize they had grasped at,—who stood at the dying of day,
With the work of their life all around them, unpitied, unheeded, alone,
With death swooping down o'er their failure, and all but their faith overthrown
While the voice of the world shouts its chorus, its pæan for those who have won—
While the trumpet is sounding triumphant, and high to the breeze and the sun
Gay banners are waving, hands clapping, and hurrying feet.
Thronging after the laurel-crowned victors—I stand on the field of defeat
In the shadow, 'mongst those who are fallen and wounded and dying—and there
Chant a requiem low, place my hand on their pain-knotted brows, breathe a prayer.
Hold the hand that is helpless and whisper,
"They only the victory win,
Who have fought the good fight and have vanquished the demon that tempts us within;
Who have held to their faith unseduced by the prize that the world holds on high;
Who have dared for a high cause to suffer, resist, fight—if need be to die."
Speak, History, who are life's victors? Unroll thy long annals and say—
Are they those whom the world call the victors, who won the success of a day?
The martyrs, or Nero? The Spartans who fell at Thermopylæ's tryst,
Or the Persians and Xerxes? His judges, or Socrates? Pilate or Christ?

THE HAUNTED INN.

BY T. J. H.

Many years ago, long before the days of railroads, there stood, in the then wild mountain regions of western Pennsylvania, a large, rambling, tumble-down building, which was used at the time of which I speak, as an inn. It had been built, many years before, by a visionary immigrant from the old world, in imitation of his ancestral home. Why such an out of the way spot had been selected for a home no one ever pretended to guess. But certain it was that the owner had expended all of his available means in its erection, and had toiled and starved, and finally died of a broken heart, his utter want of practical want totally unfitting him for wresting a living from the barren hillsides which he had selected for a home. His wife soon followed him to the grave, and his children were scattered, no one knew where. And thus it was that the once pretentious house went to decay for want of a tenant, and would have rattled to the ground had not the spirit of improvement and enterprise finally invaded the region in search of the hidden treasures of the earth.

When I visited the spot a small village had sprung up around the old house, and that had been taken possession of and the few rooms not utterly ruined by decay had been converted into a so-called tavern.

The landlord might have starved, however, if he had depended on native custom, for the old house, during those years of solitude, had gained an unsavory reputation, and in the absence of other tenants many-tongued rumor had peopled it with ghosts.

Its reputation had reached me before I visited the place, but as I had always felt an inexpressible longing to sleep in a haunted room and make the personal acquaintance of some of the dissatisfied denizens of the other shore, I was not sorry to learn that the haunted inn was the only place in the town where I could find a resting place.

I was somewhat taken aback, however, when the landlord informed me, in tones of broken English and poor whisky, that every bed and every room in the house was full. I could not but admit the eternal fitness of things, inasmuch as he was full too; but I begged him to set his few remaining wits to work to see if he could not find a peg for me to hang my tired bones upon. After grave consultation with the landlady, it was concluded that they could make up a shake-down, if I did not mind sharing my room with another gentleman who had already retired.

There was nothing for it but to accept the situation, and I did so in good faith.

By the time the shake-down was completed I had finished my supper and announced my desire to retire immediately. The landlord was by this time too far gone to render any assistance, and as the landlady weighed not less than 300 pounds, I excused her from attendance and acted as my own gentleman usher. She furnished me with the remains of a tallow dip, and giving me a few general directions concerning the location of the room, bade me good night.

[illegible] fortunately stumbled into the right place, for a hasty glance revealed the [illegible]. I had just time, however, [illegible] the door when the light went out, [illegible] remained for the moon, which [illegible] into the window, to light [illegible] to bed and reveal the location of the [illegible] which the stranger slept. [illegible] naturally nervous, but [illegible] awake for some time. To add to my nervousness the wind had risen, and it whistled through the cracks and around the gables of the old mansion with a wierd, mournful cadence, which was anything but soothing to my tired and already overwrought nerves.

As I lay there the sounds momentarily increased in hideousness. I thought of all the stories I had heard of the cursed old rookery, and as I did so the sounds became more and more like the shrieks of the damned or the wail of a lost soul. I finally became so nervous that I resolved to arise and go below.

But now, as I rose in my bed for this purpose, I found myself subjected to a new source of annoyance. The mocking wind, which had appeared to me more than once to syllable human sounds, came at length upon my ear, distinctly charged with tones which could not be mistaken. It was the hard suppressed breathing of a man. I listened still and it came anew—stronger and more fully upon my ear. It was like the thick suspirations of an apoplectic. Whence it proceeded I knew not. But that it was near me I was certain. A suspicion of robbery, possibly assassination—flashed upon me but was instantly discarded, as foreign to the character of the people among whom I was traveling.

The moonlight now fell upon the curtained bed opposite to me, and I saw the tattered drapery move, as if the frame upon which it was suspended, were agitated. I watched, I confess, with more peculiar feelings of interest. I was not alarmed, but an unaccountable anxiety crept over me. At length the curtain parted, and a naked human leg was protruded through its folds—the foot came with a dumb, dead like sound to the floor—resting there, it seemed to me at least half a minute before the body to which it belonged was disclosed to my view. Slowly, then, a pallid and unearthly looking figure emerged from the couch, and stood with its stark lineament clearly drawn against the dingy curtain behind it. It appeared to be balancing itself for a moment, and then began to move along from the bed. But there was something horribly unnatural in its motions. Its feet came to the floor with a dull, heavy sound, as if there was no vitality in them. Its arms hung, apparently, parrlyzed by its side, and the only nerve as rigidly in the frame, appeared about its head. The hair was thin and scattered, and stood out in rigid tuffts from its brow. The eyes were dilated and fixed with the expression of ghastly horror, and the petrified lips moved not, as the hideous moaning, which came from the bottom of the chest, escaped them.

It began to move across the floor in the direction of my bed—its knees at every step being drawn up with a sudden jerk to the body, and its feet coming to the ground as if they were moved by some mechanical impulse, and were wholly wanting in the elasticity of living members.

It approached my bed, and mingled horror and curiosity kept me still. It came and stood beside it, and, child-like, I clung to my couch, moving only to the farther side. Slowly, and with the same unnatural footfalls, it pursued me thither, and again I changed my position. It placed itself then at the foot of my bed, and, moved by its piteous groans, I tried to look calmly at it. I endeavored to rally my thoughts—to reason with myself, and even to speculate upon the nature of the object before me. One idea that went through my brain was too extravagant not to remember. I thought, among other things, that the phantom was a corpse, animated for the moment by some galvanic process, in order to terrify me. Then, as I recollected that there was no one in the village to carry such a trick into effect—supposing even the experiment possible—I rejected the supposition. How, too, could those awful moans be produced from an inanimate being? And yet it seemed as if everything about it were dead, except the mere capability of moving its feet and uttering these unearthly expressions of suffering. The spectre, however, if so it may be called, gave me but little opportunity for reflection. Its ghastly limbs were raised anew with the same automaton movement, and, placing one of its feet upon the bottom of my bed, while its glassy eyes were steadfastly fixed upon me, it began slowly stalking towards my pillow.

I confess that I was now in an agony of terror.

I sprang from the couch and fled from the apartment. The keen-sightedness of fear enabled me to discover an open closet upon the other side of the hall. Springing into it I closed the door quickly after me. It had neither lock nor bolt, but the closet was so narrow that by placing my feet against the opposite wall, I could brace my back against the door so as to hold it against any human assailant, who had only his arms for a lever.

The perspiration of mortal fear started upon my forehead, as I heard the supernatural tread of that strange visitant approaching the spot. It seemed an age before its measured steps brought it to the door.

It struck it; the blow was sullen and hollow, as if dealt by the hand of a corpse. It was like the dull sound of its feet upon the floor.

It struck the door again, and, to my intense relief, the sound was more feeble than before. Surely, I thought the hand of no living man could produce such a sound.

I know not whether it struck again, for now its breathing became so loud that even the moanings, which were mingled with the suspirations, became inaudible.

At last they subsided entirely, becoming at first gradually weaker, and then only in harsh, sudden sobs, whose duration I could not estimate, from their mingling with the blast which swept [illegible].

[illegible] sound that I remember of [illegible] the most terrible of all [illegible] be mistaken for any other—the death-rattle in a human throat. It came with a horrible distinctness—it seemed in my very ear. It appeared to me that the accumulated horrors of the whole night had been concentrated in that sound—that audible connection between life and death.

What might have been heard after I know not, for insensibility came to my relief.

When I came to, I knew that the morning had come, and, scarcely knowing whether or not it had been a hideous dream, I arose and opened the door.

What words can describe the awful horror of that moment? Before me stood the spectre, with the full light of day revealing its revolting features, in all their hideous deformity. The face was swollen and livid—the tongue protruded from the mouth, and its eyes, bursting from their sockets glared at me and froze the blood in my veins.

All this is impressed upon my mind with a terrible distinctness, although the view I had was instantaneous, for the next instant the opposition, whose arms were extended forward, fell upon me and clasped me in a horrible embrace.

I gave a wild shriek and fell, with the ghastly thing upon me.

Once more insensibility came to my relief.

The rest of my story is soon told. The household of the inn heard my cry, and released me.

It was the dead body of a guest of the inn. He was afflicted with some organic affection of the system, and was subject to grievous fits of night mare, during which he still preserved sufficient powers of volition to move to the bed of his servant, who being used to his attacks, would take the necessary means to relieve him. The servant had that night remained out late, and when he returned had found his way in the dark to the wrong room and occupied the bed intended for me, whilst I had tumbled into the room occupied by his master, and got into the servant's bed. The poor man had fallen a victim to his malady and my cowardice.

Colonel Ingorsoll at the Grave of a Child.

The child son of George O. and Mrs. Miller, of Washington, was buried in the Congregational cemetery in that city, Sunday. Colonel Ingersoll attended by request, and as a friend of the family. At the grave, at the request of Mrs. Miller, the famous orator made a brief address, standing uncovered in the rain saying:

My Friends—I know how vain it is to gild a grief with words, and yet I wish to take from every grave its fear. Here in this world, where life and death are equal kings, all should be brave enough to meet what all the dead have met. The future has been filled with fear, strained and polluted by the heartless past. From the wondrous tree of life the buds and blossoms fall with ripened fruit, and in the common bed of earth patriarchs and babes sleep side by side. Why should we fear that which will come to all that is? We can not tell. We do not know which is the greatest blessing, life or death. We can not say that death is not a good. We do not know whether the grave is the end of this life or the door of another, or whether the night here is not somewhere else a dawn. Neither can we tell which is the more fortunate—the child dying in its mother's arms before its lips have learned to form a word, or he who journeys the whole length of life's uneven road, painfully taking the last slow steps with staff and crutch. Every cradle asks us "whence?" and every coffin "whither?". The poor barbarian weeping above his dead can answer the questions as intelligently and satisfactorily as the robed priest of the most authentic creed. The tearful ignorance of the one is just as consoling as the learned and unmeaning words of the other. No man standing where the horizon of a life has touched a grave has any right to prophecy a future filled with pain and tears. It may be that death gives all there is of worth to life. If those who press and strain against our hearts could never die, perhaps that love would wither from the earth. Maybe a common faith treads from out the paths between our hearts the weeds of selfishness and hate, and I should rather live and love where death is king than have eternal life where love is not. Another life is naught unless we know and love again the ones who love us here. They who stand with breaking hearts around this little grave need have no fear. The large and noble faith in all that is, and is to be, tells us that death even at its worst is only perfect rest. We know that thro' the common wants of life—the needs and duties of each hour—their grief will lessen day by day, until at last the grave will be to them a place of rest and peace—almost of joy. There is for them this consolation: The dead do not suffer. If they live again, their lives will be surely as good as ours. We have no fear; we are all children of the same mother, and the same fate awaits us all. We too have our religion and it is this; Help for the living, hope for the dead.

The Benefit of Laughter.

Nothing on earth can smile but the race of man. Gems may flash reflected light, but what is a diamond flash compared with an eye flash and mirth flash? Flowers cannot smile; this is a charm which even they can not claim. Birds cannot smile nor can any living thing. It is the prerogative of man. It is the color which love wears and cheerfulness and joy—these three. It is the light in the window of the face, by which the heart signifies to father, husband and friend that it is at home and waiting. A face that can not smile is like a bud that cannot blossom and dries upon the stalk. Laughter is day and sobriety is night, and a smile is the twilight that hovers gently between both, and is more bewitching than [illegible]

An Arkansas Romance.

A strange marriage occurred in South Arkansas recently. Some time ago a Miss Wampton, a beautiful young lady, and a wealthy young farmer named Rocton were married. The young lady could not have been termed a "happy bride." She had never loved Rockton, and married him only to please a widowed mother. "My happiness depends upon this union," the widow had said. "You have always been a dutiful child, and I know you will not refuse to marry a man who devotedly loves you. You may not love him now, my child, but that deep devotion which is always the offspring of kindness will make you happy.

"I will obey you," replied the girl, "but I do not even like Mr. Rockton. There is nothing in sympathy between us. He is wealthy; but while poverty always brings misery, yet wealth does not always bring happiness. You know that I am devoted to Tom Rosemond, and that he is devoted to me; but if you, as my mother, command me, I will obey, even tho' the effort cost me my life as well as my happiness."

The ceremony was performed. Pale, and with a settled expression of despair, the girl promised to "love, honor and obey." Rockton was happy. The girl's mother had realized a long cherished dream. Rosmond, who would have been the girl's choice, left the neighborhood. Rockton and his wife began keeping house. Six months afterward Rosemond returned and sent Mrs. Rockton a note, begging an interview. She showed the note and her answer of refusal to her husband. He kissed her as a reward of fidelity. Rather a thin reward. Rockton was taken sick with swamp fever. Swamp fever never trifles with a man's feelings. "Business" is the motto of swamp fever. Napoleon said he could take swamp fever, with chills as his staff, and whip any army in the world. Swamp fever placed a bronzed finger on Rockton's nose and said, "Come." When the sufferer saw that he was bound to accompany the enemy, he called his wife, and said;

"You have been a faithful wife. Nine women out of ten would have run away long ago. I have always known that you loved Rosemond. I have sent for him. I want you to marry him before I die, so that I can see the happy ceremony."

"That would not be legal," answered the wife, "for I can not marry another man so long as you are living."

"Well, but I want him here so I can see that the ceremony is performed immediately after I am dead."

Rosemond and the preacher were sent for, and, to hurry matters, the wife requested the messenger to send for a doctor. They arrived. The doctor looked at the patient and smiled. The wife's heart leaped. She knew that the doctor understood his business. Rockton gasped and motioned. The marriage party approached the bed. The doctor chuckled. Rockton placed the hands of the lovers together and breathed easier. The doctor administered medicine. The dying man gasped again and died. The preacher raised his hand and the lovers were married. Swamp fever in bronzed victory sat on the brow of the dead man.

Story of a Countryman.

A crude old farmer, living on the line of one of the recent railroad surveys, and who is owner of a barn of large dimensions, with huge swinging doors on both sides, observed a posse of surveyors busily driving a row of stakes in the direction of his big barn. Sauntering leisurely toward the trespassers, with an air savoring somewhat of indignation, he addressed the leader of the gang as follows:

"Layin' eout another railroad?"

"Surveying one," was the reply.

"Goin' threw my barn?"

"Don't see how we can avoid it."

"Wall, now, mister," said the worthy farmer, "I calkerlate I've got somethin' tew say 'bout that. I want you tew understand' that i've got somethin' else tew dew besides runnin' out tew open and shet them doors every time a train wants to go threw."

The clean Newspapers.

There is a growing feeling in every healthy community against the journals who make it their special object to minister to perverted taste by seeking out and serving up in a seductive form disgusting scandal and licentious revelations. There is a good reason to believe that the clean newspaper is more highly prized to-day than it was four or five years ago. It is also safe to predict that as the people in all ranks of life, who wish to protect their own families from contamination, become more conscious of the pernicious influence of a certain class of journals called "enterprising," because they are ambitious to to serve up dirty scandals, they will be careful to see the journals they permit to be read in the family circle are of the class that never forget the proprieties of life.

Already men and women of refinement and healthy morals have had their attention called to the pernicious influence of bad literature, and have made commendable efforts to counteract the same by causing the sound literature to be published and sold at popular prices. These efforts are working a silent but sure revolution. The sickly sentimental story paper and wild ranger and pirate story book are, slowly yielding the field to worthier claimants.

To the praise of the decent paper it may be said, that where it has a place in the family, and has been read for years by the young and old it has developed such a healthy tone and such a discriminating taste that the literature of the slums has no admirers. Fortunately the number of such families is increasing in the land, and as they increase, the journal that devotes itself to [illegible]

VICK'S FLORAL GUIDE for 1882 is before us. It is a delightful work of 130 pages fairly teeming with elegant illustrations beside the fine colored plates. It is printed on the choicest of paper, has handsome covers and is a work of art beside being full of instruction for all lovers of flowers and gardeners. Send 10 cents to James Vick, Florist, Rochester and obtain a copy.

Some men marry a single woman; but when she turns out a "whole team," loads up with relatives down to the fourth degree, places a stalwart mother or sister-in-law on the box, who seizes whip and reins, chart and compass, abjures the break, you bet that ere team is bound to ham; and when the male biped of "that mixed ranch" begins to grow dyspeptic, stoop-shouldered and bald-headed, who is to blame, and who surprised?

THE NORTH AMERICAN REVIEW will present in its February number, to be published on the 15th of the present month, Part III. of its series of articles on "The Christian Religion." It will be from the pen of Geo. P. Fisher, the eminent professor of ecclesiastical history in the Yale Divinity School,—as thorough a scholar and as able a defender of the christian faith as this country affords. A powerful presentation of the claims of Christianity is expected.

Adultery, among many barbarous tribes, is punishable with death, and is therefore a crime of rare occurrence. Civilization, with its institutions of learning, its courts of justice and temples of worship, places lighter blame upon those who commit this foul and too common social crime; but if the example of barbaric justice were followed, our proud cities would miss from its thoroughfares many familiar faces.

THE DANGERS OF THE STOCK MARKET.

A man may be incredulous enough to risk his money in the fickle mysteries of a mercurial stock market but when he gets the itching piles, he goes straight for Dr. Swayne's ointment. Unlike the Bulls and bears of the Stock exchange, who clean you out of hard earned cash, it returns your money with interest, in the way of allaying the intense itching and insuring sweet repose.

The Way It Was Done.

He was asking the conductor how he ~~managed to~~ build a house and buy a fast horse out of $50 a month. "You see," said this noble man, "sometimes we get a way passenger who pays a quarter or a half dollar for his fare. Well, we flip the money up—heads for the conductor, tails for the company." "But" persisted the investigator after truth, "sometimes it must turn up tails. What do you do then?" "Oh," replied the conductor, with an ineffable contempt, "then we flip it up again." So that passenger went home and sold out his railroad shares.

Tyndalls theory that heat is simply motion in another form must be true. Strike a piece of iron and it becomes hot. Strike a man and he immediately boils over. There is, however, one exception to the rule. Strike a warm friend for a short loan and immediately becomes as cold as an iceberg.

ROSCOE CONKLING is, it is once more reported, seriously out of health, and unable to conduct the legal business offered to him. He eats but little and suffers from sleeplessness. POST-MASTER GENERAL HOWE has discharged a clerk he found in his department whose duty it was to cull the newspapers, cut out and put in a scrap book encomiums upon his predecessor, Thos. L. James. This an is encouraging specimen of reform. This "gush gatherer" was instructed to preserve only complimentary notices. Wonder if he will paste in the scrap book the notice post-master general Howe gave him to "git."

THE Salt Lake Tribune discovers in its neighborhood four kinds of men who lose time—the man who is always waiting at street corners trying to persuade his little dog to catch up to him; the man who spends four or five hours a day trying to color a bogus meerschaum pipe; the man who is generally explaining to his friends how and under what circumstances he was presented with his expensive cane, and the man who, having pretty hair, wishes to keep the part in exact shape and appearance."

We have discovered four kinds of men who lose no time. The man who is always dodging because he owes you a dollar; rival candidates for office; the man who is trying to make the community believe he is what he is not, and the man who is trying to meet a huge note with a depleted treasury.

Supt. Dutcher and the Canals.

The report of the superintendent of public works states the expenditure of the year ending September 30 is $983,000. Work estimated to cost $800,000, recommended by the engineer of the department as necessary to put the canals in good order has not been done for want of funds and time. The tonage of the past season was 5,175,000 tolls $63,000. This is a decrease of tolls of 45 per cent. and of tonnage of 20 per cent. compared with the previous season. The decrease of revenue is due partly to the abolition of tolls on west bound freight but over three-fourths of the decrease is changeable to lessen shipments of through cargoes of grain from Buffalo to the sea board. The freights on east bound merchandise average lower than ever before in the history of the canals. The revenues during the fiscal year, which the expenditures for the year ending September 30th next cannot exceed, were $818,000. The lessened export demand and less surplus of products in the west with greater facilities by the St. Lawrence and Mississippi routes, justify the assumption that revenue for the year ending Sept. 30th next, will not exceed the revenues of the calendar year 1881 or about $682,000, an amount less than the expenses of collection, superintendency and repairs during any year since the enlargement.

The report states that tolls the past season have been about 20 per cent of cost of transportation on through cargoes to tide-water and says making the canals free will benefit the state if future legislatures are prudent in making appropriations and those in charge of the canals are economical. The state can well afford to maintain them if prudently managed as a regulator of freight rates. Terminal and all port expense should be made as moderate as possible, thus relieving commerce of every unnecessary tax and charge.

Burt's Road All Right.

The Troy Press of Jan. 11, says: A private despatch from Boston yesterday afternoon announced that Mr. Vanderbilt had scored his first success in the railroad war. It was announced in Boston yesterday morning that General Burt's railroad that was to parallel the New York Central through the Mohawk valley had gone under. The great question now is, what will become of the various railroads that General Bert has built in the neighborhood of Saratoga. The Boston, Hoosac Tunnel & Western can be used as an outlet for the D. & H. roads to Boston. It is very probable that the capitalists who put their money into Burt's schemes will try to get it out [illegible] through the completed roads.

[illegible] Albany Argus of Jan. 15, publishes the following statement by General Burt concerning the Boston Hoosac Tunnel and Western railroad; "So far as [illegible] being stopped and the company [illegible] the talk is all nonsense, as I [illegible] you by facts. As to whether [illegible] company is substantial or [illegible] judge for yourself when I [illegible] its stock has never been in [illegible] and I do not know of a man [illegible] offered his shares for sale. [illegible] 000,000 is still in the keeping [illegible] company. In regard to [illegible] the New York Central [illegible]

[illegible] were added at this point, two [illegible] added also. At East Albany another car, the "Idlewild" was attached.

Owing to the length of the train some difficulty was experienced in drawing it and at the junction where the accident occurred, on a sharp curve, the train was stopped to examine the air-brakes. While examining the brakes the Tarrytown train came dashing down the track at forty-five miles an hour and crashed into the rear of the New York train telescoping two palace cars, the "Idlewild" and "Empire". The above cars were immediately enveloped in a mass of flames. Those who perished were Senator Webster Wagner, terribly burned and unrecognizable, except by effects upon the body. Park Valentine and Mary, his wife, both burned almost to a crisp but recognized by their faces and clothing. Oliver Keely, arm burned off, body dreadfully scorched and scalded. D. L. Ransom, of Messina, N. Y., a guest of the Hoffman House. A body, supposed from papers etc., to be that of Rev. F. Morechal, of Troy, N. Y. Miss Maud Brown, of West Fifty-third street, New York, face scalded. Also, the body of a man half consumed and utterly unrecognizable.

The blame is attached to a brakeman, James Melius, who neglected to go out and warn approaching trains. He fled immediately after the accident and was arrested in Poughkeepsie, taken to New York and committed to the tombs. He has since been released on $5,000 bail. He has been in the employ of the Central Hudson company for twenty years and can neither read nor write. He admits imperfectly performing his duty and will undoubtedly be punished.

Webster Wagner was born at Palatine Bridge, N. Y., October 2, 1817, and that place has been his home all his life. He was of German parentage, had a common school education, and began active life in the cabinet and wagon-making business. Later he became station agent at Palatine Bridge, and continued in that capacity for fifteen years. During this time he conceived and matured a plan of night cars, which he developed into the present sleeping and drawing-room cars, with which his name is so prominently connected. The scheme got the attention of Commodore Vanderbilt and his son, William H., who furnished the capital which gave life and means to the Wagner railway-sleeping and drawing-room companies. Mr. Wagner, with his son Nicholas, has represented this large interest, and such was its success, that the humble station-keeper at Palatine had become a millionaire, and a recognized power in business and public affairs.

Mr. Wagner entered public life as a republican in 1870, when he was elected to the Assembly from Montgomery county. The next year he was elected to the State Senate, and has served continuously in that body since.

His residence at Palatine was the abode of hospitality and pleasant home life. He delighted in the model farm of the county as his residence. He indulged with a free hand the generous and hospitable impulses of his kind heart. He was loved by the people among whom he had lived for sixty-five years. His surviving family consists of his wife, his son and four married daughters. He was worth $3,000,000.00 and leaves it to his wife, four dauhters and son. His life was insured for $100,000 in favor of his wife.

Obsequies over his remains were held at his residence 44th street New York, Monday afternoon at five o'clock, and the remains conveyed to his old home Palatine Bridge for interment.

Jasper Newport and Samuel Williams are in jail at Lyons for the murder of James Hall, at Sodus Point, mention of which was made in THE TIMES last week. The parties are all colored. Newport and Williams have made a confession and it is the most brutal and beastly case in the annals of crime.

Hall was known to have $3,000 on his person. The murderers wanted it. They went to his saloon and upon entering greeted him with a friendly "Good evening Mr. Hall." Hall returned the salutation and turned around when William's dealt him a murderous blow upon the back of his head that felled him to the floor and he died without uttering a groan. The fiends then tipped over a kerosene lamp and setting fire to the fluid decamped. Hall's arms and legs were burned completely off when discovered.

Newport left a peculiar striped pair of mittens in his hurry to flee and these led to his arrest upon suspicion when he made a confession of the whole affair. The money was nearly all recovered. Newport lives in Sodus and Williams in Auburn.

Williams was in Fulton last fall doing the hotels and saloons playing on a banjo and singing, and will be readily recalled by many Fulton people.

Nearing the End.

Counsellors Davidge, Reed and Scoville have finished their remarks to the jurors in the Guiteau case and counsellor Porter is now engaged in pouring out his oratory in behalf of the government. It was decided by the court that Guiteau's address to the jury could not be delivered to them and consequently it was given to the press for publication.

It is simply a monotonous repetition of former publication and he still contends that he was crazy when the shooting occurred.

It is thought the case will be given to the jury by Friday morning. Judge Cox's address to the jury will be watched with the most intense interest.

NEIGHBORING NEWS.

Port Jervis has forty-two cases of small-pox.

Ice is being harvested at Ithaca. It averages a thickness of six inches.

James Barrus has been appointed postmaster at Fairdale, this county.

Ilion, Herkimer Co., is agitated. Two cases of small-pox have been discovered.

Small-pox exists at DeRuyter, a station on the line of the Chenango Valley railroad.

The president last Friday signed the commission of John J. Lamoree collector of customs at Oswego.

During a donation at Peats Corners, last week, Wm. Eggleston, aged 60, married Mary Keller, aged 30.

James Redpath has been secured by the Oswego land leauge to deliver a lecture in that city next Tuesday evening.

J. T. Henderson, a prominent business man of Pulaski, died in that village last Saturday of typhoid pneumonia, after an illness of one week.

John Sullivan, elected collector of Constantia last spring on the democratic ticket was unable to obtain sufficient bail and resigned. A. F. Purdy has been appointed to fill the vacancy.

Mrs George Tooley of Palermo was stricken with paralysis last Wednesday and died Thursday morning at 7 o'clock aged 60 years. Funeral services were held at the M. E. Church at Dentons Corners Sunday.

The State encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic will be held in Syracuse Jan. 25th and 26th when the officers for the ensuing year will be elected. Preparations for the reception of the grand body are being made on an extensive scale.

William Padden a prominent citizen of Oswego town died last Thursday evening in a peculiar and sudden manner. He was sitting in a chair waiting for members of the family who were to accompany him to a donation and died without uttering a word.

On Saturday last twenty-nine hundred and seventy copies of the Oswego Daily Palladium were printed and sold. One hundred and twenty five extra copies were sold at Ney's newsroom in this village and there was a brisk call after the supply was exhausted. The Palladium is a prime favorite with Fulton people, and it deserves to be—it ts newsy, reliable and progressive.

This morning's Oswego Express says: Exercised by the report that small pox had broken out at Martville, the people of Hannibal and vicinity are taking the necessary precautions of vaccination. We are informed by a correspondent at Martville that no cases of small pox exists there, but we are also told that Dr. Kyle says he has a patient suffering from the disease. We hope the latter statement may prove incorrect.

A SMILE OF SATISFACTION.

This from the Cleveland (Ohio) Penny Press carries its own suggestion; Recently meeting Mr. H. G. Keffer, treasurer of the Cleveland Herald, our representative inquired of that gentleman, after stating his mission, if he personally knew anything about the Great German Remedy, St. Jacobs Oil. A smile played across Mr. Keffer's expressive face and his eyes twinkled merrily as he replied in the affirmative. I will not refuse to state my experience with it, and you may use it as you think best. Four years ago I sprained one of my ankles, an accident which, as you are aware, entails much suffering and some times leaves the limb in a condition to remind one frequently of the old hurt. Unfortunately this result ensued. When ever the weather became damp or my system absorbed the slightest cold my ankles pained me. This went on at intervals for over three years, and I could not find relief. Last winter I applied the St. Jacobs Oil and it completely cured me, [illegible] a vestige of the pain.

A Cure For Small Pox.

In these days of that dreadful disease, small pox, the following sure remedy may be acceptable:

Sulphate of zinc, one grain.
Fox glove (digitalis) one grain.
Half teaspoonful of water.
When thoroughly mixed add four ounces of water; take a spoonful every hour—doze for an adult.
Either small pox or scarlet fever will disappear in twelve hours.
For a child, smaller dose, according to age.
This remedy has been tried and is a cure.

The February Magazines

The North American Review presents in the Feburary number, Part III. of its series of articles on "The Christian Religion." It is from the pen of George P. Fisher, the eminent professor of ecclesiastical history in the Yale Divinity School—as thorough a scholar and as able a defender of the Christain faith as this country affords. A powerful presentation of the claims of Christianity is submitted.

Harper's Magazine for February is a very strong number both in the literary and the artistic sense. Beginning with an excellent portrait of Victor Hugo, which serves as a frontispiece we have an exceedingly interesting description of Phildelphia, by George P. Lathrop, beautifully illustrated.

Mrs Anna Bowman Blake's personal sketches of "French Political Leaders" are admirable; and Mr. Reinhart's characteristic drawings add greatly to the reader's interest in the subject.

Mr. Joseph Hatton contributes a paper entitled "Henry Irving at home," a large portion of which is made up of Mr. Irving's own recital of interesting incidents and phrases of his historic career.

A novel and most striking feature of the number is the first installment of Mrs. John Lillie's serial tale, "Prudence; a Story of Æsthetic London," which [illegible] be a very strong and interesting exposition of a peculiar phase of English life. This novelette was written and in the hands of the publishers before the comic opera "Patience" was brought out. De Maurier, whose cartoons in Punch bearing on the subject of ætheticism have attracted so much attention, very effectively illustrates the story. The figures in this full-page illustration in this number are portraits that will be easily recogniced by those familar with London society.

A noticeable feature of the Editor's Drawer is the introduction of contributions from eminent American humorists in addition to which there is the usual variety of facetious anecdote.

Political News

embracing complete and comprehensive despatches from Washington, including full reports of the speeches of eminent politicians on the questions of the hour.

The Farm Department of the Weekly Herald gives the latest as well as the most practical suggestions and discoveries relative to the duties of the farmer, hints for raising cattle, poultry, grains, trees, vegetables, &c., &c., with suggestions for keeping buildings and farming utensils in repair. This is supplemented by a well-edited department, widely copied under the head of giving recipes for practical dishes, hints for making clothing and for keeping up with the latest fashions at the lowest price. Every item of cooking or economy suggested in this department is practically tested by experts before publication. Letters from our Paris and London correspondents on the very latest fashions. The Home Department of the Weekly Herald will save the housewife more than one hundred times the price of the paper. The interests of

The Home

Skilled Labor

are looked after, and everything relating to mechanics and labor saving is carefully recorded. There is a page devoted to all the latest phrases of the business markets, crops, merchandise, &c, &c. A valuable feature is found in the specially reported prices and conditions of

The Produce Market

Sporting news at home and abroad, together with a story every week, a sermon by some eminent divine, literary, musical, dramatic, personal and sea notes. There is no paper in the world which contians so much news matter every week as the Weekly Herald, which is sent, postage free, for one dollar. You can subscribe at any time.

ONCE IN A LIFE TIME

Occurs an opportunity to buy a model farm at an immense sacrifice. The Keller farm containing 177 acres, situated two and one half miles south of Fulton is offered for sale at the astonishingly low price of $36 per acre, good buildings and fair fences, never failing brook running through whole length of farm. Land slightly undulating, very fertile easy to cultivate and pleasantly situated. Fulton is acknowledged to be the most thriving and beautiful village in the State, numbering about 5,000 inhabitants The close proximity of this farm to the village makes it for a milk and dairy farm or for gardening purposes the most desirable farm in the whole state. It can be advantageously divided into two or more parts. Will sell on terms that will enable a wide-awake farmer to pay for the same out of the products in a short time. Call or address for terms or information office of THE FULTON TIMES, or Mrs. E. J. KELLER 25 Seymour street, Syracuse, N. Y.

Song of the
ROYAL ST. JOHN

A saint come to every home
And with my presence cheery,
I banish care and burdens bear,
Of women, worn and weary.

I run so light, and look so bright,
The ladies dote upon me.
No noise I make, no threads I break,
Though back and forth you run me.

Through every kind of goods I go,
Silk, muslin, cloth and leather;
Though all machines refuse to sew
Yet I sew on forever.

No heads I pain, no eyes I strain,
To find the way to thread me,
No holes have I, save needles eye
To make a cause to dread me,

I'm cheap and good and if you should
But for a moment doubt me,
Be sure and try, and then you'll buy
And never be without me.

I seam, I hem, I [illegible] bind,
I ruffle, tuck and gather;
And all machines I leave behind,
While I sew on forever.

"Always varied, always good, always improving."—Charles Francis Adams, jr.

Harper's Magazine, the most popular, illustrated periodical in the world, it begins its sixty-fourth volume with the December Number. It represents what is best in American literature and art; and its marked success in England—where it has already a circulation laager than of any English magazine of the same class—has brought into its service the most eminent writers and artists of Great Britain. The forthcoming volumes for 1882 will in every respect surpass their predecessors.

Studies of the Louisiana Creoles. By Geo. W. Cable, author of "the Grandissimes" etc. A series of illustrated papers, on the traditions and romance of Creole life in Louisiana.

A Novel by W. D. Howells (author of "A Chance Acquaintance," etc.) dealing with characteristic features of American life.

Ancient and Modern Sculptures. A History of Ancient Scripturre by Mrs Lucy M. Mitchell, to continue the finest series of engravings yet published of the masterpieces of sculpture. There will also be papers on "Living English Sculptors," and on the "Younger Sculptures of America," fully illustrated.

The Opera in New York, by Richard Grant White. A popular and valuable series, to be illustrated with wonderful completeness and beauty.

Architecture and decoration in America will be treated in a way to interest both householder and housewife; with many practical as well as beautiful illustrations from recent designs.

Representative Men and Women of the 19th Century. Biographical sketches accompanied by portraits of George Eliot, Robert Browning, Rev Frederick W. Robertson (by the late Dean Stanley,) Matthew Arnold, Christina Rossetti, and Cardinal Newman, and of the younger American authors, Wm. D. Howells Henry James Jr., and Geo. W. Cable.

Scenes of Thackeray's Hawthornes, and George Eliot's Novels. Succeeding the illustrated series on the scenes of Dicken's novels.

The reform of the Civil Service. Arrangements have been made for a series of able papers on this pressing political question.

Poetry and Poets in America. There will be studies of Longfellow, Whittier Emerson, Lowell, and others, by E. C. Stedam.

Stories, Sketches and Essays may be expected from Charles Dudley warner, W. D. Howells "Mark Twain," Edward Eggleston, Harry James Jr, John Muir, Miss Gordon Coming, "H. H." Geo. W. Cable, Joel Chandler, Harris A. Redwood, F. D. Millet, Noah Brooks, Frank R. Stockton, Constance F. Woolson H. H. Boyesen, Albert stickney, Washington Gladden, John Burroughs, Parke Godwin, Tommaso Salvini, Henry King, Earnest Ingersoll, E. L. Godkin, E. B. Washburne, and many others.

One or two papers on "The Adventures of the Tile Club," and an original Life of Bewick, the engraver by Austin Dobson, are other features to be later announced.

The Editorial Department, and "The World's Work" will be considerably enlarged.

The price of the Century Magazine will remain at $4 per year (35 cents a number). The portrait (size 21 x 27) of the late Dr Holland, issued just before his death, photographed from a life-size drawing by Wyatt Eaton, will possess a new interest to the readers of this magazine. It is offered at $5 retail, or together with the Century Magazine for $6.50. Subscriptions are taken by the publishers, and by book-sellers and news-dealers everywhere.

The demand for THE FULTON TIMES last week was indeed brisk. Over one hundred and fifty extra copies were sold at Ney's news room and this office and more could have been sold had not the edition been exhausted. This week we hope to be equal to the demand.

Hon Willard Johnson of this village was in the recent disaster on the Hudson River road. He was on the train that was run into and fortunately escaped without injury. He had just left the car which was telescoped and gone into one of the forward cars. Mr Johnson returned to Fulton Sunday morning.

The next excursion over the N. Y. Ontario and Western railroad will take place Tuesday Jan. 24, 1882. Fare $7.00 tickets good in returning up to and including Feb. 3d 1882. Baggage checked through and every attention paid to the comfort and convenience of passengers. Merchants will find this a cheap trip and a desirable time to make selections for their spring purchases.

The Syracuse Courier says two cases of small-pox are reported in Fulton. This is erroneous. Strict inquiry among the physicians of Fulton fail to substantiate the report, nor has there been any indications of such disease. Such rumors, if unrefuted, may magnify into formidable facts, and have a tendency to seriously affect the business of a village. Fulton is entirely free from the dreaded disease and we trust it will continue to be so.

A Reward of Merit.

Co. "G" met in their armory last evening and after auditing all outstanding liabilities it was discovered that the beautiful furniture in the reception room valued at $150.00 was still on their hands. It had previously been agreed upon by the company to present it to Capt. Mead which was done by Lieut. Sheridan in a few well chosen words. Capt. Mead responded and invited the boys to Elder's where a sumptuous repast was served sandwiched with toasts and brilliant repartee. Co. "G" will be mustered out next Monday.

Chancellor Sims.

Rev. Charles N. Sims, chancellor of Syracuse University will deliver a lecture in Nichols Hall Wednesday evening Feb. 8, 1882 under the auspices of school No. 1. Subject: "Character and Characters." Tickets for sale at Eggleston's store, reserved seats 35 cents. Chancellor Sims is one of the ablest orators of to-day and is greeted by the people wherever he appears. Over a hundred tickets have been sold at this early day and the lecture is looked forward to with pleasure by the community.

The Catholic Fair.

The Catholic Fair now in session in Nichols hall is meeting unlimited success. Monday evening the receipts were over $300.00 and last evening as much more. Many attractive novelties are introduced and the voting on articles is spirited and active. An appetizing repast is served every evening. A pleasant dancing social concludes each evening's entertainment. Admission ten cents. Drop in.

Clara Louise Kellogg.

A special train will leave the lower D. L. & W. depot at 6:45 p. m., this evening to accommodate Fultonians who wish to attend the Clara Louise Kellogg concert in the Academy of Music at Oswego, returning after the concert. This will be a rare treat for the music loving portion of our community. Tickets for sale by Mr. E. F. Blanchard, at his office on First street.

Carl F. Whitaker and Miss Emma Glenn, members of Madame Rentz's minstrels, were married in Fulton Sunday by Rev. J. S. Riggs.

J. W. Crosby, of Oswego Falls, who has been prostrated by a severe illness, for some time past we are happy to announce is improving, and more hopes are entertained for his recovery.

Children are in the habit, we perceive, of coasting on the sidewalks, on Worth street, Oswego Falls. A number of the citizens are finding fault in regard to this and think it advisable to take the road for such pleasure.

Mr. L. S. Worden has been removed to the insane asylum at Utica, for treatment.

The Small-pox.

This office is in receipt of a circular from the state board of health. The circular contains the following:

"Small pox is liable to appear in any place where there are unvaccinated persons. Every infant should be vaccinated before it is six months old, unless a good physician advises to the contrary. Every person who has passed the age of twelve years should be re-vaccinated to test the fact, of complete protection against small pox. Those who have had the disease should be vaccinated, as it may attack a person who was marked by it, as well as a person who has been only once vaccinated. Sufficient vaccination removes all liability to the disease. For this purpose revaccination is earnestly advised. All employers are earnestly requested to ascertain if all those in their employ and their families are vaccinated and urge upon them the necessity of having it done at once, and while the opportunity presents itself."

Mrs. Alice Liscomb nee Kenyon of Celeveland Ohio, recently buried her only daughter a bright little girl of thirteen. Mrs. Liscomb has the warmest sympathy of her Fulton friends in her affliction.

Tuesday evening Jan. 3d., at the residence of Rev. Wm. Hart of the M. E. church, Brooklyn, N. Y., Robert Palmer of Fulton was united in marriage to Miss Amelia Watson, of Tonawanda. His friends heartily congratulate him.

Pruyne Walton, a carpenter employed on Ingamell's new livery stable in upper Oswego Falls, fell from a scaffold Monday and sustained severe injuries. His back and shoulders were at first thought to be broken. He is reported this morning as improving.

The reading circle of lower Oswego Falls was held last evening at the residence of G. F. Schenck. The meeting was largely attended and a highly enjoyable time was experienced. The next one will be held at the residence of Mrs. Wm. Simmons.

In the Syracuse general term Monday, in the matter of the application for the removal of John E. Parker, a justice of the peace of the town of Granby, and police justice of the village of Oswego Falls, order for Parker to show cause why he should not be removed was granted.

S. W. Purdy of Bernhard's Bay, 70 years old, was robbed of $42 in the Central depot at Utica Friday. He met an exceedingly agreeable young man while waiting for a train and when he went to purchase a ticket he discovered his wallet missing. A man of 70 is not too old to learn something.

Nicholas Murphy, a young man who has been in the employ of the grocery firm of Robinson, Whitaker & Co., since the firm opened business, left Monday morning for Wisconsin where he will find employment with his uncle Mr. James Judge, a well-known former Fultonian. Mr. Murphy's late employers speak in the highest terms of him, and in connection with his many friends wish him unstinted prosperity.

In selling its congealed water for $20 per acre, the state of New York exhibits a grasping meanness towards its subjects unbecoming the first state in the Union. With much better propriety than levying a tax upon its water in winter, when there is an abundance that cannot be utilized for navigation purposes, might the Empire State set a price on every pailful taken from the canal to refresh the patient mule upon the bank, for at that season the sources dry up, and the depth required for navigation is maintained only at great expense. SPECIAL COLLECTOR'S NOTICE,

Having volunteered to collect the taxes for the town of Volney for the present year and give the entire net proceeds of the office of Collector to the widow of the late Hiram Bradway who was elected Collector at the town meeting, I would respectfully ask the tax payers to assist me in this work by prompt payment at my store that it may be well and quickly done and thus avoid all unnecessary inconvenience in the matter. Respectfully,

Jan. 11, 1882. R. E. Phillips.

An enjoyable party was held at the residence of Mr. Rowland, First street, last Friday evening. About fifty guests were present and an unusually happy time resulted.

A Grand masquerade ball will be held at Hannan's hall, Palermo Center, Friday evening Feb 30. This will be the event of the season at this place and everybody is cordially invited to attend.

On the first page of THE TIMES will be found Col. Ingersoll's remarks at the burial of a child in Washington D. C., last week. They are not only clothed in beautiful words but contain much sound philosophy.

Mr. Switzer, town collector of Granby will be at the grocery store of Amos Langdon on Thursday of next week, Jan. 26th, for the accommodation of tax payers. This enables the residents of lower Oswego Falls to remit with but little exertion.

Carr & Lott have purchased the wood yard of Mc Cully & Co., and will hereafter give it their personal attention. They have wood of all kinds and descriptions and deliver it anywhere in Fulton or Oswego Falls. Office at Mc Cully's Oneida St. opposite post-office.

Mr. Geo. Stevenson, of this village has entered the employ of H. R. Olmstead, of the Standard Mills, Syracuse, dealer in coffees, spices, etc. etc., as traveling salesman. Mr. Stevenson has large experience in that class of business and his executive qualities and genial nature thoroughly fits him for this class of work. He is meeting with success.

At a special meeting of the Oswego County Agricultural Society held in Mexico last week it was decided to remove the society's grounds to a place a few rods from the rail road station and alongside the the track. The county agricultural society find that they have to stir themselves if they wish to compete with the Oswego Falls agriculturial society and their first move is to make their exhibition grounds easy of acess.

Bessey Summerville died at her home in this village Jan. 17th 1882, aged 73 years 7 months and 17 days. She was born in the Town of Grange, Ireland, and came to Fulton with her family in 1848. She was the mother of six children, three sons and three daughters, five of whom survive to mourn the loss of a mother who has ever watched over them with motherly tenderness. She was an industrious woman, a faithful housewife and helpmeet. She has done what she could and has gone to her rest. Funeral at her late residence on Harrison street on Friday at 2 p. m., to be attended by Rev. E. C. Bruce. Her remains will be interred in Mt. Adnah.

On Wednesday evening last a large company of friends and relative gathered at the residence of Capt. J. S. Palmer on sixth street to witness the nuptials of his daughter Ida and Mr. John Whiting of Syracuse. The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. J. Riggs of the Presbyterian church at the conclusion of which the happy couple were the recipients of hearty congratulations and many beautiful and substantial presents. A bountiful repast was also spread. Mr. Whiting occuppies a responsible position in the canning establishment of Merrell & Soule in Syracuse and his fellow workmen presented him with an elaborate carved bed room set. Mr. and Mrs. Whiting have returned to Syracuse.

[illegible] Call Early.

Stamping done at 58 Oneida street, Fulton.

Geo. Prosser of Lyons was in Fulton, last week.

The village park is being utilized this winter as a driveway.

Empty ice houses are silently waiting for an opening day.

W. P. Hillick has gone on a business trip to Boston, Mass., and Providence, R. I.

Coal dealers smile. The commodity has advanced twenty-five cents per ton on all grades.

Mrs. Morris Glasgow, of West Vienna, Oneida Co., is a guest of Napoleon Goman, Erie street.

Alonzo Howell and family of Oswego Falls leave in a few days for Auburn for a sojourn of about six weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Farrell and Mrs. Ellen Cullen, mother of Mrs. Farrell, arrived in Fulton Monday evening from Brooklyn.

We learn that E. J. Cronyn and wife, keepers at the county insane asylum, are filling their new positions with the utmost satisfaction.

Mrs. Isa Tanner, of Rome is expected in town on Saturday next on a visit to her parents Mr. and Mrs. G. C. Bartley of lower Oswego Falls.

Mrs. Mary Case and family desire to return thanks to the kind neighbors and friends who rendered them such appreciable aid in their recent sad affliction.

A daughter of John Robertson, aged five years, who died in Fitchburg, Mass., last week, was brought to Oswego Falls Saturday and interred in Mt. Adnah Sunday.

The attention of farmers is called to the advertisement of Messrs Baugh & Sons, in another column. The reputation of their phosphate is world wide. Send for circular.

Wm. G. StJohn, of Washington, Pa. and old Fultonian, renews his subscription to THE TIMES for 1882 and says: "My age is 82, and I say to you THE TIMES I must have as long as I live"

The latest novelty is a dress album. A piece of every new dress is cut and gummed on one side of the leaf and the date attached. Thus the book forms a complete history of a lady's costumes from season to season.

Luther Robertshaw was agreeably surprised last Wednesday evening by a party of friends who dropped in to help him celebrate his birthday. The evening was pleasantly diversified by games, singing and discussing the contents of a bountifully laden table.

One Hundred Years Old.

The Rev. Simeon Parmelee of this city is a remarkable man. He is one hundred years old to-day, and was a stationed minister of the gospel for sixty years. Thus, he is only six years younger than the republic, if we date the birth of the latter at the time of the adoption of the declaration of independence, and has seen it grow from weak infancy to lusty manhood and become one of the first nations of the earth. Nearly all the great inventions which have revolutionized modern commerce and mechanical production were originated within his recollection. Such a connecting link between the present and the early times is always interesting, and especially so when, like Mr. Parmelee, he has looked upon the progressive changes with intelligence and appreciation, and industriously aided in carrying forward the most important work of all—the religious and moral life of the people. We congratulate Mr. Parmelee that he has lived to see this day, and also the household of his daughter, Mrs. E. J. Hamilton, where he finds rest and loving care in the closing years of his useful life.

[Oswego Times.

[illegible] every one working like beavers [illegible] sinking holes, driving [illegible] in anticipation of the boom that was just then coming in. The sound of hammer, pick and shovel, together with the [illegible] steel, was heard upon every side, while the whole presented a scene of that untiring industry that is only met with among men who believe themselves about to be possessed of immense wealth, all seemingly unmindful of the wild and rough surroundings that their late change in life had thrown about them. Another fact strikes the observer strongly, as he gets better acquainted with the people here, and it is that the great majority of those who come to this state are either broken down business men who have no hope of being able to retrieve their lost fortunes among their old associates; or the young men that have been disappointed in their youthful hopes and ambitions, and, in a few cases, on account of early indiscretions have found it convenient if not quite necessary to leave the home of their boyhood and try a new deal in the "Rockies." Here, many out of their uncouth surroundings have built up a strong, vigorous, intellectual manhood, and have hewn every step of the road to wealth, fame and fortune. While thousands, unable to withstand the temptations that are so well known to be a characteristic of the far west, have drifted away from their early moorings, being drawn into the vortex and are now speeding headlong down the broad declivity that leads to ruin. Here one sees character more as it really is, stripped of the formalities and masks that the trammels of society impose. The gambler follows his vocation without fear of losing his standing in society, while whiskey selling is recognized as legitimate and honorable, and the most influential politicians and business men are downright drunkards. This may be considered as putting it strong but it is nevertheless true. Here would be a good field of labor for our temperance friends, and columns might be written upon the dissipation and drunkenness which are so prevalent in every mountain town. I am often reminded of Mark Twain's accurate description of western life, because, as Kit Carson used to say, "I've been thar myself."

The holidays passed off quite pleasantly here and were celebrated in that free and easy western style, only known in the gold lined spurs of the "Rockies." Among the elite New Year's day, was attended with no little gaiety, the fine turnouts together with the jingling of sleigh bells, gave the city an air of fashionable life for one day at least.

The year just closed has been a prosperous one for Summit county, its mines having returned more than three hundred per cent. upon the capital invested, making it the third county in the state in point of mineral output. The Ontario, a mine but recently opened, runs $55,423 to the ton, and is said to be the richest producing mine in the world, while a number of others are turning out valuable ore in large quantities. The future of the Ten Mile and Blue river region is assured, and Breckenridge, in the best informed circles, both in and out of this state, is receiving more attention than all the rest of her sister camps, save Leadville, combined. May her future be as pure as the mountain stream around the head waters of which her birth place nestles.

THE PRACTICAL DIFFERENCE BETWEEN POETRY AND PHILOSOPHY.

It sounds very poetic to say "Man's inhumanity to man makes countless thousands mourn," but why not apply the principle to the more practical side of the subject and render the quotation thus:—"Swayne's Ointment on account of stopping the itching caused by the Piles has made countless thousands well and happy." There would be sound logic in this but poets are never cheerful, are they?

To promote domestic harmony, use Cobb's Little Podophyllin Pills. Its office is to harmonize all conflicts, external or internal. Only 25 cents.

THE SUN.

NEW YORK, 1882.

THE SUN for 1882 will make its fifteenth annual revolution under the present management, shining, as always, for all, big and little, mean and gracious, contented and unhappy, Republican and Democratic, depraved and virtuous, intelligent and obtuse. The Sun's light is for mankind and womankind of every sort; but its genial warmth is for the good, while it pours hot discomfort on the blistering backs of the persistently wicked.

The Sun of 1868 was a newspaper of a new kind. It discarded many of the forms, and a multitude of the superfluous words and phrases of ancient journalism. It undertook to report in a fresh, succinct, unconventional way all the news of the world, omitting no event of human interest, and commenting upon affairs with the fearlessness of absolute independence. The success of this experiment was the success of The Sun. It effected a permanent change in the style of American newspapers. Every important journal established in this country in the dozen years past has been modelled after The Sun. Every important journal already existing has been modified and bettered by the force of The Sun's example.

The Sun of 1882 will be the same outspoken, truthtelling, and interesting newspaper.

By a liberal use of the means which an abundant prosperity affords, we shall make it better than ever before.

We shall print all the news, putting it in readable shape, and measuring its importance, not by the traditional yardstick, but by its real interest to the people. Distance from Printing House Square is not the first consideration with The Sun. Whenever anything happens worth reporting we get the particulars, whether it happens in Brooklyn or in Bokhara.

In politics we have decided opinions; and are accustomed to express them in language that can be understood. We say what we think about men and events. That habit is the only secret of The Sun's political course.

The Weekly Sun gathers into eight pages the best matter of the seven daily issues. An Agricultural Department of unequalled merit, full market reports, and a liberal proportion of literary scientific and domestic intelligence complete The Weekly Sun, and make it the best newspaper for the farmer's household that was ever printed.

Who does not know and read and like The Sunday Sun, each number of which is a Golconda of interesting literature, with the best poetry of the day, prose every line worth reading, news, humor—matter enough to fill a good sized book, and infinitely more varied and entertaining than any book, big or little?

If our idea of what a newspaper should be pleases you, send for The Sun.

Our terms are as follows:

For the daily Sun, a four page sheet of twenty-eight columns, the price by mail, post paid, is 55 cents a month, or $6.50 a year; or, including the Sunday paper, an eight page sheet of fifty-six columns, the price is 65 cents per month, or $7 70 a year, postage paid.

The Sunday edition of The Sun is also furnished separately at $1.20 a year, postage paid.

The price of the Weekly Sun, eight pages, fifty-six columns, is $1 a year, postage paid. For clubs of ten sending $10 we will send an extra copy free. Address I. W. ENGLAND, Publisher of The Sun, New York City

Mr C. W. Hicks, of [illegible] Valley, Duchess county, N. Y., the son of E. B. Hicks, whose name may have appeared in this journal in connection with an article similar to this, was, like his father, afflicted with stone in the bladder, only that his case was more serious than his father's. On the appearance of the disease the father advised the son to write to Dr David Kennedy, of Rondout, N. Y. who, he said, would tell him what to do. Dr Kennedy replied suggesting the use of "Kennedy's Favorite Remedy" which had worked so successfully in his father's case. Mr Hicks who had been assured by the local physicans that they could do nothing more for him, tried 'Favorite Remedy,' at a venture. After two weeks use of it he passed a stone ¾ of an inch long and of the thickness of a pipe stem. Since then he has had no symptoms of the return of the trouble. Here is a sick man healed. What better results could have been expected? What greater benefit could medical science confer? The end was gained; that was surely enough. Dr Kennedy assures the public, by a reputation which he cannot afford to forfeit or imperil, that the "Favorite Remedy" does invigorate the blood, cures Liver, Kidney and Bladder complaints, as well as those diseases and weaknesses peculiar to females. Dr Kennedy's Favorite Remedy" for sale by all druggists. 29w4

Lathrop's Summer Song.

We have bought two new show cases,
Pass not by, buy and try;
Candies, toys, cigars and vases,
Pass not by, buy and try.
Fishing poles and tackle new,
Fine as ever spread to view,
And a five cent counter too,
Pass not by, buy and try.
Croquet sets and sets of dishes,
Pass not by, buy and try;
Potato bugs for luring fishes
Pass not by, buy and try,
Deep Rock Water cheap and [illegible],
All the fruit each season brings,
And a thousand other things,
Pass not by, buy and try.

DIRECTIONS

For Catarrh, Fever, in the Head, &c., with little finger, a particle of Balm into the nostrils; draw strong breaths through the nose. It will be absorbed, cleansing and healing the diseased membrane.

For Deafness,

apply a particle into the ear.

ELY'S CREAM BALM

HAVING gained an enviable local reputation, displacing all other preparations in the vicinity of discovery, is, on its merits alone recognized as a wonderful remedy wherever known. A fair trial will convince the most skeptical of its curative powers. It effectually cleanses the nasal passages of Catarrhal virus, causing healthy secretions, allays inflammation and irritation, protects the membranal linings of the head from additional colds, completely heals the sores and restores the sense of taste and smell. Beneficial results are realized by a few applications. A thorough treatment as directed will cure Catarrh. As a household remedy for cold in the head it is unequaled. The Balm is easy to use and agreeable. Sold by druggists at 50 cents. On receipt of 50 cents will mail a package.

Send for circular, with full information.

RESCUED FROM DEATH

William J. Coughlin of Somerville, Mass., says: In the fall of 1876 I was taken with bleeding of the lungs followed by a severe cough. I lost my appetite and flesh and was confined to my bed. In 1877 I was admitted to the hospital. The doctors said I had a hole in my lung as big as a half dollar. At one time a report went around that I was dead. I gave up hope, but a friend told me of DR WILLIAM HALL'S BALSAM FOR THE LUNGS. I got a bottle, when to my surprise I began to feel better, and to day I feel better than for three years past.

I write this hoping every one afflicted with diseased Lungs will take DR WILLIAM HALL'S BALSAM and be convinced that CONSUMPTION CAN BE CURED. I can positively say it has done more good than all the other medicines I have taken since my sickness.

Have Courage.

Have courage to face the difficulty, lest it kick you harder than you bargained for. Difficulties, like thieves, often disappear at a glance. Have the courage to leave a convivial party at the proper hour for doing so, however the sacrifice, and to stay away from one upon the slightest ground for objections however great the temptation to go. Have the courage to do without that which you do not need, however much you admire it. Have the courage to speak your mind when it is necessary that you should do so, and hold your tongue when it is better that you should do so, and hold your tongue when it is better that you should be silent. Have the courage to speak to a poor friend in a seedy coat, even in the street, and when a rich one is nigh. The effort is less than many people think it to be, and the act is worthy of a king. Have the courage to admit you have been in the wrong, and you will remove the fact in the mind of others, putting a desirable impression in the place of an unfavorable one. Have the courage to adhere to the first resolution when you cannot change it for a better, and to abandon it even at the eleventh hour upon conviction. [Albany Argus.

A rural subscriber wants to know if it makes any difference in the lastingness of fence posts, whether you see them "top end up" or the same way trees grow, or "top end down." In setting a hen, however, there is a vital importance in this distinction, which the careful poulterer would do well to observe. [Burlington Hawkeye.

Nobody's Boy.

E. D. R. BIANCIARDI IN THE BOSTON HERALD.

Yes, he is dirty and ragged and poor.
Velvet and satin must shrink from his touch
Thrust him away ere he reaches the door
Or your fine carriage his fingers will smutch.
Yet there are two sides to all things, my friend;
Pity should quicken where sin would destroy.
Wretched, and going to a wretcheder end,
This wicked gamin is Nobody's boy

True, if your lackey should press him too hard,
Some naughty word would slip out, I dare say.
Fine parlor language is not the reward
Of such rough training as fighting one's way;
Sad, is it not, a blasphemer so young?
Dreadful, our delicate ears to annoy?
Yet, while his judgment is still on your tongue,
Pause—and Remember he's Nobody's boy.

Nobody's boy? Yes, a sinner's, no doubt:
Born to a heritage only of shame,
He and his mother despised and cast out,
That no dishonor may sully a name.
Just retribution on one side, 'tis true:
Yet, ye who know what is motherhood's joy
Might understand how a hope could pierce through
Her sin to the mother of Nobody's boy.

Say she is dead and her child is a waif,
Swept by the wind at Society's feet;
Ye who have children all sheltered and safe,
Is it a question embodied you meet?
Does the face haunt you? Why, what do you do
To banish from pleasure this grain of alloy?
What if God stooped to the sharing with you
Of his great thoughts towards Nobody's boy?

Stupid Teaching.

There is a vast amount of humbug in the system of common school education, and it is not strange that many parents are adopting the plan of having their children instructed by teachers at home, where they can carefully watch the child's training and see that what time is devoted to instruction is turned to account. A disgusted father writes to a Philadelphia journal saying that the other day he heard his little girl sobbing over a rule which she was trying to commit to memory, in the following words to-wit:

"Rule for short division, rule dash one write the divisor at the left of the dividend, semicolon, begin at the left hand, comma, and write the quotient beneath, period. Paragraph. 2. If there is a remainder after any division, comma, regard it as prefixed to the next figure, comma, and divide as before, period. If any partial dividend is less than the divisor, comma, prefix it to the next figure, comma, and write a cipher in the quotient, period. Paragraph proof period dash, multiply the quotient by the divisor, comma, and add the remainder, comma, if any, comma, to the product, period.

After reading these painfully [illegible] paragraphs the amazed parent made inquiry and found that the pupils—children under ten—were required to study rules in this way in order that they might be able to write them out and "point" them, not correctly, but according to the book.

"I also found," he adds, "that if a comma was left out, though the sense remained unchanged, the pupil suffered as much in loss of marks as though she had committed a vital blunder. Thanks to home instruction, my little girl understands the rules of arithmetic, but she cannot learn them by rote in this parrot fashion, and suffer accordingly. Can we have nothing done in this matter to relieve our children from utterly useless memorizing, that leaves them at the end of a few years with weakened minds and no taste for study? I got a letter the other day from a man who had graduated from a university. He could neither write nor spell correctly (spelling goes 'gose'), and yet at school, a few years ago, he could glibly recite all the rules of grammar, and was by no means an indifferent pupil."

Fashion Notes.

A combination of copper color and moss green in satin brocade is the latest in favor.

The silky "Aurillac" and Spanish blonde laces, in cream white are among the favorites for garnishing velvet corsages.

Silver brocade combined with ciel blue satin, and silver and pearl bead trimmings, is much in vogue for evening wear.

The richest toilettes are those with velvet basque and train, with an embroidered tablier of elaborate Japanese design.

The [illegible]-necked basque, with half-long sleeves, a flowing train and petticoat front, is the general design for reception dresses.

Walking toilettes can be brightened up for evening wear by the addition of white lace or corsage, and by putting two or three ostrich tips of a becoming color in the hair.

Black velvet, combined with light blue brocaded satin, over a petticoat front of cream satin embroidered, would be a suitable costume for ladies who are still young.

A small panache of short ostrich tips with a standing aigrette of heron's feathers in the center, the whole scarcely larger than a pompon, is the fashionable head dress of the season.

Shrimp pink, and white dresses are most in favor among young ladies. In satin de lyon, with tulle draperies in which silver or chenille threads are woven the effect is very dainty.

Wool dresses in delicate tints, with trimmings of watered silk and laces in full gathered ruffles; or embroidery in open work patterns done along the selvedge of the goods and are much worn by young ladies at home receptions.

A basque to be worn with either a black satin or a silk dress skirt should be made of ruby plush, with a narrow vest of old gold brocaded satin, the plush to roll back from it en revers, and ties of old gold satin ribbon across the vest at waist line. Brocaded cuffs, and full frills of lace at the wrists, and down the front completes this elegant garment.

TO CONSUMPTIVES.

"Golden Medical Discovery" is a concentrated, potent alterative, or blood-cleansing remedy, that wins golden opinions from all who use it for any humor, from the common pimple, blotch, or eruption, to the formidable scrofulous swelling, or ulcer. Internal fever, soreness and ulceration, yield to its benign influences. Consumption, which is but a scrofulous affection of the lungs, may in its early stages, be cured by a free use of this God-given remedy. Now, I's got a notion in my head dat when you come to die,
An' stan' de 'zamination in de Cote House in de sky,
You'll be 'stonished at de questions dat de angel's gwine to ax
When he gets you on de witness stan' an' pin you to de fac's;
'Cause he'll ax you mighty closely 'bout your doin's in de nights,
An' de watermillion question's gwine to bodder you a sight!
Den your eyes'll open wider dan dey ebber done befo',
When he chat's you 'bout a chicken scrape that happened long ago!
De angels on de picket line er long de Milky Way
Keeps a watchin' what you're dribin' at' an' hearing what you say,
No matter what you want to do, no matter whar you's gwine,
Dey's mighty ap' to find it out an' pass it 'long de line;
An' of'n at de meetin' when you make a fuss an' laugh,
Why, dey send de news a kitin' by de golden telegraph;
Den de angel in de orfis, what's settin' by de gate,
Jes' reads de message wid a look, an' claps it on de slate!
Den you better do your duty well an' keep your conscience clear,
An' keep a lookin' straight ahead an' watchin' whar you steer;

CROOKED WAYS.

LIPPINCOTT'S MAGAZINE.

Like a great many other young men—and women too, for that matter—I was once afflicted with cacoethes scribendi. Of course greater evils may have befallen me. I might have been seized with a passion for whiskey or gambling; but still my cacoethes scribendi was serious enough. During my college days the symptoms showed themselves plainly; but the malady did not assume its true and awful proprtions until after I had taken my degree. Then, forsooth, it fastened upon me like a leech, and before many months elapsed it overmastered me completely. In accordance with my mother's wish, I went to Dundas, ostensibly to read law with my uncle, but it was a mere pretense of law reading, for the mornings that I ought to have spent over Blackstone was devoted to the composition of a novel and the afternoons to polishing off some poems. Uncle Dick shook his head gravely and remonstrated, sometimes gravely and sometimes in anger.

"That scribbling will never amount to anything" he would say contemptuously. This was hard to bear; but my lofty aspirations sustained me and firm in my belief of ultimate success, I scribbled on and ever, and bombarded all the magazines in the country with my manuscripts. The magazines did not open their columns to me, and I fell back at last upon weekly newspapers, and especially upon The Boston Palladium. The journal printed my essays, and a certain assistant editor, whose initials were "F. B. S." sent me polite notes from time to time. It was something to see my productions in print; it would have been more had these productions once in a while brought me a check. But they never did; they elicited only polite notes from F. B. S. Finally, I wrote a letter to the assistant editor upon the subject, and by return post I received a reply. It was sent to my private box at the postoffice, but, to my great amusement was directed to "Jane Bell," instead of "John." My handwriting was not very distinct and perhaps a little feminine, and the signature upon which I rather prided myself, certainly left an open question whether John or Jane were meant, The note, too, began—

"Miss Bell:—In reply to your question I would say this journal pays only its regular corps of writers. We are glad to receive your articles and perhaps later may make adequate compensation therefor; but as a young writer, it would be wiser for you to think at present only of gaining a foothold. You have an excellent chance of success in the end; but much patience is necessary at the outset.

"Please say whether I shall direct future communications to John Bell, Miss Bell or Mrs. Bell. At present I do not venture to give you any title.

Very truly yours, F. B. SCRIVEN.

This letter at once amused and piqued me. It was pleasant and rather encouraging, but it was plain the writer took me for an impecunious young woman, whereas the truth was I had a fair income of my own, and was a six foot, mustached specimen of masculinity. The idea of playing the role of Miss Jane Bell tickled my fancy, and therefore giving my imagination free rein, upon the spur of the moment I sat down and wrote as follows:

"Mr. Scriven—At present I also am [illegible], for I do not know whether [illegible] Madam, [illegible]. The last title [illegible]

[illegible] were good enough to print they were good enough to be paid for. It seems I was mistaken; but to show you that I take your advice, I send you another essay. I will at least try to secure a foothold, and pray that greater success may follow.

"I am my dear Madam, Monsieur or Madamoselle Scriven, Sincerely Yours,
JANE BELL.

Laughing in my sleeve, I sent my communication off and planned that. if the editor sent me a friendly reply, I would open a correspondence in my role of Miss Jane Bell and fool F. B. Scriven as never man had been fooled before. Judge then of my dismay when I received a letter in what I knew was Scriven's handwriting, but not written on office paper, and signed Frances Bertram Scriven. "A woman, by Jove!" I exclaimed there and then in the postoffice, whereby a small boy, who was standing nigh, nearly swallowed in astonishment the postage stamp he was carfully licking. I thrust the letter in my pocket and did not read it until I was safely at home. Thus the missive ran:

"Dear Miss Bell—Your piquant letter prompts me to write you a reply, not as an assistant editor, but as a woman like yourself, who is toiling up the path that leads to Parnassus. I might have known you were a woman, and a young one at that, because, although there is a touch of masculine strength in your essays and poems, still there is, too, a sweetness that is only feminine. I think that women more often have this flavor of masculininity than men have anything of that tenderness which is essentially and purely feminine. Were I in a position of authority, I should soon dismiss the cut and dried hack writers whose contributions, although smooth and polished, lack the freshness, the spontaniety, which is characteristic of the contributions we sometimes receive from unknown writers and notably from you, but you see I am only an assistant editor, and a person of no consequence at all, except as I am useful to do the work, all the glory of which goes to the distinguished individuals whose names are emblazoned at the head of the paper. There! that sounds bitter I am afraid; but my dear Miss Bell the fates have not been so kind to me as to you and it is not for fame I write, but for the wherewithal to keep me fed and clothed. What makes it perhaps harder is that I have known what it is to have my bread and butter fresh and sweet—ay, and honey with it too—and. therefore, the thin slices are doled out to me now taste the drier by comparison.

"Forgive me for boring you with so much about myself. Pray write again. Your luxurious stationery, with the faint, delicate perfume pervading it, is in itself a delight.

Sincerely yours,
"MISS FRANCES BERTRAM SCREVIN."

As I read this letter I felt myself a scoundrel. My first impulse was to write a letter of confession to Miss Screvin; but the desire to keep up the correspondence and try my hand at composing letters that should be sweetly feminine overcame my scruples and I sent off the following reply:

Dear Miss Scriven—Instead of boring me, the glimpse you gave of your life interested me more than I can tell. But at the same time, the contrast between your life and mine made me envious. Perhaps your lot is a hard one, but it is at least brave and independent. Here am I, an only daughter, petted and spoiled to a shameful degree and bound by fetters of luxury. Yes, I envy you. Sitting here this morning in my silly pink curtained boudoir, with a Dresden shepherdess simpering at me from the top of my escretoire, I feel my idle, luxurious life hemming me in and overpowering me, as the perfume of tuberoses makes heavy and sickening the atmosphere of a room that should be flung open to the fresh air and sunshine. I would change places with you to-day if I could."

When I reached this point of my letter, I read over approvingly what I had written. Arrived at the lines descriptive of my imaginative boudoir I smiled as my glances fell on a bootjack in one corner and the shaving apparatus in another. Glancing at the place where the Dresden Shepherdess ought to have been, my eye fell instead upon a pipe which I took down and filled, and then resumed my writing with considerable complacency.

"This may sound to you rather school girlish, and I may as well confess that it is not many years—perhaps months would be more accurate—since I left the precincts of a finishing school. Finishing school. Indeed! Much I learned there besides the art of doing up my hair! However, the defects of my education I must remedy myself, and I try every day to devote a few hours to serious study. But it is very hard to seclude myself long enough to accomplish anything. People call; I must go to garden parties; I must hold solemn conclave with the milliner and dress maker; in short, I have constant demands of a most frivolous nature upon my time.

"All this you will probably laugh at and lest I write yet more foolishly, I will bring this letter to a close. If you are not quite disgusted with me, do write again soon. Faithfully yours,
"JANE BELL."

I may as well confess that I thought this letter a successful imitation of some of the epistles that I had myself recived from feminine hands. It sounded enthusiatic and very "Missish," and I sent it off that afternoon with a bold heart.

"Jack," quoth my uncle, who met me as I came from the postoffice, "I verily believe you are making an ass of yourself over some girl. I don't believe it is the muses you are courting; it's no muse; it is a miss." And with this he passed on chuckling at his own wit.

As the days went on, however, my uncle's words seemed in a fair way to prove true. I thought only of Miss Screvin. My novel I had left untouched, and my rhyming dictionary accumulated dust slowly but surely. Fled were my visions of astonishing the world with my genius. I lived only for the mail from Boston.

As I re-read the letters I received from Miss Scriven, I can make some excuse for my infatuation. They were frank and outspoken, and sometimes, indeed, tinged with cynicism; but through them there breathed a sympathy, a tenderness that touches me even now as I read them over. Finally at my solicitation, she sent me her photograph, which [illegible]

She was not a beauty, I saw that, but she had an earnest, interesting face that grew upon me every day.

Little by little I gave myself up to thoughts of her by day and dreams of her by night. Her letters I awaited with feverish impatience, and if one were delayed I was in a torment. I make no excuses for my folly, dear sir madam; but pray remember that I was only one and twenty then, and had fed myself plentifully with novels and poetry.

The correspondence was kept up all the summer and autumn: but in December there befell what to me was an awful calamity, Miss Scriven did not write. I sent imploring letter after letter, but no response gladdened me.

"Has she jilted you?" said Uncle Dick, heartlessly, when he noted my pale face. In truth, I could not eat nor sleep. I was consumed with fear and anxiety. What could have befallen her?

I endured it just for ten days, and then I packed my satchel and went to Boston. Bah! what a day it was when I arrived there! It had snowed a little, and then a thin, cold rain began to drizzle down despairingly. The weather suited me better than the garish splendor of the hotel, and I wandered forth that evening, half unconsciously wending my way toward the street in which Miss Scriven boarded. I found myself opposite the house. From an upper window a light struggled faintly between the closed shutters and thrilled me through and through. Perhaps she was there, ill and alone, uncared for, save by the mercenary landlady, or worse still by a slatternly servant. I went up stairs and rang the bell. A slip of a girl opened the door to me, and I handed her my card, saying mechanically: "Ask Miss Scriven if she will see me."

I trusted that the name, John Bell, would perhaps lead her to suppose that I was a cousin or a father of her friend.

The slip of a servant maid looked at the card and then at me. "Francis Scriven?" she said interrogatively.

"Yes," I replied. Then I took the card, ran my pencil through the engraved name and scrawled my illegible signature below it. The servant took the card again and skurried away, leaving me standing there in the cold dark entry.

It was several minutes before she reappeared, and then it was only to say in a sing-song tone: "Three flights up: first door to the right."

I went up three flights and rapped at the first door to the right.

A voice called out: "Come in."

I entered a medium sized, plainly furnished room that was redolent of tobacco, with which was mingled a faint smell of whiskey. There were two arm-chairs, a large table, covered with a faded cloth, and an old fashioned horse hair lounge, from which, as I entered, a young man rose. He was thin and hollow-eyed, and a beard of several days' growth made him look, to say the least, unkempt. "Mr. Bell, I presume," he said, offering me his hand then drawing up a chair for me.

"I have called to see Miss Scriven," said I.

"Have you, indeed?" he replied in a nasty, sneering way.

It flashed through me at once. It was her husband! She had deceived me.

"May I ask if you are any relation to Miss Jane Bell, of Dundas, Washington, County, New York postoffice box 462?" he continued, in the same sneering way.

"I stuttered and stammered, tried to lie, and nearly choked myself to death. I wanted to be diplomatic. I wanted to shield her from his anger.

Who the devil are you anyway? he exclaimed.

"I—I am John Bell," I answered; and I called to see your sister. Is she ill?"

"I haven't any sister," said he, nonchanantly; "that is, I am my own sister, and she has just escaped pneumonia."

The truth flashed upon me. "You are an imposter, sir!" I exclaimed.

"Your sister doesn't think so," said he, complacently.

"I haven't any sister," said I in my turn.

He wheeled sharply about: "Who is Miss Bell, then?"

"I am the only Miss Bell that exists," I answered grimly.

"What!" he exclaimed; "You are the petted darling who wanted to be a poet and an essayist and the Lord only knows what all?" You are the only child of wealthy parents? You are the lovely creature who sits in a pink boudoir and writes verses with a gold pen and on perfumed paper?"

Yes," said I desperately.

Scriven dropped into a chair and roared. "A sell all around," said he. And then he laughed until he cried, while I quietly stole away back to the hotel, a sadder but a wiser man.

A stone bridge to be built at Minneapolis bids fair to become one of the notable structures in the world. It will consist of sixteen 60 feet spans and four 100 feet spans, and, including the shore pieces, will have a total length of 1,800 feet. It will support two railway tracks at a height of over sixty feet above the water, will run diagonally across the river below St. Anthony's Fall. The cost is estimated at nearly $500,000.

A Small Boy on Tobacco.

Tobacco grows something like cabbage, but I never saw none boiled, although I have eaten boiled cabbage with vinegar on it, and have heard men say that cigars that was given to them on election day for nothing was cabbage leaves. Tobacco stores are mostly kept by wooden Injuns, who stand at the doors and try to fool little boys by offering them a bunch of cigars which are made of wood also.

Hogs don't like tobacco; neither do I. I tried to smoke a cigar once, and it made me feel like epsom salts. Tobacco was invented by a man named Walter Raleigh. When the people first saw him smoking, they thought he was a steamboat; they were frightened.

My sister Nancy is a girl. I do not know whether she likes tobacco or not. There is a young man named Leroy who comes to see her. I guess she likes Leroy. He was standing on the steps one night, and had a cigar in his mouth, and he said he didn't know as she would like it, and she said, 'Leroy the perfume is agreeable'. But next morning when my big brother Tom lighted his pipe, Nancy said, 'get out of the house you horrid creature, the smell of tobacco makes me sick.'

Snuff is Indian meal made out of tobacco. I took a little snuff once, and then I sneezed.

ADVICE TO MOTHERS.

A colored woman, writing from Akron, O., and signing herself "Anxious Mother," said she would very much like Brother Gardner's advice on how to educate her boy and for what profession. He held the letter in his hand for awhile, and then smoothing out the wrinkles, he replied:

"Dar am one thing this woman seems to hev forgotten, an' dat am de fack dat her boy belongs to de cull'd race. Claim what you will an' talk as you may, dat fack am a stone wall built across his path frew life. We am not naterally a keen, sharp people. None ob us are purty. witty or accomplished. We doan' take to books, oratory, poetry or de artistic. De man who says we do am a base flatterer, wid an objeck in view. De Lawd not only did polish us up, but he left us in de shade in color. We can't be white an' we can't mingle wid white people. De white race am sartin to fill all de purfeshuns an' take de best places in de work shops an' foundries. Dis bein de case I shall say to dat mudder, an' freu her to all odder cull'd wim, min in de lan', larn your boys to read, to write, to cast up figgers, to be honest, trusty an' faithful. THE NATION'S CHARACTERISTICS.

Shrewdness and incredulity are the predominant characteristics of the American people. They will take, we should say, an article that is not meritorious. When Dr. Swayne launched his Ointment for the Piles, that itch so intensely at night, on a sea of human suffering, the people [illegible]

Items of Interest.

After a wedding party had assembled in a church at Bloomington, Ill., the father of the girl offered her $500 if she would back out. She took the money, remained at home, and sent word to the minister to dismiss the assembly.

A woman created a commotion at Wadena, Minn., by wildly chasing a big dog and crying: "Stop him! he has swallowed a twenty dollar bill." An obliging butcher promptly caught the beast, killed him and recovered the money.

A member of the Vermont Legislature has been fined under a statute which his vote helped to make, for keeping an unlicensed dog. He is now convinced that the law is unconstitutional, and will test it in the courts.

Benjamin Philibert has just died in St. Louis. He is worth $800,000. His other notable distinctions were that he had not been out of the city in sixty-three years, and has never ridden in a steamboat or steam railroad car.

A breach of promise case in Illinois will present a novel question for legal decision. The plaintiff was a good looking girl when the engagement was made. Two years of courtship passed. Then small pox disfigured her face and the defendant declined to marry her. He claims that in view of the deterioration in personal appearance since he made the promise, he is not in law bound to keep it.

A farmer went extensively into bee keeping at Fairview, Pa. Honey material was scarce last summer, and the bees spread over the neighborhood in search of it, stealing sweet stuffs in the kitchens, and stinging many persons. A suit was brought against the owner, and the question whether he was maintaining a nuisance, or has simply engaged in a lawful industry, is to be settled in court.

Steam vessels for whaling have proved highly profitable. The first one ever sent out from the Pacific coast was the Mary and Helen. which cleared last year enough to pay her entire cost and $40,000 besides. The second venture, that of the Belvidere, has just come back from a voyage of only six months with $100,000 worth of oil above the investment. The great success of these steamers is likely to revive the business of whaling.

Ex-Governor R. G. McCormick has purchased 15,000 acres of land in the state of Colima, on the Pacific coast of Mexico, and is going into the business of coffee culture on a large scale. He has 40,000 trees in bearing now, and expects to plant 12,000 a year for four years to come. In order to encourage this industry the state will remit for a period of ten years all duty on the coffee and all taxes on the land where it is grown.

A BOY'S LUCK.

The Norristown (Pa.) Herald recently referred among others, to the following cases of special interest. They are their own commentary. Mr. Samuel C. Nyce resides at 308 Marshall street, and holds the responsible position of journal clerk in the Pennsylvania legislature, at Harrisburg. While Mr. Nyce and family were in the country recently, his boy, aged three years, fell and broke his leg. He recovered, but a very troublesome stiffness set in and he could scarcely use his leg. The injured limb was rubbed several times with St Jacob's Oil, and the stiffness was so much reduced that the boy was able to use his leg freely. Dr. Knipe said it was the stiffness of St. Jacob's Oil that cured the stiffness. Mr. Nyce himself used the Great German Remedy for toothache with good effect, and also for a sprain and [illegible]

[illegible] CORNELL has issued a proclamation for a special election on [illegible] in the Eighteenth district choosing a successor to the late Senator Wagner.

JUDGE INGALLS at Troy, yesterday, decided that land owners on the banks of navigable streams have the right to stake out as much ice fronting their land as they can store on the premises, provided they erect a barricade in accordance with the law.

WHILE Oscar Wilde, the esthete, was walking in the streets of Washington during a rain storm he was asked what he thought of the weather. His reply was couched in the most beautiful aesthetic vocabulary: "This weather is quite too too, and utterly awfully awful."

THE following States will elect governors this year: Alabama, Arkansas, California, Colorado, Connecticut, Delaware, Georgia, Kansas, Kentucky, Maine, Massachusetts, Michigan, Nebraska, Nevada, New Hampshire, New York, Pennsylvania, South Carolina, Tennessee and Texas.

AT CHICAGO, Ill., Henrietta Straze ate raw ham at a wedding a month ago and died Friday of trichinosis in great agony. There were 40,000 parasites found in a square inch of one of her muscles. A number of other persons who partook of the ham have shown evidence of the disease, but most of them have been relieved.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., has been undergoing a scourge from high water. The water in the Cumberland river reached a point that caused it to overflow the streets, cutting off railroad communication, moving buildings and causing great hardship among the poorer class. The total damage to the city is estimated at $400,000.

THE Catholic diocese of Albany has been divided. A new diocese has been created by taking part of the diocese of Albany and a part of the diocese of Rochester. The new one will be called the diocese of Syracuse. Strenuous efforts have been made to secure the formation of a new diocese. Parties in Utica have been the principal movers in the matter. It is very probable that Utica will be in the new diocese.

INQUIRY into the causes which led to the recent disaster at Spuyten Duyvil reveals damaging testimony against the brakeman, Melius. E. B. Valentine who was on the rear car of the train and whose son and daughter-in-law were killed said that when the whistle of the Tarrytown train was sounded Melius was about six feet from his train with two lanterns. He ran only about forty feet before the collision occurred.

THE plan proposed by Amasa J. Parker, jr., to prevent accidents like that at Spuyten Duyvil is at least worth consideration. In place of the lantern signal now in vogue, which even in fair weather can be seen but a few hundred yards, the use of fireworks like Roman candles and sky-rockets is recommended. Exploded by track patrolmen, or by train hands on belated cars, such signals could be seen for miles, and easily understood if once reduced to a system.

AT THE reunion of the Association of the Army of Northern Virginia in New Orleans last week, Jefferson Davis was present and made a short speech, in which he said the cause was not lost, but only sleeping. Referring to the stirring events of the late war in which those before him had participated, he said:—"You have done your duty in the past, and may God spare you to do it in the future should ever the necessity again arise."

It's about time that Jeff was making up his mind that the cause was rocked to sleep with Union bullets—and consequently there will be no waking.

HON. CLARKSON N. POTTER died at his residence in New York Monday at 9 a. m. from Bright's disease and apoplexy. His age was fifty-six. Mr. Potter was a lawyer and politician of national repute. He served four terms in Congress. In 1876 he was the regular democratic candidate for Lieutenant-governor but was defeated. Mr. Potter was a strong believer in the doctrine of State rights, and in one of his speeches said: "I am almost an extreme State rights man. If I were to make a constitution, I would provide in it a clause whereby a certain fixed proportion of States might go out of the Union whenever they pleased. I am convinced that whenever the interests of a great section prompt them out of such a union they should be allowed to go."

THE whiskey question has been entered into with earnestness in Syracuse. The liquor men have formed a protective association and adopted a series of resolutions condemning as officious the action of temperance people to drive the traffic to the wall. The whiskeyites claim that the revenue derived from whiskey and tobacco alone keep the wheels of the government in steady motion.

The temperance people point to the fact that crime, poverty and suffering cause, the revenue derived from it to in various ways palliate it, or the amount received will not reimburse the country in enforcing the laws broken through its agency.

The temperance people point with pride to the results of prohibition in Kansas and ask their temperance brethren to lend a hand in repealing existing license laws and driving the accursed bane from the land.

When the thought of abolishing slavery from the United States was first agitated it was looked upon as an insane undertaking by a few meddlesome people. There is nothing impossible and nothing wrought except by hard, united and earnest work.

CONDUCTOR HANDFORD of the ill-fated train at Spuyten Duyvil when before the coroner said the accident was due to whiskey—that a passenger pulled the air brake cord. He also said Assemblymen, Senators, ex-coroners and other public men were drunk and riotous. Legislators on the train say:

Assemblyman Hearn said at New York Saturday, "I saw the car 'Vanderbilt' and saw nothing of any intoxication or disorderly conduct by members of the Legislature previous to the Spuyten Duyvil accident. Neither did I see any one tamper with the bell cord. There was no liquor in the palace car 'Empire.'"

Assemblyman VanAllen said: "I was in the car 'Empire.' A moment before the shock, there were four members sitting in the compartment behind me, conversing and singing; cannot say that I saw any liquor drank."

Assemblyman Crane said: "I did not see any Senators or Members of Assembly drinking in my car. I sat in the smoking car."

Assemblyman Sheehy said he "did not see a drop of liquor drank in the car 'Empire.'"

Assemblyman Livingston said: "I was in the car next the smoker; did not see any drinking by members of the Legislature."

Senator Jacobs said: He knew there was no liquor in the cars 'Idlewild,' 'Empire' and Minnehaha.'"

Assemblyman Shanly said he "saw no drinking by members of the Legislature."

Assemblyman Morrison said: "I was in the 'Red Jacket' parlor car; saw no disorderly conduct or carousing; there was some trouble with the air brakes coming down."

GARDEN SEEDS DIRECT FROM THE GROWER.

We are in receipt of Harris' Moreton Farm Seed catalogue for 1882, containing a list of choice field, garden and flower seeds grown and for sale by Joseph Harris, Moreton Farm, Rochester, N. Y.

Mr. Harris is an old seed grower and has had unusual opportunities for obtaining and testing all the new varieties of farm and garden seeds. He is a well known editor and author of thirty years standing. He was for many years editor and proprietor of the Genesee Farmer and afterwards one of the editors of the American Agriculturalist. He has a fine farm of nearly 300 acres near Rochester, N. Y. His "Walks and Talks on the Farm," have made his farm and his neighbor, "The Deacon," familiar to thousands of agricultural readers. He is the author of "Harris on the Pig" and "Talks on Manures." In 1866 he was elected the first resident Professor of Agriculture in Cornell University, but preferred to continue to "Walk and Talk" on his own farm. His seeds are exceptionally good. They are warranted fresh, of the choicest strains and sure to grow. Mr. Harris informs us that he will be glad to send his catalogue for 1882 with directions for cultivation free to every reader of THE TIMES who will send his name and postoffice address on a postal card. Send for a catalogue and then order some seeds. You will not regret it. Address, JOSEPH HARRIS, Moreton Farm, Rochester, N. Y.

SPECIAL COLLECTOR'S NOTICE.

[illegible]

[illegible] a man owned by the latter gentleman battered him in the head and it is thought two of his ribs are broken.

Charles Strond of Canastota fell dead in a law office in Syracuse, Thursday. He was 58 years of age and a well known contractor, having had large jobs on the Central railroad and Erie canal.

Charles Listman of Syracuse is working a large gang of men on Oneida lake, filling his ice house at Brewerton. Monday night they had over two tiers harvested. The ice is from 8 to 12 inches in thickness.

The twins, Garfield and Arthur, of Gilbert's Mills, are reported seriously ill of congestion of the lungs. They are almost exactly alike, not one of the family having yet been able to tell them apart except by marks that are kept on their clothing.

On January 15, James O'Brien, of West Monroe, buried one of his children. Jan. 19 another, and January 21 three more were at his house dead, and another not expected to live. The balance of his children, five in number, are down with the same disease, diphtheria.

Freight Conductor John Coe of Syracuse was killed while coupling cars at Auburn Saturday night. One of conductor Coe's feet became wedged in a frog and before he could extricate it the train backed up and ran over him. He survived his injuries only about an hour.

A gentleman in Oswego, who has been observing the English sparrows for some days tells the Palladium that the little rascals are picking off the fruit buds which have started on the trees during the warm weather. They clean the buds off from every branch. The effect of this operation may be of some consequence.

Robert Pierson alias Wade, a quack doctor who made Fulton his headquarters last summer and was arrested here last October for a burglary committed in Newark, Wayne Co., pleaded guilty to the charge last week and has been sentenced to Auburn state prison for a term of three years. The charge of abducting a little girl from a Rochester asylum was not pressed against him.

The Indians on the Onondaga reservation have been indulging in one of their religious festivities known as the "burning of the white dog." It is a foolish and impotent ceremony and a "white dog," is sacrificed to secure the remission of the sins of the tribe. Rev. Dr. Beard of Syracuse sees in this ceremony a revivification of pagan rites and in his sermon Sunday commented forcibly upon the existence of heathenism in the midst of a civilized community.

PATISH—In THE TIMES of Jan. 18th is the following. "John Sullivan, elected collector of Constantia last spring on the democratic ticket, was unable to obtain sufficient bail and resigned." So far as being unable to obtain sufficient bail it is untrue. Mr. Sullivan did procure sufficient bail, as much as the supervisors required. Mr. Sullivan resigned on account of poor health and any one who knows him can readily testify to that fact. In resigning, he received as much as the office would profit him and it will also be a pecuniary benefit to his successor, Mr. Purdy. The story of Mr. Sullivan being unable to obtain bail originated in jealousy or mistake. Mr. Sullivan is now a resident of this town, and no person here believes the story and wish it contradicted.

OCCASIONAL.

All Over The State.

Small-pox rages in Port Jervis. New cases are breaking out daily. So far, sixty cases have been reported, and seven deaths have occurred.

The last cold snap has put the ice on the Hudson in good condition, and cutting has commenced at several places. The capacity of the empty houses in the vicinity of Castleton is 600,000 tons. It costs 25 cents a ton for labor to house it.

The law and order men of Syracuse have decided to make a desperate effort to secure temperance men upon the ticket at the coming charter election. The liquor men claim they can control four thousand votes, and thus the election.

All fears of an ice famine suddenly vanish. Ice dealers in New York predict that it will be cheaper this season than for many years. This statement is based upon the the fact that the mild weather caused hundreds of new houses to spring into existence whose contents will be purchasable at most any price for the sake of realizing something from the outlay.

A well dressed young man registered at the Osborn House, Auburn, the other day and at the same time handed the clerk a small package to keep in the safe until called for. After staying at the house two days he departed, without calling for his package or his bill. Upon opening the package a cigar box was found containing half a pound of rusty shingle nails, pieces of lead pipe, a quantity of chalk, sawdust and a chromo.

General B. F. Butler has become quite an extensive land owner in Chatauqua. Friday he bought 2,000 acres of land in Portland for $91,000. This land was bought by the Harris community in 1867. This society held that salvation was obtained only thro' self-remuneration and a life of renunciation and a life of unselfish labor for humanity. It did not flourish, and the land has now been sold.

Grand Southern Tour.

N. P. Wheeler the popular excursion agent announces a grand winter tour through the south leaving Arlington hotel Washington on the evening of February 14, visiting Richmond, Augusta, Savannah, Jacksonville, St. Augustine and other cities in Florida, New Orleans, Vicksburg, Memphis, St Louis and Cincinnati, comprising thirty-six days of first class travel, including all hotel fare, carriage rides, etc. etc. to places of interest. Tickets to cover transportation from any city in New York state [illegible] from Washington. Letters of [illegible] N. P. Wheeler [illegible]

[illegible] genial friend, a ripe scholar whose mind was enriched by extensive travel in foreign countries, who many times entertained his townsmen with carefully prepared reviews of his travels, an author of many law books, a voluminous writer for the newspaper and periodical press; while young a lover of military fame, and who earned by regular promotion, the title of brigadier general. It was with pain and keen regret we read in the public print, soon after our departure, of the death of Hon. Ransom H. Tyler. Next came the news of the sudden prostration of Miss Maria Palmiter, than whom there is no better-known or more respected lady or citizen in our village, one who has seemingly grown up with its prosperity, having been for long years prominently connected in an active business here. Soon after a relative of the above mentioned was strangely and mysteriously bereft of reason, and has been taken to the asylum at Utica for treatment. While the whole community was startled by these sudden afflictions, a church society was not a little exercised by the loss by fire of their place of worship and of their fine new organ, which had come to them after much prayer and more work. The bond of unity which was to unite pastor and people, and drown discordant sounds which might possibly break forth from unskilled throats. To-day we gazed on the ruins, and there met a number of old members, who had for forty years attended service in this place. The charred and blackened timbers still standing pointing upwards seemed a pleasant reminder of the final resting place which awaits them. It is not probable that the person will ever come forward and state why he should fire that old land mark, but thanks to a watchful board of trustees, who will doubtless secure sufficient insurance to lay the "corner stone" of a grander and far more imposing structure. Perhaps, on Third street. There is also a marked change in the postoffice; the political battle which was hotly raging at the time of our departure, and the great number of applicants had been reduced to a "stalwart" and a "half ——," has resulted in the appointment of the former, who seemed to be the choice of the people. Much needed improvements are promised in this branch of public service. Closely allied to, and joining this is the news room, where the ever fresh and newsy Courier, with other papers are promptly delivered by Willis Ney. The rooms are now a marvel of neatness and order. THE FULTON TIMES has also put on a new dress, and added a column to each page, showing real vitality and enterprise. A new hotel has sprung into being, the "Clark House," built upon the grounds of the old Johnson homestead, and the ever restless 'Willard' smiles upon its success."

Kalamazoo, Mich., Feb. 2, 1880.

I know Hop Bitters will bear recommendation honestly. All who use them confer upon them the highest encomiums and give them credit for making cures—all the proprietors claim for them. I have kept them since they were first offered to the public. They took high rank from the first, and are more called for than all others combined. So long as they keep up their high reputation for purity and usefulness, I shall continue to recommend them—something I have never before done with any other patent medicine.

THE WORLD'S CYCLOPEDIA OF HISTORY.

The first volume of this great cyclopedia is announced to be ready in a few days. If it reaches the standard indicated by its prospectus it will be altogether unrivalled in its magnitude, comprehensiveness, and scholarship and at the same time will be placed easily within the reach of any industrial laborer. Instead of being made up of brief sketches by unknown authors, as are commonly the historical portions of encyclopedias it will contain unabridged the great standard works of such authors as Green, Macauley, Grote, Carlyle, Gibbon, Guizot, Mommsen, and others. A very comprehensive alphabetical topical index covering all the works embodied in the cyclopedia will make ready consultation convenient, and will group together such knowledge and interest as will surprise the ordinary reader and delight the profound student. Specimen pages received at this office show handsome typography, good paper and press work. Each volume will contain about 1,000 large, double column, octavo pages, and will be sold at amazingly low prices of $1.25 for the cloth binding, and $1.40 for the same bound in half Russia, sprinkled edges. The amount of matter contained in each volume, and for so low a price, seems almost startling. Volume 1 containing, unabridged Green's larger history of the English People; Carlyle's history of the French Revolution; Schillers History of the Thirty Years' War; and Creysy's Fifteen Decisive Battles of the World,—all for $1.25. No payment wanted in advance by the publishers; books will be sent to any part of United States by express with the privilege of examination before payment is required. It will be wise for those who want to purchase to write to the publisher immediately, as at these prices the edition will be limited by the number of orders received for publication. Specimen pages and full particulars sent free upon application to the publishers. The Useful Knowledge Publishing Company, 162 William St, New York City.

Metropolitan Industrial Life Insurance.

It gives us great pleasure to announce the wonderful success of the Industrial Insurance. The Metropolitan of New York, which opened an office in the city savings band building some three months ago, under the supervision of Mr. John Lewis, has had during that time nearly 1,000 applicants for insurance.

The company has been doing business in Syracuse for over a year past and has met with very flattering success. There have been over thirty deaths in that city, of persons insured in this company and in all cases the beneficiaries haue promptly received the amount due them, and we learn from a cotemporary that all the principal cities and towns from Boston to Chicago are now covered by active, expert workers. Its system is especially adapted to persons of moderate means. It yields from $14 to $1,000 in cash. Its costs are trifling, as the dues are collected from the homes of members weekly or monthly, to suit the requirements of the policy holders.

We may add that the Metropolitan is not an experiment, but an established institution, whose age, resources and record have won for it high estimation in public confidence and whose officers are known, of all men, for their personal worth and rectitude.

ONCE IN A LIFE TIME

Occurs an opportunity to buy a model farm at an immense sacrifice. The Keller farm containing 177 acres, situated two and one half miles south of Fulton is offered for sale at the astonishingly low price of $36 per acre, good buildings and fair fences, never failing brook running through whole length of farm. Land slightly undulating, very fertile easy to cultivate and pleasantly situated. Fulton is acknowledged to be the most thriving and beautiful village in the State, numbering about 5,000 inhabitants The close proximity of this farm to the village makes it for a milk and dairy farm or for gardening purposes the most desirable farm in the whole state. It can be advantageously divided into two or three parts. Will sell on terms that will enable a wide-awake farmer to pay for the same out of the products in a short time. Call or address for terms at the office of THE FULTON TIMES or Mrs. E. J. KELLER 25 Seymour street, Syracuse, N. Y.

Song of the

ROYAL ST. JOHN

A saint come to every home
And with my presence cheery,
I banish care and burdens bear,
Of women, worn and weary.

I run so light, and look so bright,
The ladies dote upon me,
No noise I make, no threads I break,
Though back and forth you run me.

Through every kind of goods I go,
Silk, muslin, cloth and leather;
Though all machines refuse to sew
Yet I sew on forever.

No heads I pain, no eyes I strain,
To find the way to thread me,
No holes have I, save needles eye
To make a cause to dread me.

I'm cheap and good and if you should
But for a moment doubt me,
Be sure and try, and then you'll buy
And never be without me.

I seam, I hem, I fell I bind,
I ruffle, tuck and gather;
And all machines I leave behind,
While I sew on forever.

[illegible] uniform in the drill [illegible] Nichols hall where the ceremony of mustering out was quickly done.

After the mustering out Capt. Mead stated to the company on behalf of Gen. Rodenbough that their discharges were given them in pursuance of orders from state authorities and complimented the men on their soldierly qualities.

The names of the mustered out are:

Commissioned Officers—Captain S. B. Mead, 1st Lieutenant, Giles S. Piper, 2d Lieutenant, John T. Sheridan.

1st sergeant, C. R. Willard, 2d Sergeant, E. C. Wolcot, Quarter-master Sergeant, E. M. DeRusha.

Corporals—J. F. Willard, Eugene Emory, J. C. Prosser.

Musicians—H. P. Mills, Cassius Newton.

Privates—E. B. Abbey, C. J. Carner, Marcus F. Crahan, C. F. Campbell, W. A. Corbett, G. H. Dutton, Ed. F. DeGraw, A. G. DeGraw, A. L. Dunsmore, W. J. Ellis, W. H. Hutchins, George Hall, J. P. Hall, J. L. Johnson, F. P. Keeler, Thomas D. Lewis, C. H. Metcalf, F. North, D. F. Ottman, D. M. Perine, G. Willard Patterson, G. F. Schenck, N. N. Stranahan, C. D. Sutton, F. A. Summerville, J. W. Swan, L. D. Stanton, W. J. Watson, A. J. Young, W. D. Young, J. W. Young, H. C. Young.

After each man had received his discharge and had returned to the ranks, three cheers were given for Gen. Rodenbough and three more for Capt. Mead. The men took their discharge papers coolly and without any unusual demonstration.

The statement having been published that Gen. Rodenbough said at a club meeting recently that of the 20,000 men in the national guard, "less than 500 were fit to be soldiers," a representative of the Utica Herald called on him and asked if such was the fact.

In reply General Rodenbough said he had been misquoted, and the remark he did make had no reference to the fitness of men in the the national guard as soldiers. "Out of 20,000 men inspected during the last eighteen months, I do not remember to have seen 500 who were properly set up. It is not surprising perhaps, when the scarcity of well set up drill masters is considered. It is something which cannot be thoroughly taught by repeating the language of the tactics. The physique of the amateur is generally equal and his intelligence superior to those qualities in the regular soldier; but he rarely acquires the true professional bearing, straight, without stiffness."

Small Pox.

At the last meeting of the Board of Trustees Dr. D. Pardee the health officer of the village called the attention of the board to the fact that the village is in great danger of an epidemic from small pox. Trustees Parker, Hart and the President were appointed a committee with power to act in the matter. In accordance with instructions from the committee Dr. D. Pardee visited the village schools to ascertain the number of pupils who had never been vaccinated which was 343.

Thursday evening the board of health met at the store of D. A. Ray & Co., and took action regarding the necessity of vaccination. The following preamble and resolutions were unanimously adopted:

Whereas, So large a number of persons within the limits of the village are wholly unprotected against small pox and

Whereas, Small pox is very prevalent throughout this state therefore be it ordered that every person be requested to attend to the matter of vaccination immediately;

That the health officer of the village be and hereby is directed to see that every child that shall attend upon any of our village schools on and after Monday next, Jan. 23, 1882, present satisfactory evidence of recent vaccination.

That the health officer be directed to attend at district school house No. 2 Saturday, at ten o'clock prepared to vaccinate any who may present themselves for that purpose and especially those unprotected who are unable to pay for such services.

M. F. CRAHAN, Chairman.
D. A. RAY, Sec'y.
D. PARDEE, Health Officer.

Dr. Pardee vaccinated over a hundred children at No. 2, Saturday and is in attendance at No. 1 to-day. Nearly everyone in Fulton and vicinity have taken precaution from the prevalence of smallpox and protected themselves by vaccination.

No cases are known to exist in this section, nor have there been any.

A sudden change in the weather Sunday caused the mercury to drop from 30 above zero the preceding day to 10 below Sunday evening. Monday was a terribly cold day and Tuesday morning thermometers in this locality were steady at 23 degrees below zero. At 7 a. m. to-day it stood 10 above zero. The oldest inhabitant says Tuesday was the coldest day we have experienced in twenty-five years. Our neighbors were cold too. At 7 a. m. yesterday morning at Pulaski 26 below; Mexico, 22; Hannibal, 20; Sodus 14; Minetto, 16; Unionville, 18; Ogdensburg, 28; Rochester, Syracuse, Utica and Watertown report the thermometer varying from 15 to 20 degrees below.

ITS EQUAL IS UNKNOWN.

A Lowell (Mass.) paper, so we observe, cites the case of Mr. P. H. Short, proprietor of the Belmont Hotel, that city, who suffered with rheumatism for seventeen years without finding relief from any of the numerous remedies employed, until he applied St. Jacob's Oil: "I never found any medicine that produced such remarkable and instantaneous effect as it did," says Mr. Short.

CORPORAL.

The Gallant 81st.

Twenty years ago last Thursday the 81st reg't N. Y. V., marched out of Oswego to the tune of "The Girl I left behind Me." It was the flower of Oswego county, and its progress was watched with high beating hearts and moistened eyes. At Albany its nine companies were consolidated with seven of another regiment, and it left there 1,160 strong. At the muster out in April, 1865, but forty-four of the original members answered to their names. Its colors showed the mark of the fiercest battles of the rebellion, and at Cold Harbor alone nineteen of its twenty-four officers and 275 men went down under the rain of leaden hail. McAmbley was killed at Fair Oaks, James Martin and Elias A. Fish at Cold Harbor, Daniel C. Rix at Fort Harrison and William C. Raulston in leading a revolt at Danville prison. But the record of its rank and file who fell as gloriously as men can die would fill a volume. Following was its roster when it marched away twenty years ago this day:

Field and staff officers—Colonel, Edward Rose; Lieut Colonel Jacob J. DeForest; major, John McAmbley; surgeon Wm. H. Rice; assistant surgeon, Carrington Macfarlane; adjutant, Edward A. Cooke; quartermaster, Roger A. Francis; non-commissioned staff—Sergeant major, James L. Belden; hospital steward, Chas. S. Hart; quartermaster sergeant, John F. Young.

A company, Captain, Wm. C. Raulston; 1st lieut., Hamilton B. Littlefield; 2d lieut., R. H. Eddy.

WHY WE HAVE SO FEW GOOD RIDERS.

It has frequently been the subject of remark as to the cause of the scarcity of good Jockeys. To be sure we have some excellent riders—Barrett. Evans, Barbee, Hughes. Feakes, and probably half a dozen others, but not more. The secret is explained in the fact that unless a Jockey takes great care of himself constant exercise in the saddle will superinduce Piles of the most aggravating character, that itch intensely, particularly after getting warm in bed, and thus render him unfit for service on the track. However, if Swayne's Ointment were used, the worst case of Itching Piles would be speedily cured.

George Converse, one of the oldest men in the town of Volney died Tuesday at his residence on Emory street aged 83 years. Funeral will be held at the house Friday at 10 a. m. Rev. J. S. Riggs of the Presbyterian church will officiate. He leaves one child, a son, Mr. Vernon Converse of Palermo.

The following missive received at this office this morning explains itself:

LOWELL, MASS., Jan 17, 1882.

TO FULTON TIMES:

Mrs. Carrie Scott, formerly of Fulton, is occupied in one of the leading mills in the city of Lowell and doing well. She was last Monday promoted to the position of Room girl by her employer.

MRS. J. EDMUNDS.

George Pepper was up before Justice Piper this morning on complaint of his aged father, Peter, who avers that his son took a stick of wood and drove him from his own house yesterday, bare headed and without a coat when the thermometer indicated 18 below zero. Justice Piper gave the brutal son six months in the O. P. to meditate over his miscon luct.

Thayer, the Oneida street baker, has finished the repairs of his oven and has again commenced the manufacture of bread, crackers and every description of bakestuffs. His facilities for making palatable bakestuffs is unsurpassed in Oswego county, The very best of flour and other material are only allowed to be used in manufacture. He invites the public to try his bread made from new process flour.

An erroneous impression is abroad that one vaccination was sufficient for a lifetime. Others held that once every seven years was sufficient. This is simply a superstition. The fact is that whenever the system of a person is in such condition that vaccination will "take," that person is susceptible to small-pox. The only course then, is to get vaccinated whenever the scourge is prevalent. If it "takes," the precaution is timely, if it does not "take," there is no harm done.

Postmaster Gilbert is having much needed and appreciable improvements made in the post-office. The partition is to be moved back about three feet, a new row of lock boxes is to be placed in, two hundred new letter boxes and a registered letter and money order window constructed at the west end and in the vicinity of the present door. A plate glass front will adorn the whole structure. The idea is to make the office as convenient to patrons as possible, and the facilities that will be given to people who wish to transact business will be on the same plan as a city office. Mr. Danforth has the job well under headway and it will be placed in position in a very short time.

BAKERY.

My bakery business having increased to such an extent I have rented the old Miller oven. I am now prepared to supply my customers with the best of bread and cakes. I have also added to my business a new cracker machine and shall supply the public daily with fresh crackers. I have employed Mr. J. B. Birdsall to take charge of the work, a finished workman in all respects. 35

Thos. Lightfoot died at his residence in the Patterson block in this village Thursday, aged 42 years, of consumption, from which he had been a sufferer for years. Funeral was held Sunday at 2 p. m. at Zion church, attended by Fulton lodge of Free Masons, Rev. E. Moyses officiating.

Ellen, wife of James Scanlon died at her home in Granby Saturday aged 56 years. Funeral services were held Monday at 10 o'clock at the church of the Immaculate Conception in this village, Rev. Father Kearney officiating. Mrs. Scanlon was a lady widely known and respected and her death brings sorrow to the hearts of many near and dear friends.

We are again called upon to chronicle the death of one of Fulton's earliest residents. Mrs. Melissa Church, wife of Benajah Church died at the residence of her son, Edgar Church, in Syracuse, January 3d 1882. She was born in the year 1802, hence had attained to the advanced age of eighty years. In 1827 she left Hartwick, N. Y., to make her home in Fulton. The journey from Hartwick to Syracuse was made in a wagon; there she took passage for Fulton on what is known as the Durham flat-boat, an open scow. This was then, the best means of conveyance to and from these places. Owing to the danger of "running the rapids" the passengers disembarked at the upper landing and walked to the lower landing. The subject of our sketch has often remarked that she saw only four or five houses, in the entire distance between these landings. From this time Mrs. Church dwelt in Fulton till twelve years ago, when she took up her residence with her son Edgar in Syracuse. Few persons knew Fulton's history as well as she. She rehearsed it with animation and pleasure, in her declining years. We need not dwell upon her christian qualities, they were too well known to require it. She was loved and prized as an earnest amiable christian worker. For many years and down to the time of her departure, she was a member of the Methodist Episcopal church in Fulton. One of the leaders in the church benevolences, ever ready at the bed of suffering, extending charity to all who called at her door, making peace and carrying sunshine wherever she went, she has left, to all, a bright example of happy christian piety. During the last year, especially, of her illness she suffered intensely and almost constantly, but she bore it without a murmur, always leaning upon the arm of Him that "sticketh closer than a brother." But her discipline of suffering is over. She has "fought the good fight," and entered into that rest where "there shall be no more pain"; she triumphed in Christ. Shall we call such a departure death? Nay. "He that believeth in me shall never die, he shall live forever."

"He shall fall asleep"; but he shall awake to "bloom in immortal youth."

J. N. TAFT.

About 4 o'clock yesterday morning a freight train going east became stalled about one mile east of the Clyde depot, on the Central. A flagman was sent back to notify other approaching trains: but it is said that through carelessness the proper signal was not given, or noticed, and another train ran into the rear end of the stalled train throwing the caboose upon end, setting it on fire and burning the conductor, James McMinnis, of Syracuse to a crisp. It is somewhat similar to the Spuyten Duyvil disaster.

Geo. P. Saunders, a well known Fultonian met with a severe loss by fire at his home in Derrick City, Pa., Jan'y 13. The house caught fire in the night during a heavy wind and it with the contents were entirely destroyed. Mrs. Saunders hastily got together some wearing apparel and ran barefooted to a neighbor's, through two inches of snow. Mr. Saunders escaped through a chamber window. There was an insurance of about $700 on house and furniture. Mrs. Saunders has arrived in Fulton and Mr. Saunders will be here in a few days. Their Fulton friends will be sorry to learn of their sad misfortune.

Hon. Geo. R. Wendling gave his lecture "The Problem of the Ages," to a good audience in Nichols hall last evening. The evening was extremely cold. The hall was dimly lighted a lamp was on the speakers desk.

The question of immortality was the theme, is there a life beyond?

The speaker asked, what is death? The cessation of life, it is material, the ending of life in the physical body: death is a boon not a curse, The spirit is superior, distinct and independent of the body. Death has no power over it. Nothing in the vast universe is annihilated. The goodness justice of God will not permit a lie to be written on the soul, for it demands a future immortal state. Nature makes no failures. God in the creation made no failure. This applies to all conditions of life, the rich and poor, ignorant and learned, debased exalted, rude, rough, uneducated and sinful, still a human soul. No aristocracy—immortality for all. The soul is always young. Christ testifies to the immortal life. He came to bring life and immortality to light. His teachings and testimony faithfully applied solves the problem of life,

The speaker closed by an eloquent peroration. The longing soul thirsts for more knowledge—up—up—beyond the planets and remotest stars goes the aspiring soul, asking for more light and knowledge, and at last stands before the throne of the Infinite; for the soul is kin to God himself, and by that universal Father who is wisdom and love shall be disclosed the great problem of the ages.

OUR LITTLE ONES AND THE NURSERY.

Our Little Ones and The Nursery is on our table. The publishers say: "If we ever had a shadow of a doubt in regard to the success of Our Little Ones, that shadow has passed away. Some experienced publishers assured us the public would neither appreciate nor pay for a thoroughly artistic magazine for little people. The Nursery has been a brilliant success from its beginning, fifteen years ago; and this has been the only publication of this kind in the United States, or, in fact, in the world. The price of Our Little Ones is the same; and therefore it is simply a question of appreciation. Our greatly increased and increasing subscription list, the very generous notices of the press, and the enthusiastic testimony contained in thousands of letters, assure us that the public [illegible]

THE SUN.

NEW YORK, 1882.

THE SUN for 1882 will make its fifteenth annual revolution under the present management, shining, as always, for all, big and little, mean and gracious, contented and unhappy, Republican and Democratic, depraved and virtuous, intelligent and obtuse. The Sun's light is for mankind and womankind of every sort; but its genial warmth is for the good, while it pours hot discomfort on the blistering backs of the persistently wicked.

The Sun of 1868 was a newspaper of a new kind. It discarded many of the forms, and a multitude of the superfluous words and phrases of ancient journalism. It undertook to report in a fresh, succinct, unconventional way all the news of the world, omitting no event of human interest, and commenting upon affairs with the fearlessness of absolute independence. The success of this experiment was the success of The Sun. It effected a permanent change in the style of American newspapers. Every important journal established in this country in the dozen years past has been modelled after The Sun. Every important journal already existing has been modified and bettered by the force of the Sun's example.

The Sun of 1882 will be the same outspoken, truthtelling, and interesting newspaper.

By a liberal use of the means which an abundant prosperity affords, we shall make it better than ever before.

We shall print all the news, putting it in readable shape, and measuring its importance, not by the traditional yardstick, but by its real interest to the people. Distance from Printing House Square is not the first consideration with The Sun. Whenever anything happens worth reporting we get the particulars whether it happens in Brooklyn or in Bokhara.

In politics we have decided opinions; and are accustomed to express them in language that can be understood. We say what we think about men and events. That habit is the only secret of success of The Sun's political course.

The Weekly Sun gathers into eight pages the best matter of the seven daily issues. An Agricultural Department of unequalled merit, full market reports, and a liberal proportion of literary scientific and domestic intelligence complete The Weekly Sun, and make it the best newspaper for the farmer's household that was ever printed.

Who does not know and read and like The Sunday Sun, each number of which is a Golconda of interesting literature, with the best poetry of the day, prose every line worth reading, news, humor [illegible] enough to fill a good sized book, and infinitely more varied and entertaining than any [illegible]

RESCUED FROM DEATH

William J. Coughlin of Somerville, Mass, says: In the fall of 1876 I was taken with bleeding of the lungs followed by a severe cough. I lost my appetite and flesh and was confined to my bed. In 1877 I was admitted to the hospital. The doctors said I had a hole in my lung as big as a half dollar. At one time a report went around that I was dead. It gave up hope, but a friend told me of DR WILLIAM HALL'S BALSAM FOR THE LUNGS. I got a bottle, when to my surprise I began to feel better, and to-day I feel better than for three years past.

"I write this hoping every one afflicted with diseased Lungs will take DR WILLIAM HALL'S BALSAM, and be convinced that CONSUMPTION CAN BE CURED. I can positively say it has done more good than all the other medicines I have taken since my sickness.

What makes your cheek like a warm white rose?
I saw something better than any one knows.

Whence that three-cornered smile of bliss?
Three angels gave me at once a kiss.

Where did you get this pretty ear?
God spoke and it came out to hear.

Where did you get those arms and hands?
Love made itself into hooks and bands.

Feet, whence did you come, you darling things?
From the same box as the cherub's wings.

How did they all come just to be you?
God thought of me and so I grew.

But how did you come to us, my dear?
God thought about you, and so I'm here.

The Office Should Seek the Man.

Nothing is more natural, nothing more admirable, than the aspiration of good and capable men to lead men and to govern great states. But honorable objects must be honorably sought. A man with a true political ambition, with the instinct of leadership advocates wise measures, and, by the power which belongs to the instinct, impresses his views upon the minds of others. He leads by natural ascendancy, and they naturally and gladly follow. So Washington led. So Jay was a leader. But the modern system of a "still hunt," of private, illicit influence upon those whose votes elect to high place, of mousing intrigue, of bargain and barter and corruption, is not only dishonorable, but it is destructive of the essential principle of the government. The majority must rule. But only an honest majority can rule justly. To open head-quarters at a capitol in order to procure votes, not by personal preference founded on knowledge of character and of a career, but by private solicitation and representation and trade, and so to secure a majority, is to cheat the people and to caricature the popular principle. A majority so obtained is not a moral majority. It is not only not binding, it is to be repudiated as a crime against the people.

What was good enough for Jay and Washington ought to be good enough for us. If they disdained to propose themselves as the choice of the people, we may safely disdain it. The current question now is, "Who is an applicant?" "Who wants it?" And the fittest man is passed by because he has not asked for it. Washington and Jay did not ask. But when the people selected them, the people found officers quite as honorable and efficient as those who do ask. The man whose self-respect for the principle of the government prevent his "conducting his own campaign" to be elected or appointed to an office is thought to be altogether too "high and mighty," and too ridiculously squeamish. "If a man won't help himself, who will help him?" is supposed to be a conclusive question in the realm of politics.—Editor's Easy Chair, in Harper's Magazine for February.

Persons who stand upon their Feet, whether men or women, are often troubled with serious pains and weaknesses in the back, loins and other parts of the body. It has been proven beyond a doubt, however, that Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure is a certain preventative of these troubles.

Samuel Turner, a worthy convict of the Missouri State Prison, was terribly frightened the other night. Having been frequently trusted outside the prison, he went into the city on Christmas and drank so much liquor that he fell asleep on the roadside. When he awoke it was terribly dark, and he knew that the prison had been closed for the night. His distress at being shut out of his cosey cell was terrible, but great was his joy when his repeated knocking brought the guard to the gate who let the poor belated fellow in.

Messrs. Ely Bros., Druggists, Owego N. Relief was almost instantaneous, and continued use has resulted in an almost complete cure. Therefore I take pleasure in recommending your Cream Balm to all who may be suffering I was, both from my own experience and that of many of my acquaintances who have used it. S. M. THE INDEPENDENT.

"The foremost religious newspaper of the United States."—The Rev Joseph Cook.

Established in 1848, as an advocate of anti-slavery and of reforms in religion and politics, the Independent once became a recognized power throughout the country. Its influence has ever since been constantly growing. As it has fought against slavery and for cheap postage, so it will fight against Mormonism, for Civil Service Reform, and for purity in politics, and general uprightness in all things. It employs the best editorial talent and speaks fearlessly on all subjects. It pays for contributed articles and for editorial services more than double the amount paid by any other weekly newspaper.

It publishes more religious discussions than the religious reviews, and more poetry and stories popular monthlies, and gives more information than an annual cyclopedia. The long cable dispatches recently published from the great Methodist Council in London are a good illustration of what the Independent is constantly doing. A list of the most prominent religious and philosophical writers, poets and story writers in the country is the list of the contributors of the Independent. Besides the space set aside for these writers and for editorials, there are twenty-two distinct departments, edited by twenty-two specialists, which include Biblical Research, Sanitary, Legal, Fine Arts, Music, Science Pebbles, Personalities, Hymn Notes, School and College, Literature, Religious Intelligence, Missions, Sunday School, News of the Week, Finance, Insurance, Stories, puzzles, and Agriculture. 32 pages in all.

Chafe and turmoil everywhere—
With a vague unseeing sight,
She looked on the September night.

Broad and vast before her,
Spreading leagues away,
Hushing in the hush of night,
Gray beneath the gray,
Light winds ruffling on her breast,
Lay the sea in solemn rest,
Bright and wide the pathway showed
Where the harvest moonlight glowed,
Reaching from the silent land,
By the great horizon spanned,
Where sky and sea together blend,
Where our dim sweet fancies tend.

To the golden glory
Came a little bark.
Shone in it for a moment,
Then gliding into dark.
So in a dull life's hours and days
A child's fresh laugh, a word of praise,
A flower, a smile, a gentle duty,
Or a thought of peace and beauty,
O'er the arid waste may fling
A light all pure and glistening,
Where a sad heart may rest and win
New strength, new conflicts to begin.

SEARCHING OUT A MYSTERY.

SATURDAY NIGHT.

The hair of all Twiddleton stood on end with excitement. A box containing the dismembered skeleton of a man had been dug up in the cellar of an old house back of the hotel; and until the mystery thereof was solved, no inhabitant of Twiddleton could enjoy an hour's mental repose.

Business was neglected in Twiddleton. Men congregated at corners to discourse upon the all absorbing topic; and women left the dinner pots to boil over, while they discussed the mystery above their yard fences. The parson had made the "Murder of Abel," the subject of his last sermon, and at the Village Lyceum, the question "Is there a Eugene Aram amongst us?" had been [illegible]ated in a manner to curdle the hearer and to inspire each with a distrust of his next door neighbor. Still no one had taken any actual steps to the discovery of the murderer, until Mr. Solomon Slocum publicly announced his intention of taking the matter in hand and in his own words, "sifting the matter to the bottom."

If any one short of a Number 1 detective were competent to the task, it was Solomon Slocum. There had never been a mystery in Twiddleton that he had not ferreted out; never a secret act of lawlessness, from the burning of Squire Rennie's barn to the tying of the cat to Mrs. Skinner's brass door knocker, but that he had succeeded in identifying the culprit. He also interested himself in matters of a more private and innocent nature. He knew the history of every family in the county, with most of their domestic affairs; had ascertained the age of every single lady, and would tell without hesitation who wore false hair and teeth, and when a silk dress had been dyed and made over.

Slocum went to work in a very methodical manner. First, he ascertained from corporation deeds that the house containing the mysterious cellar (now occupied by an estimable single lady, who had fainted on the discovery that she had been "living over a dead man") had been built nearly a hundred years ago by the ancestor of the Harker family. Thereupon a shadow fell upon the Harkers, and several persons were led to the discovery that they had always seemed a sly and underhanded set. Job Harker, however, proved that the house had been sold some twenty years after its completion to Captain Womble, whereupon the Wombles came in for a share of the shadow; and young Timms, the village poet, whose Fourth of July Ode, Tom Wombles had ridiculed, asserted that he had always had a mysterious repulsion to the latter individual and had clearly seen "murder" upon his [illegible]

[illegible] and his father then came forward, the former with a horsewhip and the latter with a paper, which proved that in the days of the Wombles' occupancy of the house no cellar had existed [illegible] it.

Following this clue, Solomon Slocum, [illegible] investigation, succeeded in [illegible] himself in fact that the cellar [illegible] comparatively modern addition, [illegible] excavated in the year 1845, [illegible] property had passed into [illegible] the Bowans.

[illegible]

"The case having been narrowed down to this p'int," observed Solomon, looking gravely around upon an interested audience in the tap-room of the hotel, of which, by-the-by, his father, Christopher Slocum, had been for many years previous to his death the popular proprietor—"the case having as I said, narrowed down to the year forty-five, it remains for us to discover what men folks hev onaccountly and mysteriously disappeared since that date; and then to ascertain if possible, what relations the missing men had with any of the Bowans."

"Thar' was a yankee notion peddler," suggested Slocum's particular chum, who kept the store and postoffice opposite. "He was missin' more'n three weeks."

"His body was found and decently buried," Slocum replied.

"Then that swell chap who was flush o' greenbacks," said another.

"Bogus. No wonder he mysteriously disappeared—with the police arter him."

"Ahem! The young student that spent a month here in your father's time, Slocum, recruitin'——"

"Recruitin'! I never heard of a man or boy recruited from this town." said Solomon positively.

"Recruitin' of his health, as he said. You must remember that he left here in a mighty sudden and inaccountable way, and to my knowledge never was heerd of ag'in."

"To-be-sure, to-be-sure!" absented Slocum, his eyes sparkling as he found himself possessed of this valuable clue. "Drewry was his name. A jolly young chap he seemed to be. Plenty o' money, too, as I riccolict. And now it's for me to find out exactly the date of his being here!" He hurried away home and speedily returned with certain massive and well worn volumes, which proved to be ledgers and account books of his late father while landlord of the inn.

The present proprieter of that establishment, Captain Grasty, leaned over his shoulder and watched with interest as he ran his fingers down certain pages stopping occasionally to read.

"Here it is!" exclaimed Slocum with a ring of triumph in his tone; "here it is! 'Allan Drewry'—'August 16,1848.' The cellar was built in forty-five," he added, significantly looking around.

"Why, Lor'! exclaimed Mrs. Grasty, advancing from the kitchen, whence she had been an interested observer of these proceedings—, "Lor'! I remember Mr. Allen Drewry. I was a gal at that time, and he sort o' made up to me, though he knew John Bowan—that.s Jessie's father—was keepin' my company."

"What!" exclaimed Solomon excitedly, "you don't mean to say Bowan was jealous?"

"There was some folks said so, if I didn't," replied Mrs. Grasty, modestly.

Solomon looked slowly around the circle and solemnly shook his head.

"Look here, Slocum," said Captain Grasty, still running his eye down the page. "What's this?" 'Paid John Bowan five dollars, first quarter's rent for his cellar! "Why, what had Chris Slocum to do with that cellar?"

Slocum's eyes expanded. He rubbed his spectacles and stared intently at the fatal words.

"I—don't believe 'twas that cellar," he gasped.

"Couldn't have been any other. Just across the back yard here, with a door in the wall between. Convenient to the house, you see. Never thought of it before."

"You don't mean to insinuate," said Solomon, turning upon him with a white face, "that—that my father had anything to do with that—that affair?"

"I don't insinuate anything," answered the Captain, with a shrug; "though I don't see how Chris Slocum was any better than old Womble or John Bowan."

Mr. Michael Lafferty, a sort of loafing character of Twiddleton, here turned around from the bar, where he was indulging in a dhrap, and, placing his finger on the side of his florid nose, deliberately winked.

"See here, Cap'n yez best not mix up the ould man's name wid thim dhry bones beyant. He was my friend, he was, an' I'll stan' by him an' his to the ind. An' if it comes to suspicionin' him of murther, see here, it's betther to let out the truth. The old man wanted that cellar for storage, ye see."

"What kind of storage?"

"Whist, thin! don't ye mind when the revenue officers was down here, and couldn't find a dhrap of o' the stuff but what wasn't sthraight? But, bedad! they niver looked in the cellar beyant."

"I don't believe it," cried Slocum, savagely.

But he saw that every one around him did credit the man's statement, and gradually the conviction forced itself upon even his unwilling mind.

It was a great shock to Solomon, who had always made a boast of the honor and honesty of himself and his family.

His respected father dealing in illicit whisky, and cheating the revenue! Solomon, with his neighbors' eyes bent upon him, seemed to be shrinking to half his natural size.

"I remember when the revenue officers used to hang round here in disguise," said one man, in a low tone.

"An idear strikes me," said another, excitedly. "What if that young feller [illegible]

[illegible] mer had been found under the bones in the bag, plainly branded with Christopher Slocum's initials.

With this murderous weapon he had doubtless slaughtered his innocent victim; and whether it had been done for sake of money or to prevent the betrayal of the secret of the cellar, remained the only question open to doubt.

Poor Solomon Slocum! How had his glory departed! Would that he had never interfered with what had not concerned him! He the son of a murderer, and his own son to bear forever the dark blot of that stigma. John Bowan had forbidden his daughter to receive the young man's attentions, though Josie cried, and declared that she did not see why Joe should suffer for a sin not his own, and that she was willing to marry him and help him bear the disgrace, if need be.

One day, about six months after these events, a well dressed jolly looking, elderly gentleman stopped at the Eagle Hotel in Twiddleton. As the servant took his horse he looked around curiously, and with a sort of smile, at the transformed house and its new sign. A group of idlers was collected, as usual, on the long, low piazza, and there listened with interest to what was said.

"Place improved since I was here, some five-and-twenty years ago. Who is the landlord now?"

"Myself, sir—Thomas Gasty," responded the host, with dignity.

"Ah! What has become of old Chris Slocum?"

"Dead, sir, years ago! That's his son," pointing to a seedy and dejected looking individual passing slowly along the street.

"Sol? Not like the strapping young chap I remember. Times seem to have gone hard with him."

"Ah, sir, he's had enough to change him!"

And, in accordance with his now established habit, Captain Grasty regaled his guest with the whole story of the discovery of the ghastly remains in the cellar, and the subsequent awful revelation concerning them.

To his utter astonishment the gentleman, after listening attentively, broke into uncontrollable laughter.

"So they accuse poor old Chris of robbery and murder, do they?"

"Undoubtedly the young man was murdered, sir!"

"Perhaps not. I am Doctor Allan Drewry; no ghost, but, as you see, substantial, living flesh. Ha, ha!"

In less than an hour the news had spread through the village like wildfire. Everybody knew the story; how Allan Drewry, when about to commence his medical studies had, by his unconquerable disposition to "fun and flirtation," gotten himself into a serious scrape with a lady of uncertain age, who unflinchingly claimed to be his promised bride; and how her determined middle-aged brother had discovered him in his vacation retirement at Twiddleton, whence he had escaped at a moment's notice, leaving his effects to be forwarded by the sympathizing landlord, whom he had taken into his confidence.

Among these effects was a certain skeleton, which the embryo medical student had filched from the dilapidated grave of some person unknown, in an ancient and neglected burial-ground near the village. Christopher Slocum had been afraid to send this on with the rest of the "effects," and had hidden the box in the Bowan cellar, lightly covered over with earth, awaiting the student's orders for a safe, special conveyance. But he had never claimed the bones; and there they had lain until their unfortunate discovery, a quarter of a century after.

It was wonderful how pleased people were at this late revalation of Chris Slocum's innocence, and his son's and grandson's freedom from the stigma which had weighed so heavily upon them. As to the revenue offense of poor Chris, folks might wink at that. So they hastened to make all the reparation in their power for the injustice they had been guilty of; and Joe's and Jessie's wedding was quite a grand affair for Twiddleton.

"It's ~~always best to~~ let other folks' consarns alone, and mind your own," is the moral now carefully inculcated by Solomon Slocum upon the tender minds of his grandchildren.

An old colored man, who had just sold his cotton, limped along a Little Rock street, and overtook several colored women who had refused to marry him, exclaimed, "Suthin's been a hurtin' my feet all day," and removing one of his shoes he took out a $20 gold piece. "Suthin' hab been hurtin' dis foot too," he continued, and removing the other shoe took out another $20 gold piece. "Dis beats any time I ebber seed. A man can't walk roun' without gettin' his shoes full ob gold. Hit reminds me ob de New Jerusalem.

Rather Enthusiastic.

The Wilmington (Del.) Daily Republican contained the following item of popular interest: Dr. J. F. Speck, who is connected with the Wilmington Every Evening, speaks rather enthusiastically of St. Jacob's Oil. Dr. Speck states that he uses the Oil in his family as a household remedy, a sort of universal panacea for all aches and pains, and has always found it to act most happily. His [illegible]

Rich and Poor Congressmen.

Congress is divided into two classes, those who have to live within their income and those who do not. The line of demarkation is plain after the women arrive. Men are more democratic than women, and then, too, the powerful possession of a vote gives to each member a respectful significance in the eye of his fellows. Furthermore, men are less differentiated from each other in the matter of dress; but when the dry goods half of creation gets into winter quarters here, and Mrs. Congressman A., in her sumptuous velvets and diamonds, goes out calling in her elegant carriage with liveried driver, and meets Mrs. Congressman B., in plain black silk with a cheap, serviceable cloak partially covering its country dressmaker finish, arriving simultaneously in a one-horse coupe, evidently hired by the hour, or alighting from the street cars, then the law of polarity operates at once. A sensitive woman whose husband must save out of his salary, or at least not live beyond it, will go the round once, probably, as a matter of duty. She will attend one or two parties, perhaps; then she will begin to feel that there is a wheel within a wheel even in the great community of Congress, and she will say to herself, "people who cannot give parties should not incur obligations," and her "season" ends quite in advance of Lent. It is proper to add that some of our most interesting and gifted women, intellectually, are among these. It is encouraging to further add that the high prizes in public life are quite as likely to fall to the poor man in Congress as to the rich one.

In the bright Autumnal days the temptation to comfortable exposure yields its fruit in a most pernicious cough and irritation of the throat. Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup stands unrivaled as a remedy for throat and lung diseases. 25 cents a bottle.

Politician Tricks.

Politicians used to be so omnipresent in the southwest, that the presence of a stranger in an out-of-the-way place would call forth, "How dy, sir? I reckon you're a candidate, stranger?" The custom was for the aspirants for office to announce themselves publicly during court week, when a crowd was present. "Fellow-citizens," said the office-seeker, mounting a stump, "I claim the right of an American citizen to come before you and solicit your suffrages." Then he proclaimed the office he wanted and the qualifications which in his opinion, entitled him to it.

After the public announcement, the candidates issued printed notices appointing the days and places for addressing their constitutents. Rivals traveled together, and spoke in rotation, an hour each, and concluded with half-hour speeches.

One of the established laws of a canvas was that no rival candidate should call a meeting or address the people without notifying his opponents, so that they might be present. A young man wanted to go to Congress. The seat he desired to occupy was filled by a man who had sat in it for thirty years.

Politicians are as unscrupulous as horse-jockies, believing that in politics, as in a horse trade, all things are fair. The youth was "smart," that is clever and unprincipled. He saw a way to observe the letter of the custom while breaking its spirit.

He purchased the fastest horse he could find. Then he published a list of appointments to address the people at different places on successive days. But he made these appointments eighty miles apart, so that it was impossible for the old man, his rival, to ride that distance.

The "smart" fellow, being young and strong, would address the people at one o'clock in the afternoon, make a long ride far into the night, start early the next morning and appear at one o'clock that afternoon before another crowd of voters. In this manner he canvassed the district alone and won "the race," because his opponent was not present to answer him.

On one occasion two opposing candidates spent a night in the same log cabin. Each was anxious to secure the female influence of the family. One candidate took the bucket and started for a distant spring to get a pail of water.

When he returned he was so chagrined at what he saw, that he sat down the pail with a thump that nearly spilled its contents. His rival was holding the baby. It was a dirty faced baby and its soiled clothes were odorous.

But the office seeker kissed and caressed, and talked baby talk as if it was his own clean curly headed darling. Of course the voters in that cabin gave him their suffrage.

LADY BEUTIFYERS.—Ladies, you cannot make fair skin, rosy cheeks, and sparkling eyes with all beautifyers in the world, while in poor health and nothing will give you such rich blood, good health, strength and beauty as Hop Bitters. A trial is certain proof.

Two sons of Erin, shoveling on a hot day, stopped to rest, and exchanged views on the labor question: "Pat, this is mighty hard work we're at." "It is, indade, Jemmy; but what kind of work is it you'd like, if you could get it?" "Well," said the other, leaning reflectively on his shovel, and wiping the perspiration from his brow with the back of his hand, "for a nice, aisy, clean business, I think I would like to be a bishop."

THE growth of Chicago is something wonderful, its population according to the latest statistics being 630,000—an increase of 125,000 since the census of 1880.

THE amount received by the Irish World towards the land league movement since its inception is $309,000.00 There are now 151 branches of the league in this country.

THERE are stored in Pennsylvania about 30,000,000 barrels of crude petroleum—enough to last the world five years—and still the over production is being constantly increased and new storage tanks built.

THERE is only one cremation furnace in the United States, and on an average it is used only about twice a year. Of all the persons cremated in this country, it is said that not one was a Catholic, Jew, or member of an Evangelical Protestant church. The non-believer and liberal in theology alone give their dead to the flames.

OF the whole of the population of 1,206,299, in New York city, the native born are shown to number only 727,629, of whom 708,677 are white and 18,952 colored. The foreign born residents number 487,670, of whom 29,767 are English, 153,482 German, 9,910, French, 198,595, Irish, 8,683, Scotch, 12,223, Italian, and the rest scattering.

A FIRE broke out in New York city yesterday in the block bounded by Park Row, Beekman, Spruce and Nassau streets. Several newspaper offices were burned including the Scientific American and New York Observer. The loss of life is said to be great, though nothing definite as to the number is known at present. The total loss is laid at several millions of dollars.

ANTI-POLYGAMY is the battle cry in many parts of the U. S. Large and enthusiastic meetings are being held and the agitation bids fair to become general. When a majority of the American people make up their minds an abuse shall be corrected there is imminent danger that it will be. An Anti-Mormon meeting has been called by the clergy of Oswego to be held in the Academy of Music on Thursday evening, February 9th. The speaker of the occasion will be the Rev. C. P. Lyford, formerly of Salt Lake City-

HENRY WARD BEECHER disavowed his belief in eternal punishment Sunday before last. Said he: "What the end will be, I don't know. Some think it will be annihilation, others think there is to be a final salvation for all, but that there is to be an eternity of conscious torment when all hope of rescue is gone, I do not believe. And God do so to me and more too, if I ever preach that or if I ever affirm it for God's own sake or for humanity's sake. I would clear God's skirts from any such aspersion. Penalty, when penalty will do good but let God be a God of love."

Two of the three convicts who escaped from Auburn last week have been recaptured. John B. Stiles, bigamist and horse-thief, who was sentenced from Syracuse last fall to Auburn for 13 years, was found Sunday morning in a barn at Aurelius, Cayuga Co., in a half frozen condition. He was lying in the straw with no clothing save an undershirt, a pair of drawers and boots. The only covering on his head was a scarf. He was suffering terribly and was so benumbed that he could hardly change his position. He affirmed that he had been set upon by thieves and not only robbed, but cruelly maltreated. The farmer had the stranger carried into the house and placed beside a warm fire. He was suspected as being one of the escaped convicts and the prison authorities notified. He is once more safe behind the bars.

GEN. U. S. GRANT never forgets his friends. His latest effort in remunerating faithful servants is in presenting the delegates to the Chicago presidential convention who voted solidly, and fell with him, a bronze medal on the centre of which is a profile of the head of the doughty donor. Around the head is a wreath of laurel and oak leaves. Surrounding this is a slightly raised circle outside of which is a record of the 36 ballots for him.

If a bronze medal is hereafter to be the reward for being lashed into line and blindly voting we may expect to, in the near future, see a candidate base his claim for office upon the number of medals he carries, a la fat woman and skeleton man. A man with a Grant medal around his neck will not lead people astray. It will be prima facie evidence that he has received his full marketable value and the records should be carefully searched before investing in him.

CHARLES Julius Guiteau has been found guilty of murder in the first degree in taking the life of James Abram Garfield. The history of this shocking crime and the leading events of the trial are well-known and have been closely watched by every reader. The case was [illegible] after a deliberation [illegible] with a unanimous verdict of [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible] that the court had no [illegible]

[illegible] that the court [illegible]

[illegible] that the court [illegible] evidence [illegible]

Seventh, that the court erred in permitting improper evidence offered by the prosecution.

Eighth, that the court erred in entering into an agreement with the prosecution whereby experts were allowed to observe the prisoner.

Ninth, misbehavior of the jury in reading newspapers.

Tenth, new facts.

Eleventh, that the verdict is contrary to evidence.

Twelfth, that the verdict is contrary to the laws.

If the motion is overruled, judgment and sentence will be passed upon the prisoner, to be executed the latter part of June. Scoville claims he has conclusive evidence that the jurors were occasionally supplied with newspapers, and that he has found a paper of a late date containing names of jurymen thoughtlessly written upon the margin.

Scoville has delivered an address to the American people asking for $2,000 to assist in pressing his appeal. He closes as follows:

"If my fellow citizens, few or many, think that the interests of justice, the cause of humanity, or the honor of the country require that this contest be prolonged, and that no effort be spared to secure a verdict and judgment after passion shall have subsided in the public mind, let them manifest it by providing means, and competent counsel will be secured at once. I ask for nothing for myself up to this time, but for reasons stated, I cannot give my own services hereafter without compensation. At least two thousand dollars is needed. Should a sufficient amount not be secured, the money will be refunded on request. GEO. SCOVILLE.

Washington, D. C.

Foreman Hamlin of the Guiteau jury states that each juror will present an affidavit to the court on Friday, denying specifically and in toto the charges that any of them allowed themselves to be tampered with or to trifle with their oath in any form.

Unlucky Day.

To the editor of THE FULTON TIMES:—

How many persons there are, who think that Friday is an unlucky day. They would not think of commencing a job, or get married or start a ship out to sea, or have the governor of the state proclaim it as a day of thanksgiving, because it is an unlucky day. But the fact is Friday is only an unlucky day when we do wrong. How much time has been worse than wasted on account of our adherence to superstitious notions. Luther and William Penn were born, and the stamp act was repealed, and the Hudson river discovered and Jamestown settled and the first book printed on Friday.

On Friday, Aug. 21, 1492, Columbus sailed on his voyage of discovery. On Friday Oct. 12, 1492, he got a glimpse of the land toward which he had been sailing. On Friday Jan. 4, 1493, he set sail for Spain, which if he had not reached, the happy result would not have been known which led to the settlement of this country. On Friday March 16, 1493 he arrived at Hispaniola on his second voyage to the new world.

On Friday March 5th 1496 John Cabot received his commission from Henry VIII of England, which led to the discovery of North America. Thus the first American state paper was issued in England on Friday. On Friday Sept. 7, 1565, St. Augustine, Florida, was founded (the oldest town in the United States.) The Pilgrim Fathers made the harbor of Princeton in the Mayflower and the same day, Friday Nov. 10, 1620, they signed the compact,—the forerunner of the constitution. The Pilgrims landed at Plymouth Rock on Friday Dec. 22 1620 and Plymouth Rock was dedicated to God, by prayers and hymns of praise.

On Friday Feb. 22, 1732, Geo Washington was born. Bunker Hill was seized and fortified Friday, June 15. Saratoga surrendered Friday Oct. 7, 1777.

The treason of Arnold was laid bare Sept. 22, 1780, and that probably saved us from destruction. Yorktown surrendered on Friday Oct. 19, 1781. On Friday June 7, 1776, John Adams made a motion in congress seconded by Richard H. Lee that the United Colonies were and of right ought to be free and independent.

Thus we see that Friday has proved to be a very lucky day. If we would do anything worth doing let us not stand back and refuse a good chance because it comes on Friday. You cannot stand round and consult your brothes, sistefs, uncles, aunts and cousins. If you would succeed, you must scramble through it as well as you can, even if you should happen to see the moon over your left shoulder or commence a great work on Friday. G. W. H.

Pensions.

The commissioner of pensions Monday issued the following order extending the rule with regard to pensions:

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR }
PENSION OFFICE, January 20, 1882. }

Order No. 74. First. When it appears that a soldier was sound at the date of his capture in line of duty, and that he was disabled as alleged at the date of his release from the [illegible] prison, the origin of his disability [illegible] be assumed to have originated in the service and in the line of duty, provided said disease was incident to the service or to such imprisonment. Second. When it is shown that a soldier was captured while in the line of duty, and it appear that he was afterward an inmate of a rebel prison, and has not since been heard from, his death shall be presumed to have occurred in [illegible] and line of duty, and the day he was last seen or heard from may be accepted as [illegible]

[illegible] E. Johnson, P. M. [illegible]ingbourn, Boylston.

Real Estate Changes.

The following are deeds recorded in the county clerk's office during the past week, of local import.

James Chappel to Wm. Green, land in Volney, $200. January 24, 1882.

Matilda Sabin to George C. Sawyer, land in Fulton, $4,000.

The Oswego Falls Manufacturing Co. to Frank McCann, land in the village of Oswego Falls. April 1st, 1877; $225.

Thomas Newman and wife to Lucinda Allen, land in the town of Granby. October 7th, 1871, $250.

Orcelia E. Perkins to Eliza Jane Porter land in the town of Granby. January 22, 1882, $800.

Samuel E. Prior and wife to Dwight P. Jennings, land in town of Palermo. January 5th, 1882; $1,100.

De Voe's February Weather.

February will be a month long to be remembered on account of its frequent and heavy snow storms and sudden falls in temperature. More snow will fall during this month for this section than has fallen for the past two years combined. It will enter warm and slushy till the 5th, when it will change suddenly. Snow storms will occur about the 5th, 8th, 10th, 15th, 23d and 27th. Rain will fall on the 3d, 11th, 18th and 24th. The average temperature will be lower than during the previous month. The winds will be very high from northwest, shifting suddenly to northeast. All heavy gales will be preceded forty eight hours by northern lights, and, if the bright rays drift from east to west, the gale will be northeast; but if they drift from west to east the gale will be from northwest.

New Music.

THE TIMES has received from the publishers, Spear & Dehnhoff, 717 Broadway, New York, three very pleasant compositions, as follows: "La Mascotte Waltzes," "The Old Rustic Bridge by the Mill," and "Far from the Old Home."

"La Mascotte Waltzes," by Wm. Dressler, are a collection of the most popular airs of the opera of "La Mascotte," arranged in a simple and pleasing style in waltz time.

"The Old Rustic Bridge by the Mill," words and music by J. P. Skelly, is a song with chorus of more than ordinary merit. The words are much better than those of the ordinary ballad, and the music has an original vein and is very pleasing. The composition is within the range of a medium soprano or tenor voice, and there seems to be no reason why it should not become very popular. It is certainly superior to the average ballad.

"Far from the Old Home," words by George Cooper, music by J. P. Skelly, is also a song and chorus of considerable merit.

THE CENTURY MAGAZINE.

The Century magazine may now be considered fairly started on its way under the new name, and with the February (Midwinter) number, and the adoption of the new cover-design, by Elihu Vedder, the name of Scribner's Monthly will no longer be continued as the subtitle. Since the change of name, there has been a decided increase in the sale of recent numbers of this magazine. The avarage edition during the last year of Scribner's Monthly was 120,000 while of the first numbers of the Century it has been more than 132,000. Of December, a new edition of 9,000 was printed, and a new edition of the January issue is now called for. In England 20,500 coyies of November were sold, against an average of 16,220 for the twelve months preceding. The recent growth of St Nicholas in England has been even greater in proportion; for while 3,000 copies were sufficient three years ago, 8,000 and 10,000 copies are now needed every month.

The publishers are printing 135,000 copies of the Midwinter Century.

"Is that you, patrolman?" asked a voice from within.

"Yes," was the reply.

"Step in and get a heat," said the voice from within.

The patrolman stepped in and encountered a dapper little fellow wearing a shade over his eyes and a pen behind his ear.

"You're working late to-night" said the patrolman.

"Yes" said the dapper little fellow. "I've been detained to-night straightening up accounts."

"The patrolman warmed himself at at the roaring big fire that blazed away on the hearth, and went out again on his beat. An hour after the patrolman came that way, and still seeing the light thro' the window rapped again.

"Is that you patrolman?"

"Yes," come in and warm yourself."

The patrolman accepted the invitation.

"It's a howling cold night," said the man with the green shade over his eyes.

"You bet," said the patrolman. So he took another heat and returned to his beat. He was rather surprised, next day to learn that his fireside friend of the night before had got away with some $90,000 of the bank's funds."

[Cleveland Press.

To-day's duty is the only true provision for to-morrow, and those who are careful about the morrow are but the more likely to bring its troubles upon them by the neglect of duty which care brings. Some say that care for the morrow is what distinguishes the man from the beast; certainly it is one of the many things that distinguishes the slave of nature from the child of God.

Communion rolls are counted by quantity and not by quality. Missionary visits are made and reported too much on the principal of arithmetic. There is too much "numbering of the people," and too little weighing of work and working in spontaneousness and spiritual power. When men and women have to make so many visits daily or fail in the scale of comparison, there is not always room for God's silent working and sovereign leading.

THE SUN.

NEW YORK, 1882.

THE SUN for 1882 will make its fifteenth annual revolution under the present management, shining, as always, for all, big and little, mean and gracious, contented and unhappy. Republican and Democratic, depraved and virtuous, intelligent and obtuse. The Sun's light is for mankind and womankind of every sort; but its genial warmth is for the good, while it pours hot discomfort on the blistering backs of the persistently wicked.

The Sun of 1868 was a newspaper of a new kind. It discarded many of the forms, and a multitude of the superfluous words and phrases of ancient journalism. It undertook to report in a fresh, succinct, unconventional way all the news of the world, omitting no event of human interest, and commenting upon affairs with the fearlessness of absolute independence. The success of this experiment was the success of The Sun. It effected a permanent change in the style of American newspapers. Every important journal established in this country in the dozen years past has been modelled after The Sun. Every important journal already existing has been modified and bettered by the force of the Sun's example.

The Sun of 1882 will be the same outspoken, truthtelling, and interesting newspaper.

By a liberal use of the means which an abundant prosperity affords, we shall make it better than ever before.

We shall print all the news, putting it in readable shape, and measuring its importance, not by the traditional yardstick, but by its real interest to the people. Distance from Printing House Square is not the first consideration with The Sun. Whenever anything happens worth reporting we get the particulars whether it happens in Brooklyn or in Bokhara.

In politics we have decided opinions, and are accustomed to express them in language that can be understood. We say what we think about men and events. That habit is the only secret of success of The Sun's political course.

The Weekly Sun gathers into eight pages the best matter of the seven daily issues. An Agricultural Department of unequalled merit, full market reports and a liberal proportion of literary scientific and domestic intelligence complete The Weekly Sun, and make it the best newspaper for the farmer's household that was ever printed.

Who does not know and read and like The Sunday Sun, each number of which is a Golconda of interesting literature, with the best poetry of the day, prose every line worth reading, news, humor—matter enough to fill a good sized book, and infinitely more varied and entertaining than any book, big or little?

If our idea of what a newspaper should be pleases you, send for The Sun.

Our terms are as follows:

For the daily Sun, a four page sheet of twenty-eight columns, the price by mail, post paid, is 55 cents a month, or $6 50 a year; or, including the Sunday paper, an eight page sheet of fifty-six columns, the price is 65 cents per month, or $7 70 a year, postage paid.

The Sunday edition of The Sun is also furnished separately at $1.50 a year, postage paid.

The price of the Weekly Sun, eight pages, fifty-six columns, is $1 a year, postage paid. For clubs of ten sending $10 we will send an extra copy free.

At a meeting of Hiram Lodge held at Masonic Hall, Fulton, for the purpose of taking into consideration the death of Brother Thos. Lightfoot, a committee was appointed to draft resolutions appropriate to the occasion which committee present the following:

Whereas, It has pleased the all-wise Judge of the universe to again visit this lodge and by the hand of death remove from our midst our beloved brother Thos Lightfoot, and

Whereas, We as brothers and Masons look up to God as our first Grand Master in whose hands are the despensing of all things, therefore be it

Resolved, That we bow with humility before the decrees of this great Judge, believing that he doeth all things well.

Resolved, That while we shall mourn the loss of our departed brother we shall rejoice in the fact that he has been found worthy to be admitted into that higher lodge whose perfect work, we may emulate, but may not reach.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be published in the village papers and also be presented to the friends of our deceased brother.

BY ORDER OF COM.

But twenty-eight days more of almanac winter.

A new safe has been placed in the post-office.

The Oswego Times says Miss Nora MacDonald of Fulton is visiting friends in that city.

Miss Maria Palmiter has so far recovered from her recent shock of paralysis as to be able to talk.

Mrs. S. B. Mead of Oswego Falls has returned from New York where she has been visiting Mrs. Conklin, nee Nellie Mapes.

MARRIED.—October 20, 1881, by the Rev. Dr. Tully, of Oswego, Willard B. Emerick, of Fulton and Miss Bertha E. Davis, of Oswego.

Owing to the damming of the river below Phœnix by anchor ice, the various mills and manufactories have been obliged to suspend for the past few days.

Mr. Bradt, formerly of the Hannibal Reveille, was in Oswego Falls yesterday looking over the ground with a view of establishing a weekly newspaper. He has the matter under advisement.

Prof. C. S. Eggleston has returned from Washington. During his absence he completed negotiations with Senator J. S. Morrill for the purchase of his portion of the block in which his bookstore is located.

J. E. Waugh's paper mill in Phœnix is in successful operation and about 1,200 pounds of manilla tissue paper is turned out daily. One of Taylor's diagonal pulp engines is used in this mill with satisfactory results.

Thomas Poole has shown THE TIMES the works of William Gouge printed in London, England, by John Beale in 1639. It has passed through three fires and has been bound as many times, still the book is in a wonderful state of preservation.

Dr. Mercer of Syracuse, was in town yesterday on a professional visit. He was in consultation with Dr. Hall in regard to Miss Carrie Benedict who has been quite low for several days. Her condition is reported this morning as more encouraging.

The Oswego Falls reading circle was held last evening at the residence of Mr. Wm. Hancock. The event was highly enjoyable and interesting. It consisted of Shakspearean selections interspersed with vocal and instrumental music. The next one is to be held at the residence of Mrs. J. W. Swan next Tuesday evening.

Miss Nellie Seymour, daughter of Mr. E. C. Seymour, has been a patient sufferer for years from an insidious disease. [illegible]

Mr. Wm. E. Taylor has been granted a patent on his diagonal pulp engine.

Miss Nettie M. Royce of this place is visiting her sister, Mrs Eve Arden, of Oswego.

Conductor John VanWagener of the D. L. & W. railroad has taken unto himself a wife.

Wilson is going to furnish Fulton people with that agreeable eastern dish Boston baked beans.

The M. E. Church literary society will meet at the residence of Mrs. Frank Dilts next Monday evening.

A little girl named Burley, who resides on Academy street, fell Monday, and severely injured her back.

The skating hereabouts has been exceptionally good for the past week. Hundreds have enjoyed themselves.

The Oswego Falls boot and shoe store of F. E. Goodjon has been discontinued. The stock has been removed to his store in this village.

Chas. N. Sims will deliver his lecture "Character and Characters," in Nichols hall Wednesday evening Feb'y. 15. Go and hear him.

Last Saturday evening Miss Addie Oliver received a number of her friends at her home on Seventh street. It was a very pleasant party.

Mr. O. L. Danforth was awarded the badge at the Catholic fair, having made the best record as a marksman. A good shot is Mr. Danforth.

George J. Foster is always pleasant but he is unusually so at present. It's a plump little boy and when he came among us weighed ten pounds.

Rev. J. S. Riggs will deliver another of his series of sermons to young men at Nichols hall Sunday evening. Subject: "The young men in literature."

The third exhibition of the Empire state poultry association will be held in Shakspeare hall Syracuse from February 8th to 15th 1882. Entries will close Saturday Feb. 4th.

CAMPBELL-FOSTER.—At the bride's residence on Cayuga street, Fulton, N.Y. Jan. 25th, 1882, by Rev. E. C. Bruce, David R. Campbell and Minnie E. Foster all of Fulton, N. Y.

Ice ten inches in thickness is being taken from lake Neahtawanta in large quantities. Among the principal harvesters are E. Breads, Wilcox, Dexter & Co., Michael Conly & Co., T. S. Burden & Co.

A scheme is under consideration to open an extensive coal yard in the upper landing or in the vicinity of Broadway. Plans have not been fully matured yet but it seems to be conclusively settled that it will be established.

A young man was brought up before Justice Parker in Oswego Falls a few days ago for drunkenness. The Justice said "I'll give you ten dollars or thirty days." The young man holding out his hand replied: "Well, squire, I'll take ten dollars."

The missionary services at the M. E. church Sunday were well attended and proved highly interesting. Each one interested in the exercises discharged his duty with commendable promptness and the missionary contributions were liberal, amounting to $105.00.

Rev. B. Brunning closed his pastoral duties with the Universalist society at Bradford Pa. last Sunday. The trustees passed a commendatory notice of his labors there. He left this village eight months ago, where he had occupied the pulpit of the Universalist church for twelve months previous.

A letter in the Phœnix Register from Minneapolis, Minn, speaks of the mammoth Pillsbury flouring mills in that city and says a new one is being erected of a daily capacity of 1,000 barrels, the plans being made under the direction of head-miller James Miller, an old Fulton boy. He is a brother of Mr. Lawrence T. Miller of this village.

The parents and friends of Fred Sweet in Fulton are greatly exercised over his sudden and mysterious disappearance in Rochester, where he has been living for several months. About a week ago Fred returned from work at noon, ate his dinner and left the house dressed in his working clothes, from which time no trace has been learned of his whereabouts.

He is a young, unmarried man, and possibly he may have suddenly determined to seek work elsewhere. It is also thought he has met with some accident or been foully dealt with. We hope to be able to record him safe and in good health in our next issue.

BOSTON BAKED BEANS AND HOT BROWN BREAD.

People desiring these Sunday morning luxuries will please bring in their beans as early as convenient Saturday evening. Shop will be open Sunday morning from 6 to 10 o'clock. Beans and bread warm. CHAS. WILSON.

New Grocery Firm.

Mr. C. W. Smith of Cincinnatus, Cortland Co., has purchased the grocery and provision store of Mr. E. D. Mixer in this village and took possession to-day. Mr. Smith's family will remove to Fulton in a few days and has two sons who will assist him in the store. Mr. Mixer relinquishes the business on account of failing health and will take up his residence in Franklinville, Cattaragus Co. During his short stay in Fulton he has proved himself a genial and pleasant gentleman.

Attempted Assassination.

NORTH VOLNEY, Jan. 30.—A few days ago there was an auction at North Volney at which the effects of James Craig, deceased, were sold. The money was paid over to the executor, F. W. Squires, the amount being about $200. Some of the young bloods of the place, after imbibing freely of hard cider, thought they would play a little joke on the county statistician, so they procured a lot of fire-crackers and late at night knocked at Mr. Squires' door for admission. As soon as that gentleman opened the door they threw a lighted firecracker into the hall and in a moment there was a flash and an explosion. "O what a fall was there, my countrymen!" for Mr. Squires fell backward upon the floor, exclaiming to his wife: "Maria, I'm shot!" The miscreants ran away and Mr. Squires, supposing an attempt had been made to burglarize his house and assassinate him buried his money in the cellar before again retiring. He would be glad to know who played that trick upon him.

The following was received by Chief of Police Baker in Oswego yesterday:

FULTON, Jan. 30, 1882.

Dear Sir: Please give notice of a loss of property by fire. This will be a very nice building and some of the inmates will have a narrow escape. Please publish."

It would appear from the above that we have a "crank" in our midst. He is being watched. ., you have married a woman who was imprisoned for poisoning her aged husband."

There was a scream from Dora Vane as she sank down at her mother's feet, crying,—

"O mamma, mamma!" in a vague, helpless way, while Mrs. Vane sat with tightly drawn lips, waiting to see how her boy would bear this awful stroke. George Vane stood as if turned to stone; then his eye gleamed dangerously, and his arm outstretched as though to strike his friend to the earth. Harry only folded his arms and looked with pitying eyes at the convulsed face of his friend.

"The evidence was all against her George. I cannot think her guilty, I knew her so well, but the proofs of her guilt were most conclusive. George, I was with her the very day she bought the poison; she told me that her husband had told her to get it, that he wished to try some experiments. I knew him to be a great experimentalist, also no mean chemist, so I thought no more about it until I heard of Mr. Trent's murder, and learned other proofs of his young wife's guilt. I need not say my heart bleeds for you, George, but in the eyes of the world, your wife is a murderess."

As Harry Berg's last words ceased there was a silence in the room; George Vane's head was upon his breast, and his hands hanging down as though all the strength and spirit were stricken from him by this first great grief that his life had known. Dora's bitter sobbing presently broke the stillness, but Mrs. Vane still sat with her mother's heart in her eyes, and great tears rolling down her checks, unfelt, unnoticed.

Presently George turned away, opened the door, and passed on up stairs and entered Ada's room. It was a long, long time before he came down again, but when he did come there was a wonderful change upon his face.

"Mother," he said [illegible]

The Kingsford Band Concert.

This noted band gave a most delightful concert in the Academy of Music, Oswego, last evening. Fulton attendants express themselves as being greatly entertained, The program was chosen with good taste and executed in a manner to elicit only hearty praise from the large assemblage. In addition, the audience was treated to fine solos by Miss Mabel Ine Smith, and Mr. H. O. Wright. They sang in excellent taste and were warmly applauded, and responded to the seeming delight of all. Each one of the instrumental solos elicited merited approval. The piccalo solo by Mr. Stephens was one of the happiest efforts of the evening. The concert was a success in every particular.

If you are in want of a sewing machine don't fail to examine the New Remington. Sold by McCully & Co. It is the stillest, easiest running machine in the world; has a high arm and is a model of perfection. While they are in reality worth more than other machines you can buy them from $2 to $15 cheaper.

Bacon has to-day a very fine assortment of Embroidery and filling in Silks. All the New Shades. 37w2

Remember one fact, Draper has taken the lead in selling goods cheap for the past 18 years, and will keep giving good bargains. Call at either store Fulton or Oswego Falls, and see for yourselves.

NEIGHBORING NEWS.

Judge Tourgee will lecture in Sandy Creek Saturday night.

J. Brando, son of Wm. Brando, of Colosse, fell from a train of cars recently in Wyoming Territory and was killed.

The county jail in Oswego has been condemned by the grand jury as unsafe, untenable and wholly unfit for confining criminals.

A Sandy Creek man will soon drive 5,000 head of poultry to New York. It is said that turkeys will travel as far in a day as a horse.

Chas Thomas, of Skaneateles, who was taken with bleeding at the lungs while in this village, was last week removed to the residence of his father in Skaneateles. He is still very weak.

The Oswego Times says: Mr. and Mrs. H. N. Somers live in Volney and their united ages is 172 years. They came to Volney in 1821. Mrs. Somers does her own work and Mr. Somers can keep his end up with most of the boys.

The Phœnix Register thinks that postmaster Dygert of that village is rather lax in his duties. It says: "We live in hopes that the administration will turn its attention this way after it has attended to the more important matters."

The Utica Herald is after Recorder Bulger with a sharp stick. It seems His Honor has been sentencing criminals to the penitentiary and then letting them out before the expiration of their sentences. The Herald thinks the Governor alone is vested with the pardoning power.

A banquet was given by the bar of Oswego county to Judges Vann and Churchill, Friday evening, at the Doolittle House in Oswego. About fifty lawyers were present. Judge Vann responded to the toast, "The Bench," and Judge Churchill, "American Jurisprudence."

A Cleveland correspondent of an Oswego paper, in answer to a query why the glass factory employes are so poor, says that one of the five saloons in that place sold nearly $1,000 worth of liquors and cigars during the last three months. There need be no further queries of that sort asked.

At the annual meeting of the New York State Grange at Lyons, Wayne county last week, Oswego county was represented by E. D. Chapman of Granby, and Mrs. Julia Lee. Mr. Chapman was made chairman of the committee on the "Good of the Order" and Mrs. Lee is a member of the committee on constitution and by-laws.

The Phœnix union agricultural society of Phœnix is out of debt and has $100 in the treasury. At the meeting Tuesday officers were elected as follows: D. Sutfin, president; E. S. Vickery, James Crane, vice-presidents; Wm. Patrick, general superintendent; H. C. Breed, secretary; E. Merry treasurer. The fair will be held this year beginning on September 26 and continuing three days.

Louie Badgley aged 15 and Josephine Howard aged 14, residents of Mallory, this county, were united in marriage Jan. 29, 1882, by Rev. D. D. Owen of Central Square. The little girl's parents are nearly heartbroken over the affair and the clergyman who united the infants, Rev. D. D. Owen is severely and justly criticized. The aid of the law will be invoked to annul the ceremony.

The family of Buren R. Sherman, who has just been inaugurated as Governor of Iowa, formerly resided in this village. His father's name was Phineas Sherman, and he run an axe-making establishment where Sullivan's marble shop now stands. Governor Sherman's mother was Eveline Robinson and sister of Hon. Orville Robinson of Oswego. Three members of the present Iowa Legislature were from this county, viz: Geo. R. Parker from Gilbert's Mills, P. M. Barrett from Hannibal, and J. B. Powers from Mexico. N. H. GILBERT, P. M.

[illegible] Western Company was formed by Gen. Burt to build a line from the Hoosac Tunnel to [illegible] at Oswego and Buffalo. A large amount of capital at first backed the enterprise, but after Mechanicsville on the Hudson was reached some of the stockholders objected to the immediate extension. Gen. Burt thereupon retired from the active management of the road, but after a time offered to take the whole project off the hands of the conservative stockholders. The Continental Construction and Improvement Company, capital $10,000,000, purchased the interest in the Boston, Hoosac Tunnel and Western held by Boston capitalists. About $2,500,000 in cash was paid for the road as it then stood. The new company made contracts with the old one for the extension and completion of the road as originally projected. A line was built from Saratoga to Saratoga Lake and to Schuylerville. Some work was done between Mechanicsville and Saratoga. A large amount was paid for right of way west of Schenectady. A road bed already graded from Syracuse to Oswego was purchased, as also a controlling interest in the Syracuse, Chenango and New York road.

This is the present status of the scheme. To accomplish the above, sixty-five per cent. of the $7,000,000 of capital stock actually subscribed was called in. On receiving notice of the last assessment of five per cent. the stockholders of the construction company objected to such frequent calls, and thought a large part of the necessary funds should be raised by the issue of bonds. General Burt, the controlling spirit, thought otherwise, and proposed to buy out the whole concern. He did so last Saturday. As president of the Hoosac Tunnel and Western Railroad, he has cancelled the contracts with the construction company, reimbursed the stockholders of the latter, and has formed a syndicate which he declares will push the enterprise to completion at once. The new management, which it is said includes foreign parties of large experience in handling big projects, who have great wealth at their command, has already made contracts for an extension from Schenectady to Buffalo, with several branches. Work will be commenced on February 1st, on an extensive scale. The plans call for a second track on the main line, already completed from the State line to Schenectady, the building of seventy-five miles of double track to Utica, and thence to a connection with the Syracuse and Chenango road near Syracuse. All the above must be completed within the present year. Before the close of 1883 the completion is promised of the Syracuse and Buffalo extensions, double track, distance 144 miles; the Oswego branch via Phœnix and Fulton, 46 miles, and the Rochester branch, seventeen miles.

Empire State Poultry Association.

We have just received the regulations and premium list of the Empire State Poultry Association at Shakspeare hall, Syracuse, N. Y. commencing February 8th and continuing one week. It is an attractive pamphlet and the premiums offered both cash and articles of value exceed anything heretofore offered to our knowledge by any poultry association. This association two years ago held an exhibition that eclipsed, both in the number of entries and the variety and quality of its fowls and birds competing anything ever held in this country.

Entries are now coming in fast and from present indications the coming exhibition will exceed in attractions the former one. It will undoubtedly be the finest show of high bred fowls, pigeons, birds of rare plumage, taxidermy, and pets that our readers will ever have occasion to witness. A promising feature of the exhibition will be Prof. James Ross of New York city with his wonderful troupe of performing dogs said by every one who has witnessed their performance to be the most wonderful exhibition of canine intelligence ever seen. The steam hen will be in operation hatching chickens daily. There will be many other attractions in the way of natural curiosities etc. which make this exhibition not only pleasing but instructive to every one. We advise our readers to spend one day at least with the exhibition.

CUSTOM FEED GRINDING.

A machine for grinding feed has been placed in Palmer's blacksmith shop and people wishing their work performed quick and good will find this the place to patronize. A specialty made of grinding corn, with the cob. Farmers and stockmen are invited to inspect our work and give us a call.

37 J. S. PALMER.

This is a winter of a good many people's discontent.

Warm tea biscuit at Thayer's bakery every afternoon from 4 to 6 o'clock.

Mrs. Dr. I. C. Curtiss, who has been severely ill for a few days, is reported as convalescing.

Alonzo Howell and family, of lower Oswego Falls, are spending a few days with friends in Owasco, Cayuga Co. N.Y.

Elmer Morrill, of the firm of Morrill Bros., is in New York city purchasing a new printing press and other material for their office. Since placing steam in their establishment their work has nearly doubled.

Ladies of the Foreign Missionary Society of the M. E. church will give a literary entertainment at half past seven o'clock this evening, at the church. Immediately following a free supper will be given to all members of the congregation.

BOOTS AND [illegible]

We will commence a [illegible] sale of

WHITE GOODS AND LINENS,

Continuing it as a Special Sale for

Two Weeks.

We have taken great care in selecting these goods having never before received many of the kinds and styles so early in the season. We have found by experience to secure handsome styles they must be selected early and we now use this same argument to our customers. Come early and secure the handsomest styles. The following goods will be put on display. The choicest lot of Hamburg Edges and Insertions, we have ever shown. Also Swiss and Nainsook Embroideries, Tuckings, Pufflngs, Rufflings. Laces of all kinds, Irish Trimmings, Indian Trimmings, Rick Rack in large quantity, Piques, Nainsooks, Victoria Lawn, Persian Lawn, for Ties, Barred and Check Mulls. In fact most all desirable White Goods, including those elegant cream and plain white Dotted Swiss Muslins for those hot summer days.

Next—Our Linens and we think all of our patrons who have purchased of us Table Linens, Napkins, Towels, Fronting Linens, &c. &c., will join with us in saying they are Handsome, Good and Cheap. The assortment never as large as to-day. We will remark right here that the Dry Goods and Millinery Establishment of Francis E. Bacon will by far lead any previous year of its existence in its much larger stock in every department, carefulness of selections, Cash Cash Cash in Buying and Selling—Nerve, Push and Enterprise to meet every change of the season—with a larger corps of clerks we expect to meet all politely, pleasantly and better than all the lowest prices ever given to Fulton people. Thanking the people of Fulton and vicinity for their Liberal Patronage of the past we remain very gratefully yours [illegible] Mr. Abram [illegible] of Port Ewen, Ulster county, [illegible] His disease involved the whole of his thigh-bone, and the suffering man looked forward, not without apparent reason, to death as his only deliverer. His family physician refused to amputate the limb—asserting that the operation would kill the patient on the spot. Dr. David Kennedy, of Rondout, N. Y., who was consulted, held a different opinion, and amputated the limb. The Doctor then administered freely his great Blood Specific FAVORITE REMEDY to afford tone and strength to the system, prevent the return of the disease and Mr. Ellsworth remains to this day in the bloom of health. This gentleman's disease was the offspring of foul blood, and Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY purified the blood and restored to him the power once more to enjoy his life. Are you suffering from any disease traceable to the same cause? Try Favorite Remedy. Your druggist has it. One Dollar a bottle. Bear in mind the proprietor's name and address: Dr David Kennedy, Rondout, New York.

I read how you my infant cough attended,
Through long and weary nights of anxious care.
And how the life but just begun had ended,
Had not the mother's saving hand been there.

I read how you my early footsteps guided,
And watched solicitous my later youth,
And how the early fault you gently chided,
And taught me virtue, love and holy truth.

O, that those sinless years to me returning
The purity of life's young day could bring
O, weary soul so full of fruitless yearning,
How sin hath soiled the plumage of thy wing!

Thine image gentle mother, ever near me,
Where'er I go it follows night and day;
It rises o'er the gloom a star to cheer me,
And lead me from temptation's dangerous way

I've wandered far and tasted many a pleasure,
Have drank of sorrow, tested friendship's worth,
My erring feet have moved to folly's measure,
But thee I've found the truest heart on earth!

What would have happened if Noah's Ark had been sawed in two?

Same result—No race.

A Vaccine Virus Factory.

Probably the leading vaccine factory in this country is in a barn in the outskirts of Greenwhich, N. J. From this barn vaccine matter is sent to Japan, Europe, and all over the United States. Business in quills here has been very brisk this winter. The first calf was inoculated from vaccine matter brought from Europe It was not until they had experimented a number of times that the vaccine took, and from this calf it was given to the next and so on for twelve years to the present time. The calves are in most cases hired from the farmers. The operation does not injure, but, on the contrary, they are said to to be benefited by it. They do not suffer any more pain than a person who is vaccinated, for the process is the same in both cases, except that two or three hundred incisions are made on the calf instead of only one. There is a cow in that village which is said to be the animal which was first vaccinated twelve years ago.

Quick Returns.

"My son" said a banker to his young hopeful, "I want to give you a lesson in business. Here is a half a dollar. Now if you can find a boy whom you can trust who will take this money and pay you interest for it, you may lend it to him; and if you invest it wisely I'll increase your capital."

When night came on the banker said:

"My son, how did you invest your money to-day?

"Well father," replied the little fellow, "I saw a boy on the street without any shoes, and he had no dinner, so I gave him my fifty cents to buy something to eat with."

"You'll never make a business man in the world," said the banker, business is business. But I will try you once more. Now here is a dollar to invest, see how well you can do it.

A loud peal of laughter from the boy followed this speech, which was thus explained: "My Sunday-school teacher said giving to the poor was lending to the Lord, and she said he would return to us double; but I did not think he would do it quite so quick."

The Future of Electricity.

A sanguine writer predicts incredible marvels which electricity is expected to accomplish before the end of the twentieth century. Chops and steaks will be cooked by electric sparks; fruits and vegetables will be grown all the year round, winter and summer, day and night; water will be purified from all germs of disease, while air, cleared of all noxious qualities, will be admitted to glass-covered streets and dwellings. Houses and places of business will be situated in immense inclosed edifices, the air of which will be wholesome and delightful to the sense of smell. Summer and winter will be abolished, and all parts of the globe will become equally inhabitable. Day will have attractions over night, for the artificial lights will be more pleasing than the sun. Small-pox Cigars.

Dr. Taylor, Chief of the Bureau of Health Vaccination Corps, of New York, says, that small-pox has been found among the Bohemian cigar makers in that city, and gives the following horrible details: "I know that there is a general impression that tobacco is a disinfectant, and that a cigar cannot possibly carry contagion. But, if this be true, how does it happen that we find the very worst cases of small-pox that we come across in places that are reeking with tobacco? We have taken children loathsome with the disease in its most advanced stages from rooms in which half a dozen people were at work on cigars, and the entire atmosphere was impregnated with tobacco, and where everybody, women as well as men, appeared to use it. I am not prepared to say that a cigar can convey contagion, but I am certainly not prepared to deny it, and I put the question to you just as it comes. Why should it not do so? Men sit working frequently at tables with the vaccine scab upon them. What could be easier than that a bit of the scab should fall upon the tobacco leaf, and be rolled up in a cigar? As a matter of fact, we have found men at work who were broken out with the disease, and who were rolling tobacco into cigars with their festering hands. The fever of the disease was in their breath. They were not inclined, even on our protests, to give up the work that supplied them with their daily bread, and one could not expect from them any consideration for other people. There has been a great deal of small-pox among the tenement-house cigarmakers, and a large number of cigars have been given out that were made in rooms where persons suffering from the disease were sick and recovering, and we knew nothing of it. In such cases, of course, the cigars could not be traced or destroyed. These cigars are in every case of an inferior quality, I am told, as all of the best cigars are made in the factories, and it is the dealers in cheap cigars who are to blame in the matter."

Help the Young Men.

Not to sympathize with the struggles of young men who are trying to make their way in life—not an easy task, in most instances—is to betray a cold, unsympathetic nature. The lawyer who takes advantage of his established reputation to snub the timid aspirant who is just beginning, the minister who takes advantage of a well-earned popularity to keep the sympathies of the churches from the fledgeling just from the seminary, the merchant who takes advantage of an extensive custom to crush out the small shopkeeper just starting by his side, are not only wicked but foolish. They proceed upon a false theory of life, and a false judgment of the means best adapted to keep their own heads above water. It is wise as well as kind to help the young, for they, actuated by gratitude, return that kindness when they can; and the old fable of the mouse and the lion is illustrated again and again. A shrewd man cannot help himself better than by helping those who are struggling for a position, and who will always remember the favor with warm admiration, and long for some means to return it. There are a thousand ways of helping young men to a start in life. It is not always necessary to lend them money, and perhaps that is rarely wise, unless the lender is certain that the business upon which they are entering will prove so remumerative that they will be able to meet their obligations without embarrassment and discouragement. Some help by giving the young men their friendship, by kind inquiries after their affairs, and by words of cheer and counsel at fitting moments. Some help by speaking good words for the worthy among their friends. Some help by putting young men in places of which they know. Some help by introducing them to influential people or societies.

A LESSON IN EQUESTRIANISM.

Horseback riding as an art and as a beneficial exercise is one of the most judicious habits that one could cultivate. While it affords the equestrian every opportunity for the cultivation of graceful posing, it comprises all the healthful elements of the most invigorating pleasures. Like all else in this world, however, if indulged in immoderately, the results are [illegible]

It gave me immediate relief, and I am now, and have been since the 1st of April, constantly engaged at my business, which I owe to your Safe Kidney and Liver Cure. The doctors all thought I was going to die, and when I improved so fast, several of the neighbors called in wonder to see me, and many of my friends are using your remedies

Thousands of equally strong endorsements—many of them in cases where hope was abandoned—have been voluntarily given, showing the remarkable power of Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure, in all diseases of the kidneys, liver or urinary organs. If any one who reads this has any physical trouble, remember the great danger of delay.

THE SUN.

NEW YORK, 1882.

THE SUN for 1882 will make its fifteenth annual revolution under the present management, shining, as always, for all, big and little, mean and gracious, contented and unhappy, Republican and Democratic, depraved and virtuous, intelligent and obtuse. The Sun's light is for mankind and womankind of every sort; but its genial warmth is for the good, while it pours hot discomfort on the blistering backs of the persistently wicked.

The Sun of 1868 was a newspaper of a new kind. It discarded many of the forms, and a multitude of the superfluous words and phrases of ancient journalism. It undertook to report in a fresh, succinct, unconventional way all the news of the world, omitting no event of human interest, and commenting upon affairs with the fearlessness of absolute independence. The success of this experiment was the success of The Sun. It effected a permanent change in the style of American newspapers. Every important journal established in this country in the dozen years past has been modelled after The Sun. Every important journal already existing has been modified and bettered by the force of the Sun's example.

The Sun of 1882 will be the same outspoken, truthtelling, and interesting newspaper.

By a liberal use of the means which an abundant prosperity affords, we shall make it better than ever before.

We shall print all the news, putting it in readable shape, and measuring its importance, not by the traditional yardstick, but by its real interest to the people. Distance from Printing House Square is not the first consideration with The Sun. Whenever anything happens worth reporting we get the particulars whether it happens in Brooklyn or in Bokhara.

In politics we have decided opinions; and are accustomed to express them in language that can be understood. We say what we think about men and events. That habit is the only secret of success of The Sun's political course.

The Weekly Sun gathers into eight pages the best matter of the seven daily issues. An Agricultural Department of unequaled merit, full market reports, and a liberal proportion of literary scientific and domestic intelligence complete The Weekly Sun, and make it the best newspaper for the farmer's household that was ever printed.

Who does not know and read and like The Sunday Sun, each number of which is a Golconda of interesting literature, with the best poetry of the day, prose every line worth reading, news, humor [illegible] book, and in-

A Hen That Sang.

A novel case was heard before Squire Wilson, of East Nottingham township, Chester county, Pa., recently. Last Spring a farmer of East Nottingham had thirty chickens stolen. Summer wore away, but no traces of the lost fowls. Subsequently the chicken owner visited a farm in the same township, and while looking at the fowls on the premises saw a hen which he thought resembled one of the number stolen from him. He inquired how the farmer obtained it, when a conversation followed, and concluded by the poultry owner saying: "If that chicken comes to me when I call her by name, she is mine." This was agreed to. "Annie, Annie," called the owner, and sure enough the hen come to him. "Jump up on my hand." Up jumped Annie. "Now sing for a grain of corn, Annie," called the owner. The pretty little hen immediately began to sing in her fowlish style a solo which fully convinced the two men to whom she rightfully belonged. The thief and pet chicken were brought before the 'squire, who heard the story and Annie's solo, and sentenced the thief.

RESCUED FROM DEATH

William J. Coughlin of Somerville, Mass., says: In the fall of 1876 I was taken with bleeding of the lungs followed by a severe cough. I lost my appetite and flesh and was confined to my bed. In 1877 I was admitted to the hospital. The doctors said I had a hole in my lung as big as a half dollar. At one time a report went around that I was dead. I gave up hope, but a friend told me of DR WILLIAM HALL'S BALSAM FOR THE LUNGS. I got a bottle, when to my surprise I began to feel better, and to-day I feel better than for three years past. I write this hoping every one afflicted with diseased Lungs will take DR WILLIAM HALL'S BALSAM, and be convinced that CONSUMPTION CAN BE CURED. I can positively say it has done more good than all the other medicines I have taken since my sickness.

"L."

BY PHILLIP BURROUGHS STRONG.

'Twas a dismal day and dreary,
With no ray of sunlight cheery,
When the lonely hours and weary
  Slowly, sadly passed away,
That I sat alone in sorrow
Thinking of the gloomy morrow,
Vainly striving not to borrow
  Anguish for the coming day,

Setting thus by grief attended,
Wishing almost life were ended,
I beheld a cloud extended
  In one great gigantic "L."
O, that letter seemed God's blessing,
"Light," and "Life," and "Love" expressing,
Seemed his tender voice addressing
  Words that like sweet manna fell.

"Cease, my child, thy sad repining,
Blackest clouds have silver lining;
Still above the sun is shining,
  Though thou canst not see his face.
Cease, O mourning one, thy weeping,
I, thy father, still am keeping
Constant vigil, never sleeping,
  Everlasting is my grace.

"He who on my promise resting,
Prays for faith, in faith requesting,
Shall affliction find attesting
  My divine, unchanging love;
Shall find springs in deserts welling,
And in gloom my glory dwelling;
Yes, shall find the clouds all spelling
  Covenants of peace above!"

Now when sorrow's darkness falling
Shrouds my soul in night appalling,
I, that blessed sign recalling
  Am assured that all is well;
When my heart with fear is quaking,
When life storms my hopes are shaking,
When I see my father making
  In the clouds his letter "L."

The great church on East street, in the city of C., was crowded. Expectant faces turned often to the door, and presently a bustle in that direction proclaimed the advent of the bridal party so anxiously looked for.

"Ah, here they are, George," said a tall, light-haired gentleman who stood with his companion in a retired corner of the church.

George Vane, seemingly unconscious that his name had been spoken, still kept his eyes thoughtfully fixed on the floor and tapped his boot idly with the light cane he held.

"Come, George, don't dream, but look," said his friend again, as the bridal train swept past, up the aisle.

George raised his head and glanced carelessly after the gauzy party.

"Seems to me that is a very young bride for such a gray haired man as yonder groom. Bah! What can she mean?"

"Oh, her parents urged her on; careless, thoughtless girl, she'll repent in time," sententiously explained Harry Berg.

The ceremony was short, and when the last prayer was said George Vane and his friend passed out of the church before the bridal party had moved from the altar. A few moments later the two friends were saying "good bye" at the depot.

"I have enjoyed your being here very much, George. Now, as soon as business permits come again, will you?"

"I certainly will, Berg, for I have also had an exceedingly pleasant time, and feel fresh for work now," answered George, adding, "and here is the train. Write to me, Harry, good bye."

Harry Berg left the depot, and off sped the train which bore George Vane back to his books and studies again. The pleasant memories of his visit to C. soon remained as past dreams; as for the brilliant wedding he had witnessed, he thought no more of it, when certain circumstances brought it all back to his mind most forcibly. For about fourteen months after his visit, George worked long and steadily in his profession, then he was called to a distant city on important business. And there though immersed heart and brain in work, George Vane found his fate.

At the elegant boarding house where he was staying there were four gentlemen besides himself, and two ladies. One of the ladies was a little dark-eyed creature, who always dressed in deepest mourning, and who was very seldom seen to smile. When she did, it was sadder to George than her usual look of patient, mournful weariness. It was to her side of the table that George Vane's earnest eyes turned so often; but it was a long time before he and Mrs. Allyn became acquainted; a long, long time before he ventured to ask her company for a ride, and still longer before his love for the lady revealed itself to her.

George was a man, though in every sense of the word. He told Ada Allyn all that his earnest heart felt and then waited for his answer.

"You told me, Ada," he said as her pale face was turned aside—"you told me that you were married once and became a widow in a year. You said also, that your married life had been a [illegible] because you found out too late [illegible]

—I do give as much as you ask as a return for your love, and I ask of you one thing. George have perfect trust in me. Never doubt me, and I believe I shall yet find the world is beautiful."

George Vane bowed his head with tears in his pitying eyes, and as he held the trembling hand he vowed within himself that her path henceforth should yield but lovely flowers. He wrote home to his mother a few days after, such a happy, hopeful letter, that the proud mother felt her heart already won by the description of his promised bride, and the happiness in his noble heart because of his love.

"Have everything fresh and beautiful mother," he wrote, and Mrs. Vane and pretty, blue-eyed Dora determined that all should be as George desired.

As George's business in L— was completed, he urged Ada [illegible] early marriage, and then, after a tour of two weeks, the young bride and groom arrived at the Vane mansion, and there received a hearty welcome from mother and sister. Dora was delighted with her brother's lovely wife, and the two ladies had not been together very long before each was pleased and each ready to love devotedly. After tea the little party gathered in the parlor for a long evening's talk.

"Now, Georgie," said Dora, "get ready to tell me all about L—, and all about your long journey."

"As soon as I run over these letters, sister mine. Here is one from Berg. I must see what Hal has to say;" and George soon became deeply interested in his friend's racy letter. Presently the ladies were startled from the low-toned conversation by a quick exclamation from George. Then he looked up with a contracted brow and pitying eyes.

"Did I ever mention a wedding I witnessed at C., Dora the last day I was there?" he asked.

"I believe you did George; wasn't it a young girl who married an old man for his wealth?"

"Yes, that is the one; I had forgotten all about it until this letter recalled it all. Berg said the girl poisoned her husband after they had lived together but ten months, and she was imprisoned. Her wealthy friends released her, hushed the matter up, and she fled no one knows whither, leaving her beautiful home in the hands of a brother of her murdered husband. The poor, miserable girl! I did not see her face, but she certainly could not have been more than eighteen when she married that gray-headed man."

"Oh, dreadful, dreadful!" shuddered Dora, looking up for sympathy in Ada's face. "I pity the poor girl as much as I abhor her dreadful deed, don't you, Ada?"

She received no answer. Ada was leaning her head heavily on her hand, and the part of her face that Dora could see was livid in its whiteness. "Are you sick, Ada, or tired?" she asked hastily, putting her hand tenderly on the bowed head.

There was no answer. Again, and George came hurriedly forward and lifted the ghastly face.

"Water, Dora! Water! she has fainted," he cried.

Dora flew from the room and was back in a minute.

"She is tired out poor dear," said Mrs. Vane, bathing her forehead with a soft gentle touch.

"Yes, she is not very strong, and we have travelled far to day," said George, who had stood anxiously by, holding the little limp hand.

After long endeavor the deathly swoon went off, and Ada raised herself up from the lounge where they had laid her.

"Oh, my head, George!" she moaned, pressing her hands to her temples as if in agony.

"Does your head pain you very much dear?" asked Mrs. Vane, pityingly.

"Oh, yes, my head! but my heart aches worse, George. I believe it will break!" still moaned the sad, sobbing tones.

Mrs. Vane looked wondering at her son and then—

"You had better take her up stairs, George. Dora and I will put her to bed. I am afraid she is dangerously ill."

George lifted the light form of his unconscious wife and carried her to the large and elegant room that had been prepared for her. Ada slept soundly, or appeared to, and the next morning came down to breakfast, better; but George's anxious eye detected one thing that filled him with wonder and sorrow. Her old suffering, heart-broken look had come back to the sweet, pale face of his wife and her sorrowful, grieving look that he has fondly hoped was gone forever. He said nothing to Ada, but endeavored, to devote his spare time, more than ever, to her enjoyment.

One afternoon, just before sun-down, he came into the parlor exclaiming,—

"Who goes riding with me this evening? Who?"

"Ada must go, George," responded Dora; "mamma and I will be engaged. So come along sister;" and springing up from the piano stool, she drew Ada from the room to get ready.

"You must ride and walk a great deal, Ada, so you will get hearty and strong like me," she said. Ada smiled faintly and then went down to where George was waiting.

"Already, little one?"

"All ready, George," she said smilingly; and Dora waited at the door to see them off.

"Now for a fine, breezy ride, Ada," said George, opening the carriage door. "By the way, Dora, I forgot to tell you that Harry Berg is coming to pay us a visit. He will be here to-morrow. Tell [illegible] but she pushed his hand away and stood as rigid as a corpse.

"Heavens, Ada, what is it?" exclaimed George, in a low frightened voice. It seemed to rouse her. She took a step toward the house, and cried, "George! Oh, my husband! Don't cast me off!" and then fell into a swoon of the same deadly nature as when she first came to their home.

George caught her, sent the carriage off, and carried his wife into the house. It was a long time before she recoved, and, as soon as her eyes opened, and she became conscious of the anxious faces bending over her, she turned her own pale agonized face away with a groan that seemed to rend her very heart.

"Leave her with me, mother, and Dora," said George.

When the two ladies had gone out he sat down beside his wife and took her hand in his. Ada turned and met his troubled eye, and for a moment there was only that mute look between them. Then the poor girl's lip quivered.

"George, do you remember what I asked you the day you asked me to be your wife? I told you to trust me, George, to trust me always. You will George, tell me you will."

"In everything, darling; to the end of the world. And now, Ada, I'd like to know the meaning of the exclamation you made when out at the carriage, or were you suffering so much that you spoke wildly."

She saw his searching glance, and putting both hands over her face she said hoarsely,—

"I meant what I said, George; I was perfectly sane, but, oh! I can't explain now! Wait a little longer, George; just a little longer."

George Vane had never asked nor received any particulars of his wife's former life. He had seen that the least allusion to it seemed to hurt her; he noticed that she never referred to it herself, and shrank when he happened to do so. Her strange behavior now, and her declaration there was something she would like or ought to confess to him filled him with strange thoughts. He could not think harshly of her; he tried not to be suspicious or unjust, as he sat holding her hand that evening as she lay so pale before him. When he leaned over and kissed her Ada guessed the thoughts that were passing in his mind.

"Let me be quiet George, till I feel better. Perhaps to-morrow—but O, I forgot! To-morrow will bring the bitterest misery yet."

As she buried her face in her hands again, George Vane started up and paced the floor for some time. Then he came back to her.

"Ada," he said, "I see that you have something you would like to confess and which I feel sure it would be better for us to share. I shall not press you, however. You know who and what I am. When you are ready to speak I am ready to listen and counsel."

So saying, he left her. When the door closed upon him Ada started up with hands outstretched, crying in a low heart-broken way,—

"Oh, my husband! I feel those will be the last kind words you will ever speak to me."

The next morning Ada did not appear and Dora and her mother proved to be most attentive nurses. Towards noon Harry Berg came in with George. There was a merry welome for him, and the sounds of the joyous, hearty greeting came floating up to the sick room. Dora listened for a moment.

"Mr. Berg has come, Ada. I hear him talking. Poor dear! I wish you could go down with me."

Ada turned away from the kind young face.

"No I don't want to go down. I don't want to see him. I'll never see him if I can help it."

Dora listened in amazement, but then, thinking, probably that Ada was too ill to know what she was saying, she went out softly and sent her mother up to the sick girl. There were only three at the dinner table that day, but with Harry Berg there was no dearth of enjoyment. He and Dora were a good match at talking, and George despite his anxiety, found himself also drawn into the merriment.

"By the way, George, I am extremely sorry Mrs. Vane is not down stairs. I should like very much to know her," said Harry.

"I am sorry, too, Hal; but I hope to have her down stairs by to-morrow; she is not seriously ill."

"And so you had to go West for your wife, did you, George? I really began to fear you were settling down to confirmed bachelorhood—like me, you know;" and Harry glanced mischievously over at Dora, who turned her head suddenly in another direction.

Two days passed away, and then Ada was well enough to go down to the parlor. She went down leaning on George's arm; it was evening and the parlors were not yet lighted up, but Harry, Dora and Mrs. Vane were seated at the bay-window chatting very sociably in the dusk.

"Here, little invalid," cried Dora, "come sit beside me in this easy chair."

George introduced his wife to his friend, and then tried to draw Ada into the merry conversation. After awhile George proposed to have lights and music. The little party agreed—all but Ada. Dora, who was holding the dimpled hand closely in hers, felt it grow cold as death, and found that Ada was trembling as though with an ague.

"What is it, Ada?" she whispered in an alarmed manner.

"Hush, darling, don't notice it. It is nothing," murmured Ada, in a low smothered tone.

Just then a flood of light from the [illegible]

mentary expectation of some fearful stroke. The sudden break in the conversation attracted the attention of the others, and George looked with wonderment to see the hopeless, helpless gaze of his wife's eyes.

As he was about to ask some explanation, Harry Berg suddenly started from his chair in a confused way, as if to leave the room. Ada Vane then rose and, going swiftly towards him, laid her hand on his arm. Her lips opened, but refused to do their office. Harry covered face with his hands, and the others stood watching the two in dumb surprise. At last Ada spoke.

"Harry, we were friends once; I knew you would recognize me; I am going to leave you here, Harry, to tell all the dreadful tale to my husband, to my sweet sister, and to my dear, dear mother. You must tell them, Harry, I never can. It has been killing me by slow torture all these long months. I can not ask you to believe me innocent, for no one can do that; no one will. I know I did wrong to marry George Vane, but now he must know all. Tell them, Harry, and spare me that much for the sake of an old friendship."

She had spoken as though in sleep, and, but for the fearful pallor of her face, no one could have guessed that she was suffering, her voice was so even and soft. Then she glided out like a spirit. Harry sank into a chair with a groan, and George came and stood beside him.

"Tell me Berg," was all he said.

Harry looked up into the stern, troubled face, and shook his head.

"I can't do it George! It is too fearful."

George still stood looking at him waiting.

"O George, dear old friend, have you any idea who that woman is that you have brought to your home?"

"I only know that she is my wife, and that I love her," said George steadily.

Harry Berg sighed a deep-drawn, heavy sigh, and then, in a kind of agonized desperation, he exclaimed,—

"George Vane, you have married a woman who was imprisoned for poisoning her aged husband."

There was a scream from Dora Vane as she sank down at her mother's feet, crying,—

"O mamma, mamma!" in a vague, helpless way, while Mrs. Vane sat with tightly drawn lips, waiting to see how her boy would bear this awful stroke. George Vane stood as if turned to stone; then his eye gleamed dangerously, and his arm outstretched as though to strike his friend to the earth. Harry only folded his arms and looked with pitying eyes at the convulsed face of his friend.

"The evidence was all against her, George. I cannot think her guilty, I knew her so well, but the proofs of her guilt were most conclusive. George, I was with her the very day she bought the poison; she told me that her husband had told her to get it, that he wished to try some experiments. I knew him to be a great experimentalist, also no mean chemist, so I thought no more about it until I heard of Mr. Trent's murder, and learned other proofs of his young wife's guilt. I need not say my heart bleeds for you, George, but in the eyes of the world, your wife is a murderess."

As Harry Berg's last words ceased, there was a silence in the room; George Vane's head was upon his breast, and his hands hanging down as though all the strength and spirit were stricken from him by this first great grief that his life had known. Dora's bitter sobbing presently broke the stillness, but Mrs. Vane still sat with her mother's heart in her eyes, and great tears rolling down her cheeks, unfelt, unnoticed.

Presently George turned away, opened the door, and passed on up stairs and entered Ada's room. It was a long, long time before he came down again, but when he did come there was a wonderful change upon his face.

"Mother," he said, in deep, earnest tones, "mother my wife is as innocent as a babe. I felt it all the while, and I committed a terrible sin to think for a moment that she could do a deed like that of which Harry spoke. Go to her, mother; she needs all our love and comfort. Go, Dora; let your sister know your heart feels for her, also."

Mrs. Vane and Dora went at once, and George turned to his friend, who still sat in a sorrowful attitude, regarding the troubled ones around him.

"Harry, old boy, I don't think we have any reason for sad faces; cheer up! my heart is light, for I trust Ada as I would an angel. There is some dark mystery about this affair, but God will clear it all up in his own good time."

The two men clasped hands, each feeling that all would come out right. And so it did, and far sooner than they thought. A gentleman came to Mr. Vane's door some time after Harry Berg had left for his home.

"Can I see Mr. Vane?" asked the stranger.

He and George were closeted an hour together, and when the door closed behind the visitor, George clasped his little, pale wife in his arms with a fervent "Thank God! O thank God!"

"What is it, George!" tremblingly asked Ada.

"Come, mother, come, Dora, Ada, all! Come and listen," cried George, drawing a paper from his pocket, and proceeding to read it. It proved to be the confession of Samuel Trent, brother of Ada's husband, and in which was fully and freely confessed that he, Samuel Trent, was the murderer of his own brother, and the destroyer of his wife's good name, and almost of her life. He attributed his fearful crimes all to his envious, mercenary nature. His [illegible] order. Harry Berg sent the lawyer here, as no one in all C—knew anything about you but Harry himself."

Ada looked up into her noble husband's face. All the woe was gone now; the despairing eyes were bright with love and peace at last.

"The thorns are all crushed, George, all is beautiful to me now."

Dora threw her arms around her sister with many happy tears, and Mrs. Vane murmuaed softly,—

"The good Lord has been with us all. Bless Him for it all, my dear children."

The Growth of Our Cities.

The census figures as they come to us every few days from Washington increase in interest. The growth of the population in 40 years from 17,069,453 to 50,155,783 is in itself a startling fact.

There are few people who are fully conscious that we now have nearly 19,000,000 more inhabitants than when the civil war with the South was begun, but it is true. In 10 years we have gained over 11,000,000. This gain shows many curious facts, especially in the population of cities, which are worth considering as the centres of population.

New York has grown in 10 years from 942,292 to 1,206,590. This, however, is not as important as the increase in Chicago, the population of which was 298,977 in 1870, and is now 503,304. Brooklyn's increase was marked, but Chicago gained nearly 100,000 more inhabitants than her eastern compeer. Brooklyn having advanced from 396,099 to 566,689. If Chicago keeps this pace for the next 10 years she will be the third city in the Union, and seriously challenge Philadelphia. The increase in Boston is notable, especially as everybody looks upon Boston as a thoroughly provincial town, but it is due in considerable part, to annexation of former suburbs to the municipality. Twenty years ago there were in Boston 177,812; now there are 362,535. St. Louis has only increased 40,000 during the last 10 years, which is in marked contrast with the tremendous bound of Chicago. San Francisco has done very well, rising in the decade from 149,473 to 233,957. Philadelphia shares the same advance as New York, gaining over 170,000 inhabitants in 10 years. Washington indicates gratifying progress. Twenty years ago there were but 61,122 people in the capital; now there are 147,307, placing it as a city above Louisville, Detroit and Newark. The greatest changes will be found in the West. Thus, Denver which was unknown in 1860, and had only 4,759 in 1870 has now a population of 35,630—perhaps the most notable increase in the whole list of American cities. Oakland, Cal., San Francisco's chief suburb, which had but 10,500 10 years ago, has now 34,556. Omaha has jumped from 16,083 to 30,518, while Kansas City, 32,260 in 1870, is now 55,813. All the western cities, without exception, show a large percentage of gain. The same holds true in a smaller degree of the manufactvring towns like Paterson, N. J., Lowell and Fall River, Mass. We have also old fashioned, quiet places like Hartford, which has only advanced 5,000 in 10 years. Camden feels the influence of Philadelphia by an increase of 21,000 in 10 years, being now a thriving city of 41,658, making as rapid an advance as St. Paul. The southern towns do not show good results. Atlanta is the only city of note in which marked progress is visible, rising from 21,789 to 34,398. Memphis has fallen away, having been 40,226 in 1870, and now is 33,591. Charleston has gained about 1,000 in 10 years, and only 9,000 in 20 years. Savannah is almost at a stand-still, having 28,235 in 1870, and only 30,681 to-day. Mobile has fallen away from 32,034 in 1870 to 31,205. Richmond has gained a considerable addition, advancing from 51,038 to 63,803. The tides of growth run toward the West and the manufacturing centres.

Rowell, Vint, Panchot, Fitzgerald and Noremac are the principal participants, but others are expected to make their appearance and punish themselves.

GUITEAU has received several presents in letters, each one being small-pox scabs; one of the letters contained the following sentence: "Here I send one small-pox. It is worse than the sentence of Judge Cox.

Rub yourself with the scab,
And it will surely stop your gab."

FRIDAY at the Midlothian coal pits, thirteen miles from Richmond, Va., thirty-five men perished. These men were in a pit over twelve hundred feet deep working in galleries extending three thousand feet from the main shaft. It is thought the slate fell from the roof of the gallery thus cutting off ventilation. Twenty-two of the men were negroes and twenty-four of the thirtyfive were married and had families. The scenes at the mouth of the pit are said to have been terrible as the news spread and friends reached the place. A search for the victims has been instituted.

THE executive committee of the trunk lines held a meeting in New York last Saturday, and agreed on a basis for traveler's fares, and the following first and second class rates were restored yesterday: Chicago to New York, limited, $20; unlimited, $23.25, except by the Pennsylvania Central and Baltimore and Ohio roads, which is $26.50; second class by all lines is established at $17.00. The rates made for the New England States are on the basis of $22 on limited from Chicago to Boston, via all routes, crossing the Hudson River north of New York city are made by annexing New York and local rates, and seventy-five cents transfer. No more cheap fares.

THE deadlock has been broken. The regular democratic nominee for speaker, Patterson, was elected. Speaker Patterson authorized the Albany Argus to say that he comes to the office without pledges of any kind, real or implied, actual or constructive, present or prospective, to any men or interests in the legislature or out of the legislature. This announcement, to be understood in its broadest and minutest sense, is not necessary, by reason of anything in the career or character of Mr. Patterson, but it is put forth to meet any theories or interpretations which might be formed, in hostile or suspicious quarters, under the circumstances of his election, by the votes of members who, for nearly a month, held aloof from his support."

GUITEAU has so much to say about the court "in banc," that we take the following from the Syracuse Herald; "The term "banc" is borrowed from the French, coming to us through English legal usage of many years. It is equivalent to our "bench," and signifies a full court—one competent to pass judgment upon the rulings of a single Judge, who may nevertheless be a member of it. The particular "court in banc" to which Guiteau's appeal is to be taken consists, we believe, of Chief Justice D. K. Carter and Associate Justices Andrew Wyle, Arthur McArthur, Alexander B. Hagner Walter S. Cox and Charles P. James. Sitting separately, these Justices have jurisdiction similar to that of Supreme court Justices in our State. Sitting together, or "in banc," as the Supreme court of the District in General term, they have jurisdiction as to points of law raised in cases tried before the individual magistrates."

THE [illegible] Apportionment bill, as amended by the House Committee on Census, was reported in the House of Representatives Friday. It provides that after the 3d of March, 1883, the House of Representatives shall be composed of 320 members, to be apportioned between the States as follows: Alabama, 8; Arkansas, 5; California, 5; Colorado, 1; Connecticut, 4; Delaware, 1; Florida, 1; Georgia, 10; Illinois, 21; Indiana, 18; Iowa, 11; Kansas, 6; Kentucky, 11; Louisiana, 6; Maine, 4; Maryland, 6; Massachusetts, 12; Michigan, 11; Minnesota, 5; Mississippi, 7; Missouri, 14; Nebraska, 3; Nevada, 1; New Hampshire, 2; New Jersey, 7; New York, 34; North Carolina, 9; Ohio, 21; Oregon, 1; Pennsylvania, 29; Rhode Island, 1; South Carolina, 6; Tennessee, 10; Texas, 10; Vermont, 2; Virginia, 10; West Virginia 4, and Wisconsin, 8. If this bill is enacted thirteen of the States, New York among the number, will gain one each, six states two each, while Kansas will gain three and Texas four. Florida, Maine, New Hampshire, Rhode Island and Vermont each lose one.

Guiteau Sentenced.

Motion for a new trial in the Guiteau case was argued before Judge Cox in Washington last Friday. After passing upon the pleas entered by his counsel, Scoville, Judge Cox refused the motion and asked Guiteau if he had anything to say why sentence should not be passed upon him.

The prisoner arose pale, but with lips compressed and desperate determination stamped upon his features. In a low deliberate tone he began, but soon his manner became wild and violent and pounding upon the table he delivered himself of the following harrangue:

HIS REASONS.

"I am not guilty of the charge set forth in the indictment. It was God's act not mine and God will take care of it, and don't let the American people forget; he will take care of it and every officer of this government from the executive down to that marshal, taking in every man on that jury and every member of this bench will pay for it and the American nation will roll in blood if my body goes into the ground and I am hung. The Jews put the despised Gallilean into the grave. For a time they triumphed but at the destruction of Jerusalem 40 years afterwards the Almighty got even with them. I am not afraid of death. I am here as God's man, kill me to-morrow if you want. I am God's man and have been from the start."

JUDGE COX PRONOUNCES SENTENCE.

Cox then proceeded to pass sentence. He said: You have been convicted of a crime so terrible in its circumstances and so far-reaching in its power it has drawn upon you the horror of the whole world and the execrations of your countrymen. The excitement produced by such an offense made it no easy task to secure for you a fair and impartial trial, but you have had the power of the U. S. treasury and of the government in your service to protect your person from violence and procure evidence from all parts of the country.

You have had as fair and impartial a jury as ever assembled in a court of justice. You have been defended by counsel with a zeal and devotion that merits the highest encomium and I certainly have done my best to secure a fair presentation of your defense. Notwithstanding all this you have been found guilty. It would have been a comfort to many people if the verdict of the jury had established the fact that your act was that of an irresponsible man. It would have left the people the satisfying belief that the crime of political assassination was something entirely foreign to the institutions and civilization of our country, but the result denied them that comfort. The country will accept it as a fact that that crime can be committed and the court will have to deal with it with the highest penalty known to the criminal code to serve as an example to others.

Your career has been so extraordinary people might well at times have doubted your sanity, but one cannot but believe when the crime was committed you thoroughly understood the nature of the crime and its consequences (Guiteau—I was acting as God's man) and that you had moral sense and conscience enough to recognize the moral iniquity of such an act. (prisoner—That's a matter of opinion) your own testimony shows you recoiled with horror from the idea. You say you prayed against it. You say you thought it might be prevented. This shows your conscience warned you against it but by a wretched sophistry of your own mind you worked yourself up against the protest of your own conscience. What motive could have induced you to this act must be a matter of conjecture. Probably men will think some fanaticism or morbid desire for self-exaltation was the real inspiration for the act.

Your own testimony seems to controvert the theories of your counsel. They maintained and thought honestly, I believe, that you were driven against your will as an insane impulse to commit the act but your testimony showed you deliberately resolved to do it and that deliberate, misguided will was the sole impulse. This may seem insanity to some persons but the law looks upon it as a wilful crime. You will have due opportunity of having any errors I may have committed during the course of the trial passed upon by the court in banc, but meanwhile it is necessary for me to pronounce the sentence of the law that you be taken hence to the common jail of the district whence you came and there be kept in confinement until on Friday, the 30th day of June, 1882, you will be taken to the place prepared for execution within the walls of said jail and there between the hours of 12 m. and 2 p. m. you will be hanged by the neck until you are dead, and may the Lord have mercy on your soul.

[illegible] hundred [illegible] letters [illegible]. "This is but one day's mail," he said. "I devoted several hours yesterday to this work, and I have become quite an adept." Clipping the end of one of these letters he drew out the contents, disclosing a check for $5,000. By his side was a large waste basket nearly full of papers, and into it went letter and check. "At first," said Mr. Scoville, "before the amounts became so generous, I thought possibly some of the checks might be genuine, but upon investigation I found all were worthless and I paid no further attention to them. Checks representing millions of dollars I have thrown away in this manner." And he continued to open letter after letter, many with checks for fabulous sums, some with hideous valentines, others with doggerel verses, and occasionally a request for an autograph with stamp inclosed.

CORPORAL.

The following communication to the Hon. Geo. B. Sloan of Oswego explains itself:

DEAR SIR: Having been appointed by Governor Cornell the central committee to receive contributions from citizens of the state of New York, to aid in the erection of a suitable monument at Cleveland Ohio in memory of the late, lamented President Garfield, we have the honor to request that you will assist the good work by collecting three hundred dollars, that being the estimated share of Oswego county, of the sum of forty thousand dollars($40,000), which is expected from this state.

Cleveland, as we are informed, has already contributed seventy thousand dollars of the total amount of two hundred and fifty thousand dollars, desired for the erection of this national monument at Garfield's grave, to which every state in the Union is expected to contribute a share.

We earnestly request that you will take an interest in this patriotic subject and aid us by collecting, in whatever way seems best in your judgement, your county's portion, and remit the amount at an early date to our treasurer Hon. Thos. Hillhouse, president of the Metropolitan Trust Company, William and Pine streets, New York city, together with a list of subscribers, to each one of whom will be forwarded a receipt for the amount contributed, on a memorial certificate, bearing the likeness of General Garfield.

We have the honor to be, dear sir,
Very respectfully yours,
JAS. GRANT WILSON,
ELLIOT F. SHEPHERD,
THOS. L. JAMES.
Central Com. State of New York.

Contributions may be sent to Hon. Geo. B. Sloan, Oswego.

HE DID NOT MINCE MATTERS.

A representative of the Lynn (Mass.) Item, in a late ramble throughout that city, gathered, among other scraps of interest and information, the following: The first place visited by the reporter was the fruit store of Mr. J. Levett, No. 67 Market street, in response to a rumor that the proprietor had been cured of the rheumatism by the great remedy. Mr. Levett not being in, the reporter had a talk with his son. Mr. Levett stated that his father had been cured of an exceedingly severe attack of rheumatism by the St. Jacob's Oil. He had the disease in the right arm and shoulder, which became perfectly helpless after being affected a few hours. His pain was so great that he could not rest in comfort or attend to business with any degree of satisfaction. After enduring this sort of thing for some time, he purchased a bottle of the Great German Remedy and began to apply it. He did not mince matters at all, but just used the Oil for all it was worth. After pursuing this treatment for three days the pain was banished and his father was in a perfectly healthy condition. He has never since felt any rheumatic pain.

[illegible]

[illegible] sanity of David R. Poulton [illegible] the penitentiary, have nearly completed their duties. The hearing of evidence was commenced at the penitentiary Thursday afternoon and was finished yesterday morning. Superintendent Spaulding, chaplain Beadle, Dr. D. M. Totman, keeper Eno, Uriah Poulton, of Deansville, Oneida county, a brother of the prisoner, and Mr. Burke, a neighbor of the Poulton family, were the witnesses called. Over two years ago Poulton was received at the penitentiary, to serve a term of three years imposed for a horse theft of which he was convicted at Deansville. Until last June he was regarded as one of the mildest-mannered and best-behaved convicts in the institution. During that month he escaped, but was recaptured before he had been at liberty many hours. The morning following his capture Poulton was punished for his escape after the fashion common to most prisons. Poulton was first subjected to a severe horse-whipping. Then he was turned over to the care of a tonsorial artist who gave him a grotesque appearance by taking from his head all the hair except a strip extending on the very top from the forehead to the crown. He was made to stand on a barrel with both legs shackled in plain sight of the other convicts. From that time he was never the same man. Instead of being willing and obliging he became sulky and morose. Trouble between the keepers and himself became almost every day occurrences. When at work in the shops he would secrete bolts, bars of iron and the like in his clothing and when one crossed his whim, would prepare to do them bodily harm with the implements. His conduct became so strange that nearly every one in the institution became afraid of him. It was found necessary on several occasions to place him in the dungeon. He affirmed that everybody was plotting against him and seeking his ruin. He alleged that the prison authorities poisoned his food, and instead of eating what was placed before him, he would seize that given to the man next to him at the table. One day a keeper tried to force Poulton to eat from his own plate. A terrible fight ensued. The keeper then broke his cane over Poulton's head without conquering him. He then knocked the convict down and kicked him about the head and body until he became insensible. Poulton bears the marks of that fight to this day, and complains that his head has not felt right since. The story of Poulton's shooting a few months ago is familiar. For three weeks previous he was chained to the dungeon floor. He freed himself and gained the corridor, where the fight between the keeper and himself took place. He has now nearly recovered from the effects of the wounds which were inflicted by the bullets lodged in his body by the keepers. It is understood that the commission is perfectly satisfied that Poulton is insane, and considers that his every action shows that such is the case. Superintendent Spaulding and Dr. Totman believe that the man is only feigning insanity. Most of the other prison authorities, however, do not now concur in that opinion.

The Syracuse Journal of last Monday evening says that the commission appointed to examine into the case of David R. Poulton, the convict at the Onondaga penitentiary, who was shot some time since while trying to escape, concluded its labors yesterday morning, by filing a decision in the case with Judge Reigel. The commission decides that the prisoner is insane and recommends the suspension of his sentence. This decision will turn Poulton over to his friends for confinement in some insane asylum.

LITERARY ITEMS.

In the March Wide Awake, under the tittle, "How I entertained Two Little Girls," an old schoolmate of Miss Louisa M. Alcott, will give some charming reminiscences of that popular author. Mr. G. W. Chadwick, the musical conductor of the Greek play, Œdipus, has set Miss [illegible] "Mill Song" to music. For the March Wide Awake will be drawings by Charles Volkmar—and of his famous duck-paintings—and Mrs. Jessie Curtis Shepherd, together with an exquisite "æsthetic" picture by Miss Jessie McDermott, entitled "The Girl of the Period." A new edition of "At Eventide," with biographical sketch of Dr. Nehemiah Adams, written by his son, is to be issued this spring by D. Lothrop & Co. A new edition of Banvard's "Life of Daniel Webster," is to to be published by D. Lothrop & Co., with some additional matter brought to light by the recent centenary observances. Subscription editions of "Round the World Tour of Christian Missions" and "Round the World Letters," will soon be published with illustrations.

Important Newspaper Decisions.

A post master is required to give notice by letter, (returning the paper does not answer the law,) when a subscriber does not take his paper out of the office, and state the reason for its not being taken, and a neglect to do so makes the post master responsible to the publisher for the payment.

Any person who takes a paper from the post office, whether directed to his name or another, or whether he has subscribed or not, is responsible for the pay.

If a person orders his paper discontinued he must pay all arrearages, or the publishers may continue to send it until the payment is made, and collect the whole amount, whether it be taken from the office or not. There can be no legal discontinuance until the payment is made.

If the subscriber orders his paper discontinued at a certain time, and the publisher continues to send it, the subscriber is bound to pay for it if he takes it from the office. The law proceeds upon the ground that a man must pay for what he uses.

The courts have decided that refusing to take a newspaper or periodical from the post office, or removing and having them uncalled for is prima facia evidence of intentional fraud.

ONCE IN A LIFE TIME

Occurs an opportunity to buy a model farm at an immense sacrifice. The Keller farm containing 177 acres, situated two and one half miles south of Fulton is offered for sale at the astonishingly low price of $36 per acre, good buildings and fair fences, never failing brook running through whole length of farm. Land slightly undulating, very fertile easy to cultivate and pleasantly situated. Fulton is acknowledged to be the most thriving and beautiful village in the State, numbering about 5,000 inhabitants The close proximity of this farm to the village makes it for a milk and dairy farm or for gardening purposes the most desirable farm in the whole state. It can be advantageously divided into two or more parts. Will sell on terms that will enable a wide-awake farmer to pay for the same out of the products in a short time. THE SUN.

NEW YORK, 1882.

THE SUN for 1882 will make its fifteenth annual revolution under the present management, shining, as always, for all, big and little, mean and gracious, contented and unhappy, Republican and Democratic, depraved and virtuous, intelligent and obtuse. The Sun's light is for mankind and womankind of every sort; but its genial warmth is for the good, while it pours hot discomfort on the blistering backs of the persistently wicked.

The Sun of 1868 was a newspaper of a new kind. It discarded many of the forms, and a multitude of the superfluous words and phrases of ancient journalism. It undertook to report in a fresh, succinct, unconventional way all the news of the world, omitting no event of human interest, and commenting upon affairs with the fearlessness of absolute independence. The success of this experiment was the success of The Sun. It effected a permanent change in the style of American newspapers. Every important journal established in this country in the dozen years past has been modelled after The Sun. Every important journal already existing has been modified and bettered by the force of the Sun's example.

The Sun of 1882 will be the same outspoken, truthtelling, and interesting newspaper.

By a liberal use of the means which an abundant prosperity affords, we shall make it better than ever before.

We shall print all the news, putting it in readable shape, and measuring its importance, not by the traditional yardstick, but by its real interest to the people. Distance from Printing House Square is not the first consideration with The Sun. Whenever anything happens worth reporting we get the particulars whether it happens in Brooklyn or in Bokhara.

In politics we have decided opinions; and are accustomed to express them in language that can be understood. We say what we think about men and events. That habit is the only secret of success of The Sun's political course.

The Weekly Sun gathers into eight pages the best matter of the seven daily issues. An Agricultural Department of unequalled merit, full market reports and a liberal proportion of literary scientific and domestic intelligence complete The Weekly Sun, and make it the best newspaper for the farmer's household that was ever printed.

Who does not know and read and like The Sunday Sun, each number of which is a Golconda of interesting literature, with the best poetry of the day, prose every line worth reading, news, humor —matter enough to fill a good sized book, and infinitely more varied and entertaining than any book, big or little?

If our idea of what a newspaper should be pleases you, send for The Sun.

Our terms are as follows:

For the daily Sun, a four page sheet of twenty-eight columns, the price by mail, post paid, is 55 cents a month, or $6 50 a year; or, including the Sunday paper, an eight page sheet of fifty-six columns, the price is 65 cents per month, or $7 70 a year, postage paid.

The Sunday edition of The Sun is also furnished separately at $1 50 a year, postage paid

The price of the Weekly Sun, eight pages, fifty-six columns, is $1 a year, postage paid. For clubs of ten sending $10 we will send an extra copy free,

A saint come to every home
And with [illegible] cheery,
I banish [illegible] burdens bear,
Of women, worn and weary.

I run so light, and look so bright,
The ladies dote upon me,
No noise I make, no threads I break,
Though back and forth you run me.

Through every kind of goods I go,
Silk, muslin, cloth and leather;
Though all machines refuse to sew
Yet I sew on forever.

No heads I pain, no eyes I strain,
To find the way to thread me,
No holes have I, save needles eye
To make a cause to dread me,

I'm cheap and good and if you should
But for a moment doubt me,
Be sure and try, and then you'll buy
And never be without me.

Friday evening of this week Rev. A. A. Willets will deliver his lecture under the auspices of the popular lecture course in Nichols Hall, subject: "Off Soundings; or the sublimity and utility of the sea." The final lecture in the course will be delivered Monday, Feb. 20, by Hon. William H. Parsons, subject: "The Mediterranean sea and its memories."

Mr. K. F. Salmon is manufacturing a stocking protector at his slipper factory, located over Nichols' jewelry store, which is finding itself on the road to popularity. It consists of a piece of sheepskin or kid shaped to the heel and prevents the stocking from coming in contact with the boot or shoe. Orders are coming in from neighboring cities and many are being sold in Fulton. Give him a call.

Among the number vaccinated at the Oswego Falls factories last week was a newly arrived Englishman, who, upon returning to his room, began vigorously wiping the blood from where the doctor had just made the checker board on his arm; when a fellow workman, who saw a chance for a little joke, said to him, "Hit what is thee doing?" "O I'm wiping off this blood," said the new arrival. "Hi, but thee must not do that man, run back and tell the doctor, and get it done afresh." With a look of terror on his face the man ran back to the doctor's operating room, but at the door he encountered a "boss" who inquired as to his business. "I want," said the new arrival, "to be cut again my arm is mortifying." "Mortify h—l," said the boss, "go back to your work you big fool and mortify there." The poor fellow is still mortifying.

A third claimant, Mrs. Edward Dexter, says she possesses the only good title to the lake and wants the pay for the ice harvested. Still another deed has turned up. Mr. Dorastus Kellogg, who was at one time proprietor of the Oswego Falls factories, says he bought lot No. 8 at the time he purchased the peat bed and has held the title ever since. He has sold his claim to Mr. Charles Dexter of Oswego Falls, the transfer taking place last Friday.

An Old Invitation.

The following is a copy of a printed invitation found among the papers of the late judge Tyler:

DONATION PARTY.

You are respectfully solicited to attend a donation party for the benefit of the Rev. A. C. Treadway, at the residence of Mrs. H. I. Spencer, in Fulton, on Friday the 10th inst. at 6 o'clock p. m.

Joking College Boys.

The freshmen of Cornell university, Ithaca, were to have their annual banquet Friday evening and the sophmores conceived the idea of removing the officers so as to render the affair tame or practically a failure. Two of the freshmen were abducted from their rooms Thursday night and put in charge of two sophmores, Harry DeForest of Fulton and F. P. Ingalls of Salem, Mass. They took their prisoners in a hack to Cortland and thence via rail to Syracuse where they were intercepted by word from the college authorities and all returned to Ithaca, the freshmen returning in time to participate in the festivities. It was a retaliatory act on the part of the sophmores, who suffered a like indignity on the occasion of their annual banquet a week previous. The freshmen are joyous over the inability of the sophmores to keep their classmates from the banquet. The whole affair is regarded as a necessary concomitant of college life and nothing of a serious nature is likely to result to the participants.

Fred Sweet, of Rochester, who was reported last week as missing, has turned up all right. His parents who reside in this village have received a letter from him. He was married unknown to his friends in that city, and took up his residence in new quarters.

Marvin E. Hulburt, of this village has been sued for breach of promise by Miss Caroline Abele, of Syracuse, laying damages at $3,000. Hulburt recently married Miss Carrie Platt, hence the action. He regards the suit as an attempt to get a few dollars and does not attach much importance to it. It is understood that Mr. Hulburt has retained Lawyer Nottingham, of Syracuse to see to his end of the controversy.

Messrs. Geo. M. Case and Willard Johnson, railroad commissioners of the town of Volney, filed their reports in the county clerk's office yesterday, which certified that they have taken up and cancelled $1,000 worth of existing bonds of this town issued in aid of the N. Y. & O. Midland railroad by the substitution of new bonds issued under the statutory provisions and payable as follows: No. 10, payable May 1. 1884; No. 11, payable Feb. 1, 1884.

J. C. Wells & Son, of Granby, are engaged in harvesting ice on a grand scale. They have three houses; one at Minetto, with a capacity of 4,000 tons which is nearly filled; another one at Orchard look filled, containing 1800 tons and one at Seneca Hill, with a capacity of 4,000 tons with 3,000 tons already in. If the weather is favorable they hope to have their houses completed in two or three days more.

The trustees of the Presbyterian society met in the session room adjoining the burned church Monday evening, and took the first steps looking towards the erection of a new church. The following committee upon location was selected: J. G. Benedict, J. G. Reynolds, J. C. Gillispie, L. C. Seymour, and C. R. Nichols. The finance committee consists of G. M. Case, D. W. Gardner, H. E. Nichols, Almon Bristol and Arvin Rice.

The above committees will make a report at a meeting to be held next Monday evening.

The Young People's Literary Association of the M. E. church met on Monday evening at the residence of Mr. Frank Dilts, Cayuga street. The literary program opened with a duet, "Happy Moments," by Miss Minnie Moore and Mr. L. K. Hewitt. Prof. Eggleston then gave a very interesting and instructive lecture on his visit to the Holy Land. Numerous relics from various places of interest were exhibited, and all agreed that they were indebted to the Prof. for an hour profitably spent. Miss Cora Foster then sang, "Now I lay me down to sleep." The gentlemen quartette club gave us "Crown the Song King." The exercises then closed with a duet by Messrs. Cooper and Phillips entitled, "The Army and Navy."

The Oswego Express says it has the original of the following letter, copies of which are being sent throughout the town of Scriba:

Fulton, N. Y., Jan. 15th, 1882.

———, Esq., Scriba, N. Y.

Dear Sir: I wish you would be for Schuyler Rhodes for Supervisor of your town this spring. By using your influence in that direction, I shall feel obliged.

Very truly yours,

O. J. Jennings.

Since Mr. Jennings has been canal superintendent and had his hand in Oswego county politics he has proved himself in several instances to possess positive shrewdness. The salient feature of shrewdness in this move in trying to provide Mr. Rhodes with an office is that he is a candidate for canal superintendent.

The teachers of the first commisioner's district met at the church in Minetto on Saturday, Feb. 4th. Com. D. R. Parkhurst presided. In spite of the severe cold and the somewhat rough roads, about ~~seventy-five~~ teachers were present. Several Fulton people participated among which were Misses Loma Stay and Hattie Royce. Miss Stay read an essay "Methods of Teaching" which was well received and written.

An essay by Miss Hattie Royce was received with prolonged attention which her efforts always command. Miss Royce is a pleasing reader and her subjects are always handled in a manner that shows deep and careful thought. The essay on this occasion was no exception to the general rule and abounded in rich thought and glowing illustrations.

A Verdict [illegible] Court.

More than a year ago Lydia A. Sykes [illegible] judgment against the [illegible] Co., for $500 damages for the killing of her husband at Fulton, [illegible] 5, 1879. The judgment [illegible] with the costs footed up about $540. The company appealed to the general term, which court affirmed the judgment of the circuit with costs. The company then carried the case to the court of appeals, and to-day Mr. J. A. Hathway, the plaintiff's attorney, received a special saying that the court of appeals affirmed the judgment of the court below with costs. [Palladium.

More Railroad News.

The following telegrams from Mr. A. A. Howlett, of Syracuse, who is interested in the Boston, Hoosac Tunnel & Western railroad to gentlemen in Oswego explain themselves:

Syracuse, N. Y., Feb. 6, 1882.

Leonard Ames: The Boston, Hoosac and Western road intend completing a line to Oswego this year. See that they have equal harbor privileges granted that other roads have. A. A. Howlett.

Another is to Major S. F. VonForstner engineer of the Syracuse, Phoenix & Oswego road, and reads:

Have written to you and Mr. M. B. Richardson, the Boston, Hoosac Tunnel & Western railroad intend completing their line to Oswego this year. Have their rights to harbor privileges protected. A. A. Howlett.

Major VonForstner told a reporter of the Oswego Times that the chief engineer of the Boston, Hoosac Tunnel & Western road was on his way from England and would be in this country in about a week. On his arrival work will at once be begun and pushed steadily forward until the entire line projected is completed. It is thought the road will run from Fulton to Oswego on the west side of the river.

The Ice Crop.

Oswego city ice dealers are still engaged in harvesting.

Brosmer, the brewer, is harvesting a large amount of ice at Minetto.

The Sandy Creek News says the ice at that point is of good quality with but little snow in it.

Our citizens have commenced filling their ice houses. The ice is very clear and of good thickness. [Parish Mirror.

Alderman Thornton of Auburn, is cutting 9½ inch ice on lake Ontario, and has secured some 3,000 tons. [Auburnian.

Miller & Waugh have a house containing about 1,700 tons of very fine ice located on the canal bank below the village.

The several ice houses in this village were this week filled with a splendid quality of ice about eight inches thick. [Hannibal News.

Mr. Wells of Bundyville, near Seneca Hill is filling his new ice house, which is 96x140 feet and capable of holding 3,000 cords. [Oswego Palladium.

The ice at Potsdam is thirteen inches in thickness. The D. L. & W. railroad company are getting out a large quantity. [Oswego Times.

The farmers around New Haven are filling their ice houses with a very fine quality of ice. It is about fourteen inches thick. [Oswego Express.

Capt. H. B. Smith is building an ice house on his lot, junction Fulton and Volney streets. Most of the ice men of the place have secured a supply of very good ice. [Phoenix Register.

On lake Neahtawanta the crop harvested is unusually large. E. V. Lathrop & Co., have 1,500 tons; Somers & Wilcox 1,200 tons; Ed. Breads 3,000 tons; Crahan, Cavanaugh & Co., 1,800 tons.

Be sure and attend the lecture Friday evening.

J. S. Riggs will deliver his sermon next Sunday evening, in Nichols hall, subject; "Young men in Literature."

Schenck & Foster have just received thirty-five car loads of Stove and Chestnut Coal, of more than ordinary good quality.

Messrs. Buell & Thorton, manufacturers of Buell's steam heaters have taken into the firm as a partner Mr. A. F. Buell.

The Oswego Times is of the opinion that Hon. D. G. Fort is occupying an editorial chair in the office of the Oswego Express.

Mr. A. S. Morse, of Syracuse, has rented the store east of The Times office and will take possession April 1st. Ice cream and confectionery.

The reading circle of lower Oswego Falls was held at the residence of Mrs. J. W. Swan, last evening and a very enjoyable time was experienced.

William E. Fuller has removed his wagon shop from Palmer's blacksmith shop to the building recently occupied by Mr. L. S. Worden on First street, opposite the Universalist church.

The Lyceum meeting announced for next Friday evening, is postponed on account of Mr. Willits' lecture, and the question for debate will be taken up on the Friday following. Subject; "Resolved that the license laws of this State are a great evil to the temperance cause." This will be introduced by Mr. D. M. Perine.

A report is going the rounds of the papers that the piano and organ factory of Daniel F. Beatty, at Washington, D.C. has been consumed by fire. Mr. J. F. Herrick, of this village was questioned in regard to the statement and pronounces it false. Mr. Herrick is using 90,000 feet of lumber per month in manufacturing packing boxes for this firm and he has word from Mr. Beatty to pay no attention to the rumor.

Mr. Jay J. Wright has purchased the hardware stock of M. B. Schenck & Co., and will carry on the business at the old stand on Oneida street. Mr. Wright is a young man of excellent business qualities and brings to his assistance a thorough knowledge of the hardware trade, he having been in the employ of M. B. Schenck & Co. for a number of years. The stock will be at once replenished and matters put in shape for the coming spring trade.

About eleven o'clock Monday night the Loomis cheese factory at Ingells Crossing was consumed by fire. Mr. W. W. Loomis occupied an addition to the factory as a residence and by great exertion managed to save the greater part of his household goods. The fire is said to have been of incendiary origin as it started in a remote part of the building which is only used when the factory is in operation. The loss is estimated at about $4,500 with an insurance of $1,100 on building, $500 on factory apparatus and $300 on household furniture.

The Oswego Palladium says it understands that Gen. Burt has paid over a check of $7,000,000 to the construction company engaged in building the extension of the Hoosac Tunnel road through this state.

S. M. Moulson, aged 74 years, a pattern maker at the Ontario and Western railroad shops, at Middletown, N. Y., was struck by an Erie freight, while crossing the track, Friday night. He died in two hours. He formerly resided in Oswego.

Mr. F. W. Titus, of Syracuse, a young man who has had many years experience in the mercantile business, is now traveling for Ostrander & Loomis of Syracuse, taking the route of Mr. Tom Fellows. Mr. Titus is meeting with splendid success, and his employers are lucky to secure his services.

[Watertown Times.

Rev. M. D. Kinney, of Oswego, has issued a notice that the new Methodist church in Oswego will be dedicated today. Chancellor Sims of Syracuse University, will deliver the sermon. The new church has cost about $15,000 and will seat 1,200 persons. The main building is 84 by 55 feet, with a chapel attached 41 by 52 feet. It is a substantial brick structure and is frescoed and finished in a most substantial manner. Much of the material of the old church was used.

While the last grand jury was in session in Oswego they made an examination of the county jail there and reported it unsafe and unfit for use as a jail. In consequence of this, county judge Nutting yesterday made and caused to be entered and notified to the sheriff and board of supervisors an order directing that the county jail in Oswego city be discontinued as a county jail till further order of the court, except during sessions of court in that city. He designates the jail at Pulaski as the common jail of the county except so far as the Onondaga penitentiary is a county jail of this county by contract. Prisoners now confined there will be removed to Pulaski.

The Syracuse Standard has been interviewing some of the drug store merchants of that city regarding the consumption of opium there and produces some startling revelations. From the information elicited it appears there are about one thousand persons who procure their supply of the drug in that city. There are thirty-three drug stores in the city, and they each sell from ten to thirty pounds of opium each year. One dealer informed the reporter that last year he sold over 150 pounds, a sufficient quantity to kill 15,000 persons not accustomed to its use. Another dealer's sale of opium and morphine last year was sufficient to cause the death of 12,000. He has sold as high as three ounces of morphine in one day in small quantities.

Saturday afternoon John Plunkett, 17 years old, who lives in Oswego and was at work for contractor O'Connor, filling in trestle 18, one mile north of Rose on the Lake Shore Road, was instantly killed by a mass of earth falling on him. Plunkett was engaged in loading a wagon and a man was sent up the bank to loosen the earth. An overhanging piece, weighing half a ton, fell a distance of thirteen feet striking Plunkett. The accident was seen immediately and the earth lifted, but the man was stone dead. The body was found in a sitting posture with the head on a level with the knees. The remains were taken to Oswego on the night train and taken to Cullinan's undertaking rooms where an inquest was held. An examination of the body showed that the neck was dislocated, and the head was nearly torn from the trunk; the jaw was broken and their were several frightful cuts. Death was instantaneous.

Parish—There has been quite a change of railway agents in this vicinity. Agent Wells of this place has been transferred to Keene, St. Lawrence Co. at the great iron ore bed station. He is an efficient agent. Agent Dodge of Mallory has been transferred to this place and a Mr. Brown of Pulaski goes to Mallory. Agent Wood of Hastings is transferred to Carlton on the Lake Shore road. A Mr. Bumpus of Pulaski takes his place.

There is quite a large amount of wood, ties, lumber and stave bolts being got out of the forests this winter. We have but little sleighing. Occasional.

Macauley's "Life of Frederick the Great."

This is a remarkable book, for several reasons. It is the story of one of the greatest heroes and statesmen of the world. It is written by an author almost unrivaled in literary power and brilliancy. It is sold at a price that will certainly amaze any one,—only 20 cents, or if to be sent by mail 25 cents. It is the first book published by the Useful Knowledge Publishing Company, which attempts by its Literary "Rebellion" to take the place of the American Book Exchange, and the "Literary Revolution." It claims to be an example showing the quality and price of numerous standard works which they propose to issue with great rapidity. It is certainly a very beautiful and well made book, as the copy on our table will testify. "Rip Van Winkle, and other Sketches," by Washington Irving, is promised to follow this immediately, uniform in style and price. Other announcements, with specimen pages of these and other works including the Cyclopedias of Science, History, Biography, Poetry, Fiction, &c., in process of publication will be sent on application to the publishers the Useful Knowledge Publishing Company, 162 William street, New York City.

Fashion Notes.

Undressed kid gloves are most used with mourning costumes.

Shirt draperies are arranged high both on the hips and in the back.

Only very fair complexions look well without white around the neck.

Diamond collar buttons are preferred to brooches for ladie's linen collars.

Black fox, lynx, and dark sealskin are among the appropriate furs for mourning.

One of the newest designs in stockings shows shell patterns alternating with richly tinted stripes.

For mourning, pleated frills of crepe lisse, either in black or white, or both combined, are used instead of crape.

A new lace seen on imported dresses has the flowers of white lace applied to black tulle in a most effective way.

Detachable trains fastening below the short bouffant black draperies come with some of the handsome late importations.

Silver gauze, dotted with silver beads, make a lovely evening turban for a lady no longer young but who has preserved her complexion.

The favorite material most generally adopted for first mourning dresses is Henrietta cloth, the best qualities of which are mixed wool and silk.

The dull silks used on dressy occasions for ladies in mourning, are shown in the broad flattened reps that are well defined and are soft and clinging.

Velvet muffs are trimmed with ruffles of lace and applique adornings, and some are still further enhanced by bows and trailing ends of looped ribbon.

Widows' caps for young ladies are white crape or organdy in fanchon shape. For older ladies there are the mob-crown caps edged with puffs of crimped crape.

Very young ladies wear pleated tulle doubled, in preference to any other material for dressy occasions, and straight linen collars buttoned high, with morning dresses

The milliners aver that the new shade of "frightened mouse" is to be followed up one called "young-woman-afraid-of-the-mouse" which will will be a decided shade of "yeller"

Small bonnets are chosen for those who wear crape veils, and are made of double crape laid over silk. For young ladies the brim is edged with dull jet beads, either round or oblong.

Dull black camel's-hair is especially liked for mourning wraps, whether in short mantles or long cloaks, and can be made very comfortable by lining with soft quilted silk, or else squirrel fur.

For wearing under jackets and mantles not sufficiently warm, there is nothing like the undyed Shetland jacket, very thin and warm, and not capable of creasing any dress over which it is worn.

Antique scarfs or ties are in vogue, which are fastened up close in the throat above the collar upon outside wraps. They are made of surah of Tuscan shade, either white or yellow, as taste directs. These cravats are tied in the same manner as the Stienskirt, which was worn by noblemen and gentlemen in the reign of Charles II and James II.

THE PEPETUITY OF FAME.

As the name of the immortal Washington has been most sacredly perpetuated as that of a hero and statesman, so also has the fame of Swayne's Ointment for skin diseases descended into perpetuity as the only reliable remedy in the market for every character of skin disorders, and as the reward of well deserving merit. Worth and merit go hand in hand. It is useless to condradict the worth of this article.

The Minister's Wife.

The minister's wife ought to be selected by a committee of the church. She should be warranted never to have headache or neuralgia; she should have nerves of wire and sinews of iron; she should never be tired, nor sleepy, and should be everybody's drudge; she should be cheerful, intellectual, pious and domesticated; she should be able to keep her husband's house, darn his stockings, make his shirts, cook his dinner, light his fire and copy his sermons; she she should keep up the style of a lady on the wages of a day laborer, and be always at leisure for "good works," and ready to receive morning calls; she should be secretary of the Band of Hope, the Dorcas Society and the Home Mission; she should conduct Bible classes and mothers' meetings; should make clothing for the poor and gruel for the sick; and finally, she should be pleased with everybody and everything, and never desire any reward beyond the satisfaction of having done her own duty and other people's too.

Dr. Pierce's "Favorite Prescription," for all those weaknesses peculiar to women, is an unequalled remedy. Distressing backache and "bearing-down" sensations yield to its strength-giving properties. By druggists.

PILES! PILES!! PILES!!!

[illegible]

... The custom is ... with severe judgments, but nothing seems able to deter its votaries from continuing its practice. We once took summer boarding with a man who used to eat in the night and roused up all his household to share his unnatural meal. One night he stirred us all up at 4:20 o'clock to eat. We rose and ate. That very day his best cow immolated herself on a wire fence, one of the horses was bitten by a rattlesnake, a reaping machine ate up one of his best farm hands, a distant relative sent his youngest boy a drum, his wife took to writing poetry, and one of his most popular, talented and handsome boarders flitted, leaving an unpaid summer's board bill to remember him by. The latter circumstance is indelibly impressed upon our memory. We often think of it in connection with the somewhat striking coincidence that we never have been in that country since.

Brotherly Love.

Mr. Dickson, a colored barber in one of the largest towns of Massachusetts, was one morning shaving one of his customers, a respectable citizen, when a conversation occurred between them respecting Mr. Dickson's former connection with a colored church in that place.

"I believe you are connected with the church in Elm Street, Mr. Dickson?" said the customer.

"No, sah; not at all."

"Why, are you not a member of the African church?"

"Not dis year sah."

"Why did you leave their communion, Mr. Dickson, if I may be permitted to ask?"

"Why, I tell you, sah," said Mr. Dickson, scraping a concave razor on the palm of his hand, "it was jess like dis. I jined de church in good fait. I gib ten dollars toward de stated preachin' ob de gospel de fust year, and de people all called me Brudder Dickson. De second year my business not good, and I gib only five dollars. Dat year de church people call me Mr. Dickson. Dis razor hurt you, sah?"

"No, sir, goes tolerably well."

"Well, sah, de third I feel berry poor—sickness in my family—an' I gib noflin for preachin'. Well, sah, arter dat dey call me old nigger Dickson, an' I lef' 'em!"

So saying, Mr. Dickson brushed his customer's hair, and the gentleman departed well satisfied with the reason why Mr. Dickson left his church.

THE AGE OF MIRACLES

is past, and Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery" will not raise the dead, will not cure you if your lungs are almost gone with consumption. It is, however, unsurpassed both as a pectoral and alterative, and will cure obstinate and severe diseases of the throat and lungs, coughs, and bronchial affections. By virtue of its wonderful alterative properties it cleanses and enriches the blood, cures pimples, blotches, and eruptions, and causes even great eating ulcers to heal.

How to Properly care for Horses.

Thousands of people are entrusted with livery and private horses every year who know as little about their care as the man in the moon. If a hostler at a country inn suggests that they need eight or ten quarts of oats each, they say "Yes give them all they want." The hostler feeds four quarts or less and credits himself with the remainder. At a recent meeting of the farmers an expert gave them the following information that will be found valuable by all who own or drive their own horses: "The horse has the smallest stomach in proportion to his size of any animal. Fifteen or sixteen quarts is its utmost capacity. This space is completely filled by four quarts of oats and the saliva that goes into the stomach with them. Horses are generally overfed and not fed often enough. For a horse with moderate work six or eight quarts of bruised oats and ten pounds of fine hay a day is sufficient. This should be fed in at least three meals, and it is better if fed in four.

A horse's digestionis very rapid, and therefore he gets hungry sooner than a man. When he is hungry he is effective and wears out rapidly. Water fills the stomach, lowers the temperature and dilutes the gastric juice, therefore a horse should not drink immediately before eating. Neither should he be watered immediately after eating, because he will drink too much and force some of the contents of the stomach into the large intestines, which will cause scouring.

Scouring is also caused by too rapid eating, which can be prevented by putting half a dozen pebbles half the size of the fist into the manger with the oats. Give only a moderate drink of water to a horse. A large drink of water before being driven will have a very quieting effect on a nervous horse. A race horse always runs on an empty stomach. Digestion progresses moderately during exercise if the exercise is not so violent as to exhaust the powers of the horse."

PROOF EVERYWHERE.

If an invalid or a sick person has the least doubt of the power and efficacy of Hop Bitters to cure them, they can find cases exactly like their own, in their own neighborhood, with positive proof that they can be easily and permanently cured at a trifling cost—or ask your druggist or physician.

Thousands of equally strong endorsements—many of them in cases where hope was abandoned—have been voluntarily given, showing the remarkable power of Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure, in all diseases of the kidneys, liver or urinary organs. Railroad Sociability.

"Speaking about the sociability of railroad travelers," said the man with the crutches and a watch pocket over his eye, "I never got so well acquainted with the passengers on a train, as I did the other day on the Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad. We were going at the rate of about thirty miles an hour, and an other train from the other direction telescoped us. We were all thrown into each others society, and brought into immediate social contact, so to speak.

"I went over and sat in the lap of a corpulent lady from Manitoba, and a girl from Chicago jumped over nine seats and sat cown on the plug hat of a preacher from La Crosse, with so much timid, girlish enthusiasm, that it shoved his hat clear down over his shoulders.

"Everybody seemed to lay aside the usual cool reserve of strangers, and we made ourselves entirely at home,

"A shy young man with an emaciated oil-cloth valise, left his seat, and went over and sat down in a lunch basket where a bridal couple seemed to be wrestling with their first picnic. Do you suppose that reticent young man would have done such a thing on ordinary occasions? Do you think if he had been at a celebration at home that he would have risen impetuously, and gone where those people were eating by themselves, and sat down in the cranberry jelly of a total stranger?

"I should rather think not.

"Why, one old man who probably at home led the class meeting, and who was as dignified as Roscoe Conkling's father, was eating a piece of custard pie, when we met the other train, and he left his own seat and went over to the front end of the car and shot that piece of custard pie into the ear of a beautiful widow from Iowa.

"People traveling somehow forget the austerity of their home lives, and form acquaintances that sometimes last through life." [Laramie Boomerang.

The statement may be paradoxical, but there are persons who can't sing and yet they do.

About fifty persons were injured at Quincy, Ill., recently, by a panic in a church.—Exchange. Somebody found an oyster in his soup at the church festival probably.

Said the speaker to the rural member: "The gentleman is out of order." "Out of order, am I?" indighantly replied the member, "old hoss, if you'll just come out back back of the building, I'll convince you I'm in as good order as any man in the state! Come on, old man!" [Boston Post.

The Marquis of Lorne claims that his ancestors sat around King Arthur's round table. Noboby in this country will think any the less of Lorne because his folks having no table of their own, and having to get their meals at somebody else's table, provided they did not leave between daylight and dark without paying their board.

A man in Connecticut went fox hunting the other day, and when a little animal near a fence which stopped and barked at him, he said, whose little red dog is that?" The little red dog trotted away out of reach of his gun, and those of the other hunters who were chagrinned enough at the stupidity of a fox hunter who didn't know a fox when he saw one. How beautiful is the exhibition of humanity in the young. A little boy found a poor half-frozen wasp in the garret and placed it upon a chair before the parlor fire to thaw out. Surely the angels must have looked down approvingly on such an act of kindness. When sister Mary's beau called that evening he glanced at the chair, and seating himself in it murmured: "Ah, bless her heart, how thoughtful she is of my comfort!" Two minutes later there was as much noise and racket in that parlor as if it had been turned into a den of demons. The wasp had thawed out; that is why Mary isn't married yet.

RESCUED FROM DEATH

William J. Coughlin of Somerville, Mass, says: In the fall of 1876 I was taken with bleeding of the lungs followed by a severe cough. I lost my appetite and flesh and was confiled to my bed. In 1877 I was admitted to the hospital. The doctors said I had a hole in my lung as big as a half dollar. At one time a report went around that I was dead. I gave up hope, but a friend told me of DR WILLIAM HALL'S BALSAM FOR THE LUNGS. I got a bottle, when to my surprise I began to feel better, and to-day I feel better than for three years past.

"I write this hoping every one afflicted with diseased Lungs will take DR WILLIAM HALL'S BALSAM, and be convinced that CONSUMPTION CAN BE CURED. I can positively say it has done more good than all the other medicines I have taken since my sickness.

THE INDEPENDENT.

"The foremost religious newspaper of the United States."—The Rev Joseph Cook.

Established in 1848, as an advocate of anti-slavery and of reforms in religion and politics, the Independent once became a recognized power througout the country. Its influence has ever since been constantly growing. As it has fought against slavery and for cheap postage, so it will fight against Mormonism, for Civil Service Reform, and for purity in politics, and general uprightness in all things. It employs the best editorial talent and speaks fearlessly on all subjects. It pays for contributed articles and for editorial services more than double the amount paid by any other weekly newspaper.

It publishes more religious discussions than the religious reviews, and more poetry and stories than the popular monthlies, and gives more information than an annual cyclopedia. The long cable dispatches recently published from the great Methodist Council in London are a good illustration of what the Independent is constantly doing. A list of the most prominent religious and philosophical writers, poets and story writers in the country is the list of the contributors of the Independent. Besides the space set aside for these writers and for editorials, there are twenty-two distinct departments, edited by twenty-two specialists, which include Biblical Research, Sanitary, Legal, Fine Arts, Music, Science Pebbles, Personalities, Hymn Notes, School and College, Literature, Religious Intelligence, Missions, Sunday School, News of the Week, Finance, Insurance, Stories, puzzles, and Agriculture. 32 pages in all.

My Neighbor's Baby.

Across in my neighbor's window,
With the drapings of satin and lace,
I see 'neath the flowing ringlets
A baby's innocent face.
His feet, in crimson slippers,
Are tapping the polished glass,
And the crowd in the street look upward,
And nod and smile as they pass.

Just here in my cottage window,
Catching flies in the sun,
With a patched and faded apron,
Stands my own little one.
His face is as pure and as handsome
As the baby's over the way,
And he keeps my heart from breaking
At my toiling every day.

Sometimes when the day is ended,
And I sit in the dusk to rest,
With the face of my darling
Hugged close to my lonely breast,
I pray that my neighbor's baby
May not catch Heaven's roses all,
But that some may crown the forehead
Of my loved one's as they fall.

And when I draw the stockings
From the little weary feet,
And kiss the rosy dimples
In his limbs, so round and sweet—
I think of the dainty garments
Some little children wear,
And that my God withholds them
From mine, so pure and fair.

May God forgive my envy—
I know not what I said;
My heart is crushed and troubled—
My neighbor's boy is dead!
I saw the little coffin
As they carried it out to-day
A mother's heart is breaking
In the mansion over the way.

The light is fair in the window;
The flowers bloom at my door;
My boy is chasing the sunbeams
That dance on the cottage floor.
The roses of health are blooming
On my darling's cheek to day:
But the baby is gone from the window
Of the mansion over the way.

TRUE THROUGH YEARS.

"Sister Elsie, will you be so very good as to let me wear your topaz and diamond cross, to-morrow evening? All Linden Hill will be at the reception, to meet Lionel Chetwynd, and I want to look my best of course. Who knows but that I may be the fortunate one to win him?" said the young beauty, laughingly, as she rifled her sister's jewel casket.

"Who knows, indeed?" said Elsie Clare, pausing over her sewing, to look at the young sister, to whom she had been as a mother for the past fifteen years.

When Lionel Chetwynd had left Linden Hill, poor, young and hopeful, to "seek his fortune," Edith Clare had just been placed, by her dying mother, an infant, in her sister's arms.

Now she was a belle of sixteen, with the fairest and freshest of faces, and a sunny, joyous expression, that accorded well with her deep blue eyes and curling, golden hair.

"What am I beside her?" thought Elsie, half sadly, half bitterly, as she glanced at the reflection of her own thoughtful face in the mirror—"beside that radiantly-fresh loveliness, and that youthful, slender grace? How can I blame Lionel if he leaves me for her? It is foolish, no doubt, for me to remember and rely upon what he said in those days, and if I was wise I should not go to this party, only, perhaps, to receive an indifferent welcome from him. Yet am I not bound to think him true until I find him false? And am I to be jealous of Edith? Never! If he should learn to love her, I will be the first to wish him success. And no one shall ever dream how I have thought of him, and prayed for him, and hoped for his return, during these weary fifteen years."

While she mused, Edith was figuring away before the glass. Now she exclaimed caressingly:

"You are making up your mind to let me wear it, are you not? You never use it yourself, you know."

"I never have worn it, Edith, since you was a baby. It was given to me then. It was a keepsake from a dear friend. I—I think I would like to wear it myself, my dear, to-morrow night."

"To the reception? Are you really going there, Elsie?" said Edith, in a tone of genuine surprise.

"Do you think me too old for such gaieties?" asked Elsie smiling.

But there was wounded feeling in her tone, and Edith was not slow to detect it.

"Not too old, by any means. Too wise we will say, Elsie. But I am glad you are to be there to see the strife of the candidates for the notice of the wealthy Lionel Chetwynd."

"Let me beg that you will not join in it, Edith," said her sister, seriously. "There is nothing so indelicate, so unwomanly."

"I know; but unfortunately, it is a literal fact," said Edith, waltzing out of the room.

* * * * *

On the next evening the magnificent [illegible] rooms of Mrs. [illegible]

its proper value, for he looked somewhat tired and bored as the affair progressed, and only brightened up into animation when the Misses Clare entered the room.

Jealous eyes were watching his every look and movement.

"That chit of a school-girl!" thought one and another, detecting the cause of the sudden change in Mr. Chetwynd's manner. "Pretty? well—yes, she certainly is pretty in a sort of way, but quite unformed. And if Mr. Chetwynd is sent to Congress, as he undoubtedly will be, what kind of a figure will that bread-and-butter miss cut in Washington society, pray?"

Meanwhile, Mr. Chetwynd made the best of his way toward the end of the room where the "bread-and-butter miss" was standing.

Edith Clare was already known as the prettiest girl of Linden Hill, and naturally had a small court around her as soon as she entered, not one of whom felt disposed to make way for the millionaire.

Nothing daunted, he kept on till he reached Miss Clare herself. She was standing behind the circle of her young sister's admirers, entirely unnoticed and overlooked. She was tastefully dressed in black silk, with a quantity of expensive lace, and on her bosom burned the topaz and diamond cross.

"You have not forgotten then, Elsie? You have been true to me through years as I have been to you?" said Lionel Chetwynd, as he bent above her outstretched hands. "This makes amends, my darling, for all."

It was soon over, that momentous meeting.

In the dense crowd, no one had noticed it. The next moment the group around Edith Clare had parted, and Mr. Chetwynd stood conversing with her for some time—looking admiringly, and even fondly, so said the gossips, upon her lovely, blushing face.

That evening Mr. Chetwynd escorted the sisters home. The next day, and the day after, his saddle horse was seen standing at their gate. So that, when the beautiful estate of Bayview was purchased by him, and elegantly fitted in every way for occupancy, public opinion took but one direction, and Edith was alternately teased and tormented by her youthful friends.

"He is a great deal too old for you," they would say. "But then he is so rich that no wonder you were tempted."

"Is it now?" Edith would say, laughing with her sparkling blue eyes and her dimples all at once.

But beyond that she would make no admissions, and contented herself with bidding all her acquaintances to the house warming at Bayview in one week's time.

"Then and there you will be introduced to Mr. Chetwynd's bride," she would say oracularly, and would say no more.

The week soon passed away, the eventful evening arrived. Carriage after carriage drove up the long avenue and halted before the grand old mansion, whose windows blazed with light.

The rooms were all thrown open save one. A small boudoir, at the end of the long drawing rooms, was reserved, and every eye was upon its closed, folding doors, and as the clock struck nine, the band struck up the well known wedding march.

The doors flew open. Between the bowing servants a white robed and veiled procession advanced into the first drawing room.

Edith Clare was conspicuous among those lovely girls—the queen rose of the rose garden, in her white shimmering robes and her flowing veil.

Not on her blonde curls, however, did the mystic orange blossoms rest, but on the smooth, dark braids of her elder sister, who came to meet her guests, leaning on the arm of her husband.

The diamond and topaz cross was on her breast. On her small, white hand shone the plain gold ring, with a diamond and topaz "keeper." Her cheeks were flushed, her large, dark eyes were liquid and sparkling, and the amazed inhabitants of Linden Hill made the late discovery that Elsie Clare was quite as pretty as her sister, "only in a different style."

"But who would have dreamed of his choosing her in preference to Edith, or any other of these pretty girls?" said the gossips, behind their fans. "My dear, she must be thirty years old, if she is a day."

To that sin, if it be one, Elsie Chetwynd pleads guilty. But in the eyes of her husband she is still as fair, as fresh, as lovable as when they parted secretly, with tears and kisses, half sadly, half hopefully pledging the troth to which, in spite of all that fate could do to separate them, they were both so true through years.

We have known boys to cry an hour when told to take an old fashioned pill because it was too large. That same boy would take in a lemon ball one inch in diameter, and think nothing of it. Oysters.

The early life of an oyster is now well known. It hatches and grows from an egg that is so small that it can scarcely be seen. After hatching, the young oyster swims about for a time in the water like a butterfly flitting over the fields, after which it may be said to go [illegible]

How Boys Pan Out.

BY GEO. W. PECK.

There is all the difference in the world in boys, and it is the hardest possible thing to predict to a certainty how they will pan out. Boys that give promise in youth to become the most pious, God fearing, intelligent business men often turn out to be the worst whelps that ever scuttled a schooner of beer, while as often the wild, reckless, devil-may-care critters whom you may expect to find robbing stage coaches and punching heads in the prize ring, tumble to themselves and become deacons in the church. There are so many ways of bringing up a boy that there is no wonder, when we look at the results of the different styles of training, that people get tangled and don't know exactly what course is best. Our attention has been called to the career of the two boys that were brought up in the same neighborhood, on different principles. One boy was a pious little fellow, whose father was the same kind of a hair pin. The boy went to church and Sunday school regularly, and could repeat more verses of scripture than seemed necessary. When other boys were whooping it up nights the good boy would be at prayer meeting or a mite society. The other boy had a father that had seen a good deal of the world, and he gave his boy what was considered too much license. The old man would go boat riding with his boy on Sunday for exercise. They would drop a hook and line overboard just for fun. The boy would ask his father if it is not wrong to fish on Sunday, and the old man would say he did not know as he couldn't find anything in the Bible that treated on the subject. He said they would put on the bait just for a flyer, and if the fish wanted to learn any new game, they could have a chance. The result was, the old man and the boy would get a nice string of fish. The old man would tell the boy to look around while he was young and not do anything mean. Sometimes the boy rather overdid the thing, for instance when he got a lot of boys together and told them all to bring a cat to a place appointed the next night at nine o'clock. They visited a good natured German who liked fun, and after he and his wife had gone to sleep, the boys dropped eighteen cats down the chimney, into the room where the German and his wife were sleeping. The good boy would have thought he was going directly to hell if he had been mixed up in the cat scrape, but the bad boys had a heap of fun, and so did the German, for he was telling the bad boy's father and he said: "Vell, vun dem cats valk ofer de bed, und squawl like dey vos sick, I dink it vas yust rainin' cats, und my wife she tink it vas ped bugs. O, dose boys dey makes me laugh." The bad boy grew up hearty, and his laugh could be heard two blocks, and his heart was ready to respond to any appeal for charity. The old man told him that he didn't want to ever hear that his boy had done wrong to a girl. He wanted him to look upon girls as the noblest affairs that ever lived, but he added: "If a girl ever wants to have her ear bit, and you feel as though you could do the subject justice, and I hear of your going around a block to get away from her I will fan you with a boot leg." The bad boy had lots of fun with the girls, and could tell the difference between a good one and a bad one a block off, while the good one would blush and tremble in the knees at the sight of a piece of calico. The bad boy's father told him there was such a thing as whiskey, which was good enough in its place but a mighty poor thing to tie to, and told him not to feel as though he was liable to become a drunkard if he smelled of a bottle, but to let it alone on general principles. The bad boy tasted of whiskey and it burned its inwards, so he said he guessed he didn't want any more of that. The good boy never once looked at a bottle without apologizing.

Finally, at eighteen years of age, the two boys went to Chicago to take positions in business houses. The bad boy was met by ropers-in for a bunko game, and he told them to go and soak their heads. The good boy took the ropers in for nice christian gentlemen, and he laid down sixty five dollars. The bad boy was met on the street by a gorgeous female who asked him to see her home, as she was afraid of the bad men on the on the street, and he said to her: "Sophia, you need salting. You are too fresh. I am a young man from the country but you can't play no circus on the son of the old man. Ta-ta!" The good boy went home with the girl, and she filled him with New Jersey cider at five dollars a bottle and her pal stole the good boys pants through a panel in the door, with forty four dollars and a testament in the pistol pocket, and then he was kicked down stairs at midnight, the police picked him up and the bad boy went to the police court the next morning and paid his fine. The bad boy was invited by other boys to go and see the town at night, but he said he guessed the town would exist without his making a cussed fool of himself. The good boy was asked to "take in the town" and he went and got full, and rode to his boarding house with his feet out of the window of a hack, and he was arrested the next day for breaking a mirror in a Wabash avenue mansion by throwing an empty bottle through it. The good boy seemed to catch on to every kind of dissipation. Everything was new to him, and he wondered if the world had been going on that way all the time, and he hadn't heard anything about it. [illegible] plenty of tough places if a fellow has not sand enough to keep away from them. His old man goes down to see him once in a while, and the boy says: "Now pap, be just as good as you can while you are here, and don't bring your dutiful son's gray hairs in sorrow to the grave," and they go out to the theatre and have a real jolly time, and the boy is on deck for business the next morning. The father of the good boy says he thinks his son will be able to ride out by next spring, and that he always did have a delicate constitution.

Unpleasant Effects of a Bad Temper.

There is no greater tyrant in a house than a bad tempered person. There may be no particular tyranny in his actions, or even words; for looks and manners are of themselves quite sufficient to keep a whole household in awe. Bad temper does not consist entirely of passion; in fact, passionate people are often of an affectionate disposition, and injure themselves more than any one else. But the really bad-tempered person governs the household. All the other members of it are in a perpetual state of conspiracy as to how he shall be pleased and kept in good humor. He must have the most comfortable chair in the cosiest corner; the meals must be regulated both as to time and food according to his pleasure; nothing can be done without considering how it will affect him; and all this because, if he be put out, he knows how to make the house unbearable to every one. We use the masculine pronoun in speaking of the bad tempered person, though the distemper belongs to both sexes. Perhaps it predominates in women; for men have to begin early in life to fight their way in the world, and so learn to be tolerant; and the bustle and worry of life make them glad of peace and quietness. But a very large number of women remain in comfortable homes, with no particular object in life but marriage; and when they are disappointed in this, settle down into bad temper. [Chambers' Journal.

A POWERFUL CONTRAST.

When the soldiers of the dark ages were attacked with tetter, they could do naught but suffer. Medical science had not yet developed a cure. This labor of love and humane duty was left for Dr. Swayne, whose Ointment for skin diseases is as infallible in its results, as was the inspiring potency of Patrick Henry's memorable words, "Give me liberty or give me death."

Thirteen at Table.

One of the commonest and strongest superstitions—just now under discussion again—is that which regards thirteen at a table as an ill-omen, indicating that one out of the number will die before a year shall have passed. This is not confined to any particular nation or region or civilization, though it is not a pagan, but a Christian superstition. The fact or belief that Judas Iscariot, one of the twelve disciples and their treasurer, committed suicide from remorse for betraying his Master, is presumed to make thirteen an unlucky numeral, and to exercise a lethal influence upon one of the company. In Roman Catholic countries the superstition, naturally enough, is generally prevalent, and so firmly held that it would be well-nigh impossible to induce thirteen persons to sit down at dinner. If they should do so, a pall of gloom would rest upon them, as if there were a veritable skeleton at the feast. In Russia, where, though the Greek church is established, superstition has taken deeper root than even in Roman Catholic lands, the very idea of thirteen at a table is a terror. He who should invite such a number would offer an affront to his guests which would hardly be overlooked. When, by the absence of one or more guests, only thirteen are present, it is usual to get a fourteenth, even if a child must be taken from bed, before occupying the seats. Even in this country there are many Americans who share the weakness, and we have known women, and men too, who would not dine where there were thirteen, and have known others who were continually uneasy if they did so, and would anxiously watch the year out to see if the evil augury were not verified. Sundry stories are told about dinners of thirteen where death has occurred to one of the diners before the end of a year. Some of them are doubtless true, but this by no means sustains the silly superstition. It should be remembered that among men in middle age or thereabouts, the death of one in thirteen per annum is not far from the average mortality; and when as frequently happens, several of the diners are well on in years, it is rather to be expected that one of them should slip off the whirling planet. It is curious, though natural, perhaps, that the average man should have such a dread of death at a distance, and be so resigned to it when death stares him in the face.

How to Retain Heat.

As confined air is a poor conductor of heat, all fabrics that are porous, that is, full of little interstices, or tubes, or holes filled with air, are the best protectors to keep heat from escaping from the surface of the body. A loosely woven garment or bed coverlid is warmer than a compact, firmly woven one, because the air in the texture of the former conducts away heat less rapidly than the more solid ones. [illegible] solid materials. A sheathing of tarred paper, even, placed midway between the clapboarding and the plastering, to form two thin air chambers instead of one, adds greatly to the warmth of a house or other building. Two half-inch boards, set a little apart to leave an air space between, make a far warmer house wall than the same thickness of wood in inch boards. A layer of loose straw put between the wall and the earth banking up a cellar adds much to the warmth, on account of the air in the meshes of the straw. The same is true in covering roots or apples to be left out in heaps in the winter. Double glass windows are several times warmer than single glass, because of the non-conducting film of air between. So of double doors.

How People Walk.

Observing people move more slowly their head moving alternately from side to side, while they occasionally stop and turn around.

Careful persons lift their feet high and place them down softly and pick up some little obstruction and place it quietly by the side of the way.

Calculating persons generally walk with their hands in their pockets and their head slightly inclined.

Modest persons generally step softly for fear of being observed.

Timid persons often step off from the sidewalk on meeting another and always go around a stone instead of stepping over it.

Wide-awake persons toe-out, and have a long swing to their arms, while their head swings also miscellaneously.

Careless persons are forever stubbing their toes.

Lazy persons scrape about loosely with their heels, and are at first on one side of the walk and then on the other.

Very strong minded persons have their toes directly in front of them, and have a kind of stamp movement.

Unstable persons walk fast and slow by turns.

Venturous persons try all roads, frequently climbing the fences instead of going through the gate, and never let down a bar.

One idea persons are very selfish and toe in.

Cross persons are very apt to hit their knees together.

Good natured persons snap their thumb and finger every few steps.

Fun loving persons have a kind of jog movement.

A RAILWAY OFFICIAL INTERVIEWED

Not every one so cheerfully communicates his knowledge and opinions as recently did E. L. Loweree, Esq., cashier of Cincinnati Southern Railway, that splendid outlet to the south from the Ohio. Our representative waited upon Mr. Loweree, and in reply to certain questions the latter observed: "I was suffering from a very severe attack of rheumatism in my right foot; it was in a terrible condition; the pain was almost intolerable; our family physician waited on me without success; I sent for another well known M. D., but even the twain could do nothing for me; I could not get down here to the office to attend to my duties; in fact I could not put my foot under me at all; and after nine weeks suffering I began to grow desperate. My friend (whom, of course you know, for he is known by everybody), Mr. Stacy Hill of the Mount Auburn Inclined Plane Railroad Co., called to see me; he spoke very highly of St. Jacobs Oil, and recommended the remedy to me in glowing terms. I laughed at the idea of using a proprietary medicine, and yet the party recommending it, (Mr. Stacy Hill, remember), being a man of sound judgment, set me to thinking the matter over. The next day when the physicians called, I dismissed them, and said to myself that I would let nature take its course. That resolution lasted just a day. On the following morning I, in a fit of desperation sent a servant for a bottle of St. Jacobs Oil. I applied that wonderful remedy, and it penetrated me so that I thought my foot was about to fall off, but it did not; in fact it did just the opposite. The next morning the pain had entirely left my foot, the swelling was reduced, and really the appearance was so different altogether from the day before that it actually surprised me. I applied more of the St. Jacobs Oil and that afternoon I walked [illegible]

A bill is now in order to charge travelers by weight, and a good many will consider this quite equitable for a person's avoirdupois is much easier ascertained than his years.

THE question as to the effect of convict labor upon those industries of the State carried on outside the prison walls, has again been brought before the public by the report of Superintendent Pillsbury, of the New York prisons. In this report he accepts and endorses the conclusions reached by the commissions appointed in New Jersey, Connecticut and Massachusetts that the employment of convicts has no appreciable effect on the prosperity of outside industries. Pillsbury's time as superintendent of the New York state prisons expires tomorrow and Governor Cornell does not appear to be willing to re-appoint him.

THE three per cent funding bill has passed the United States senate, and will probably pass the house of representatives. The bill provides for the issue of $200,000,000 of three per cent bonds, to take up a like amount of the extended 3½ per cents. Many experienced financiers argue that a three per cent bond will not float at par, but the four per cents are at 118¼, and a three per cent at par is equivalent to a four per cent at 119, so that the chances are that they would be at par, or possibly a fraction less. The national debt is rapidly becoming a very light burden. But a leading treasury official states that the Senate funding bill will be inoperative even if passed by the house.

She relates some interesting reminiscences of her early days. The first school she attended was held in a house made of poles covered with brush and the next was held in a barn."

A singular superstition, worthy only of the dark ages, was revealed in this place last week. A woman was canvassing the neighborhood to secure a black cat, and in reply to an inquiry as to what use she was to make of it, stated that a lady living in the village, who was subject to falling fits, had been assured that the blood of a black cat mixed with whiskey and taken at intervals would cure her, and she was in pursuit of a cat of that color to test its efficacy. Whether she has succeeded in securing one we have not learned.

[illegible] making it more [illegible] modern styles of architecture and at the same time make it more convenient and pleasant in the manner of heating and lighting, and in introducing hot and cold water to all parts. Work was at once commenced in the rear part, the rooms being enlarged and made much more convenient. The dining room now 14x24 is finished in the natural color of the wood, pine and walnut, highly polished and is at once neat and durable, a south door opening upon a broad piazza adding to the pleasant surroundings. While these changes were going on in the rear, work was commenced upon the front, where has been erected a fine wide piazza extending across the entire front, and surmounted by a large octagon bay window of imposing architecture, and of pleasing proportions. The whole design is of Queen Anne style, and the work has been most elaborately executed and in a manner apparently to defy the ravages of time. The exterior presents a unique and picturesque appearance, and from the street "distance lends enchantment to the view." In the centre are double doors opening into a vestibule, which in turn opens into the hall extending clear through the main building in which is the grand staircase. This room is done in cherry, elaborately carved, the wainscotting extending to the upper hall. On either side of hall are double doors, at the right is the parlor and library divided by a gothic archway with double pillars and richly carved caps and mouldings. On the south side of library is a bay window of neat design. In the pediment of arch is carved the initial letter "C" and surrounded by a boquet of lillies. These rooms are also done in cherry and finished in shellac made throroughly smooth. At the left of the hall front, is the grand drawing-room, and music room separated by sliding elliptic doors. These rooms are finished in walnut made as smooth as glass by much labor. At the north side is that massive mantle extending from floor to ceiling and greatly beautified by hand carving. Beneath this is a fire place with a moveable grate, and highly finished jambs and shining andirons. The ceilings are finished in French renaisance and the artist has displayed consummate skill in the fine decorations. There are other rooms as a large cloak room, a convenient bath room and numberless presses. We ascend a richly carved stair case with easy tread, landing in a hall of like dimensions. At the west end it opens into the new bay window of generous size, and from which a view is gained for miles of our fine river scenery. This is finished in cherry and the eye rests easily upon its perfect mechanism. Above are many rooms, all well lighted, and warmed by a new patent steam heater the invention of our townsman Berney Buell. The contractor of the hard wood work was E. A. Allen, of Syracuse. All the other inside work together with the exterior has been under the supervision of D. E. Wright, of Fulton. The stucco, tile and mantle work has been done by A. C. Culkin. Painting, ebonizing and finishing of hard and soft woods by Marcus Crahan. Walls and ceilings by the well known fresco artist, A. Koehler. Every part reflects credit upon the several professions represented and Mr. C. and wife are to be congratulated upon creating so comfortable and elegant a home. N.

THE PATENT RECORD.

We are in receipt of the first number of the Patent Record, a monthly publication issued by Duell, Laass & Hay, solicitors of patents, No. 51, North Salina St. Syracuse, N. Y. It will circulate among those who are directly interested in manufactures and inventions and the subscription price is 50 cents per year. Send and get a copy.

THE MUSICAL HERALD.

The Herald for February is replete with musical news and suggestions and every lover of music should procure a copy. The publishers of the Musical Herald desire to make the circulation of 1882 exceed even the successes of 1881, and to put the paper at the very head of musical journalism. With the record already won this ought to be comparatively easy of accomplishment. In furtherance of this purpose they have arranged to offer to every subscriber to the Musical Herald one dollars worth of sheet music, which may be selected from our catalogue of over five thousand pieces of music of every variety. Address Musical Herald, Music Hall, Boston Mass.

BOOK ON BIRDS.

Lying before us is Holden's new book on birds, 128 pages, 80 illustrations, containing full instructions in regard to the food, care and treatment of Canaries, Parrots and other hard-billed birds usually kept in cages; it has also very complete articles on Mocking-birds and other soft-billed birds. Every detail which the care of many thousands of birds could suggest is fully, clearly, briefly written out, and in such plain language, no scientific terms being admitted, that any one who can read can fully understand it.

150,000 copies now in use. The Book is sent post-paid on receipt of 25 cents, money or stamps. George H. Holden, Publisher. 387 Sixth avenue, New York.

ORIENTAL CASKET.

We have received the initial number of the Oriental Casket, a new enterprise of Mr. Lum Smith, of Philadelphia. It is a work of sixteen pages, carefully collated, and a handsome specimen of the typographical art. The contents are such that cannot fail to commend it to the favor of the reading public, and not the least of its attractions is the fact, that our old friend—Emerson Bennett, is its editor-and-chief. Its illustrated cover is really a master-piece of the engraver's pencil, and redounds to the credit and enterprise of its worthy publisher. The subscription price to this truly excellent monthly, is fixed at $2, and this amount enclosed in a letter, and forwarded to the publisher, whose address is 912 Arch street, Philadelphia, will make a visitor to your home for one year.

NEW SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN OFFICES.

We are glad to announce that the Scientific American came out of the late fire in New York, like the fabled Phœnix, with renewed life. The subscription lists account books, patent records, patent drawings, and correspondence were preserved in massive fire proof safes. The New Scientific American offices are located at 261 Broadway, corner of Warren street, a very central and excellent situation. If any of our readers should happen to make a new discovery (we hope every one of them may do so, and gain a fortune), they have only to drop a line to Munn & Co., 261 Broadway, New York, who will reply at once, without charge, stating whether the invention is probably novel and patentable. A handbook of instructions, with full particulars, will also be sent free. Messrs. Munn & Co. have over thirty-five years' experience in the business.

NEW HEALTH ALMANAC.

We have just received from the well-known publishing house of Fowler & Wells, their Illustrated Annual of Phrenology and Health Almanac for 1882, 64 octavo pages, price ten cents. This publication has become a necessity in many well regulated families, and well it should, for it is filled with reading matter containing valuable information relating to Phrenology, Physiognomy, Health, Hygiene, Diet, etc. The Number before us, in addition to the usual astronomical notes, monthly calendars, etc., contains the Principles of Phrenology, with the names and the location of the organs illustrated; A fine life-like portrait of Mr. Nelson Sizer, the well-known phrenologist and lecturer; portrait and sketch of Mrs. Eliza Garfield, the mother of the late president; Some Contrasts we meet in daily life, illustrated; Influence of habit on character and destiny, illustrated; [illegible] and Medical science in China, with illustrations; Character and Longevity; The Annual Sanitarium, with hints and admonitions for the farm and and household, suitable to the different seasons of the year; and a great amount of information in small paragraphs, and a full and complete catalogue of phrenological works published by this house, and all sent by mail for only ten cents. It is handsomely published, and will have a large circulation. We will say to our readers, send ten cents in stamps at once to the pulishers, Fowler & Wells, 785 Broadway, New York.

HARPER'S FOR MARCH.

Harper's Magazine for March is a beautiful and exceptionally interesting Number. The frontispiece, "Fallen Short," from E. A. Abbey's drawing, one of that artist's quaintest efforts, is printed separately on heavy paper. There is also a full-page illustration, by Abbey, of Herrick's poem "Upon Clunn." The opening article of the Number, "Old New York Coffee-Houses," by John Austin Stevens, describing the mercantile and public life of the metropolis as associated with coffee-houses before the Revolution, is accompanied by graphic illustrations by Pyle and Hosier. Frank H. Taylor, in another illustated article, describes a pilgrimage to the Church of St. Anne de Beaupre, an American Lourdes on the St Lawrence; and Charles K. Backus contributes a curious historical sketch of James Jesse Strang's little kingdom which flourished a few years ago—a miniature repetition of Joe Smith's mormon autocracy—on Beaver Island, off the northwestern shore of Michigan. Professor Simon Newcomb contributes a popular article on Small Telescopes, showing how they are made. W. H. Bishop concludes his Mexican series with a paper entitled "Typical Journeyings and Country Life in Mexico," with seventeen characteristic illustrations. One of the most notable contributions to this Number is Elizabeth Stuart Phelps's [illegible] George Eliot [illegible] L. Alden, G. P. Lathrop, Margaret [illegible]

TO RENT.

[illegible] Insurance Company of Newark, N. J. The [illegible] sources of the prevailing [illegible] best presented in the following statement, which appeared in the columns of one of our contemporaries yesterday:

The Prudential Insurance company, of Newark, was incorporated in 1873. In 18[illegible] when it desired to extend its business to New York, the superintendent of the Insurance Department in this state required that it should have a paid-up capital of $100,000, and that amount was put up by the stockholders. Allen S. Bassett was the president of the company from the time of its organization up to 1879, and was succeeded by Noah F. Blanchard, who died last summer. Prior to his demise, a number of the stockholders had become dissatisfied with what they deemed, the "clique" management of the company. Under the charter it was endowed with power to buy and sell real estate, to receive deposits of money or other valuables upon such terms as might be agreed upon to make contracts with its members for the purchase and erection of dwellings, to operate as a sick club, a burial club and a general insurance business. In short it could be a real estate agency, a pawnbroker's shop, a building association, and so many other things that it might be said to have a clutch upon everything between the cradle and the grave, it operated to the full extent of its authority. After the death of Noah F. Blanchard a meeting of the directors was called to consider the propriety of filling the vacant presidency by the election of the former secretary Mr John F. Dryden, to that post, and by a single vote he was elected.

Mr. William Whitty, proprietor of a large family grocery at Nos 199 and 201 Market street, Newark, sold out his stock. That was nearly six months ago, and was the first of a succession of transfers to the Prudential Company, which have excited a great deal of interest and comment in Newark. The next stock-holder who desired to sell out was E. B. Thistle of the firm of Ingalls & Co., booksellers No. 761 Broad street, who offered his stock upon the street, and according to a statement to a reporter, could get no more for it from brokers and others than 40 or 50 per cent which he promptly accepted. According to the report of the New York Superintendent of Insurance the company enjoyed a surplus of $7,091.60 at the commencement of the year 1880, and the report at the beginning of 1881 showed a depreciation of capital, or deficiency in that year of $15,051.24, which would seem to be a total loss in the year's business of $22,155.84. This fact is presumably explanatory of the low valuation put upon the stock by brokers and other persons on the street as experienced by Mr Thistle. With reference to their depreciation in 1880, it appears that, while the company's circular states its assets at $281,042.61, and its surplus at $103,657.20 or $3,757.78 above its capital, the official Insurance Department report of this state states the assets at $169,153.76, and the surplus at $94,938.76, which still leaves $15,061.24 impairment of capital.

Within a few weeks past some gentlemen concerned in the inside management of the company has been purchasing stock at a premium of six and in one instance as high as eight per cent.

The first after Mr Thistle to go out was Mr. Frank Murphy, son of the vice-president of the company, Mr. Wm H. Murphy, and almost simultaneously his partner, Mr James G. Barnett, disposed of his stock. Immediately after Mr Wm H. Murphy, vice-president of the Prudential Insurance Company of America, sold out. The Messrs. Murphy and Barnett constitute the firm of Murphy & Co., varnish manufacturers, No 238 McWorter street, Newark. Then Mr Elias A. Wilkinson, of the firm of Wilkinson Gaddis & Co., wholesale grocers, a director of the company and owner of the building in which the company has its main offices, parted with his stock. Dr F. B. Mandeville, of No 940 Broad street, and Benjamin Atha, president of the Newark steel works, followed with sales of their holdings of Prudential stock, excepting that in two or three instances of those mentioned the sellers reserved from sale the nominal value of the stock of the first issue, upon which but 20 per cent had been paid. In no case did this reservation leave more than $100 at risk.

Dr. F. B. Mandeville being asked why, and when he sold out, replied laughingly, after a moment's hesitation:

"O! I wanted to use some money and so sold out. I got $106 for it and thought that was a good price. They heard that I was dissatisfied, and the president, Mr. Dryden, came to me and offered me that price. Of course I took it. It was the same price that Frank Murphy, a friend of mine, got. I hate to say anything about it, because these people are all friends of mine. Of course, a number of gentlemen have got out. I don't care to say why I think they have. I understand that Henry J. Yates, ex Mayor of Newark, of the firm of Yates, Walton & Co., hat manufacturers, has sold out, but don't know it positively. I don't wish to be understood as expressing any doubt of the honesty of the management; but about the capacity—well, you had better ask some business men. I think the ward influence in the management of the company is injurious. I have no hesitancy in saying that I don't think it a good thing for any one family to run a whole concern. And they are none of them business men. It is not enough to say to a stockholder, 'You have no right here except at the annual meeting. If you are not satisfied, sell out your stock.' That does not satisfy the stockholders, and it is no wonder that, met in that way, he wants to sell. I had a great deal of confidence in the company as long as W. H. Murphy was vice-president. He is a man above reproach, of excellent clear financial judgment, and his son Frank is a very shrewd, clear-headed business man. When I learned that Frank had sold out I thought it was about time for me to sell, and when I heard that his father also had sold, I was glad that I had done so. I was still more encouraged in thinking I had done wisely when I learned that Mr. Atha, a good smart business man, had also sold out."

"AN AMBITIOUS INDIVIDUAL."

"Oh! I'm boiling over to do some good act," shouted a politician the other day, as his red nose protruded from a face ornamented with unhealthy blotches. "Well, sir," replied a friendly listener, "unless you want to be an animated sign for a drug store, and make the passers-by sick, I would advise you to use Swayne's Ointment and be cured of that skin disease." The ambitious man acted upon the advice, and is now a living exemplification of what this excellent remedy can accomplish.

ONCE IN A LIFE TIME

Occurs an opportunity to buy a model farm at an immense sacrifice. The Keller farm containing 177 acres, situated two and one half miles south of Fulton is offered for sale at the astonishingly low price of $36 per acre, good buildings and fair fences, never failing brook running through whole length of farm. Land slightly undulating, very fertile easy to cultivate and pleasantly situated. Fulton is acknowledged to be the most thriving and beautiful village in the State, numbering about 5,000 inhabitants The close proximity of this farm to the village makes it for a milk and dairy farm or for gardening purposes the most desirable farm in the whole state. It can be advantageously divided into two or more parts. Will sell on terms that will enable a wide-awake farmer to pay for the same out of the products in a short time. THE SUN.
NEW YORK, 1882.

THE SUN for 1882 will make its fifteenth annual revolution under the present management, shining, as always, for all, big and little, mean and gracious, contented and unhappy, Republican and Democratic, depraved and virtuous, intelligent and obtuse. The Sun's light is for mankind and womankind of every sort; but its genial warmth is for the good, while it pours hot discomfort on the blistering backs of the persistently wicked.

The Sun of 1868 was a newspaper of a new kind. It discarded many of the forms, and a multitude of the superfluous words and phrases of ancient journalism. It undertook to report in a fresh, succinct, unconventional way all the news of the world, omitting no event of human interest, and commenting upon affairs with the fearlessness of absolute independence. The success of this experiment was the success of The Sun. It effected a permanent change in the style of American newspapers. Every important journal established in this country in the dozen years past has been modelled after The Sun. Every important journal already existing has been modified and bettered by the force of the Sun's example.

The Sun of 1882 will be the same outspoken, truthtelling, and interesting newspaper.

By a liberal use of the means which an abundant prosperity affords, we shall make it better than ever before.

We shall print all the news, putting it in readable shape, and measuring its importance, not by the traditional yardstick, but by its real interest to the people. Distance from Printing House Square is not the first consideration with The Sun. Whenever anything happens worth reporting we get the particulars whether it happens in Brooklyn or in Bokhara.

In politics we have decided opinions; and are accustomed to express them in language that can be understood. We say what we think about men and events. That habit is the only secret of success of The Sun's political course.

The Weekly Sun gathers into eight pages the best matter of the seven daily issues. An Agricultural Department of unequaled merit, full market reports and a liberal proportion of literary scientific and domestic intelligence complete The Weekly Sun, and make it the best newspaper for the farmer's household that was ever printed.

Who does not know and read and like The Sunday Sun, each number of which is a Golconda of interesting literature, with the best poetry of the day, prose every line worth reading, news, humor—matter enough to fill a good sized book, and infinitely more varied and entertaining than any book, big or little?

If our idea of what a newspaper should be pleases you, send for The Sun.

Our terms are as follows:

For the daily Sun, a four page sheet of twenty-eight columns, the price by mail, post paid, is 55 cents a month, or $6 50 a year; or, including the Sunday paper, an eight page sheet of fifty-six columns, the price is 65 cents per month, or $7 70 a year, postage paid.

The Sunday edition of The Sun is also furnished separately at $1 50 a year, postage paid.

The price of the Weekly Sun, eight pages, fifty-six columns, is $1 a year, postage paid. For clubs of ten sending $10 we will send an extra copy free.

Song of the
ROYAL ST. JOHN

A saint come to every home
And with my presence cheery,
I banish care and burdens bear,
Of women, worn and weary.

I run so light, and look so bright,
The ladies dote upon me,
No noise I make, no threads I break,
Though back and forth you run me.

Through every kind of goods I go,
Silk, muslin, cloth and leather;
Though all machines refuse to sew
Yet I sew on forever.

No heads I pain, no eyes I strain,
To find the way to thread me,
No holes have I, save needle eye
To make a cause to dread me,

I'm cheap and good and if you should
But for a moment doubt me,
Be sure and try, and then you'll buy
And never be without me.

I seam, I hem, I fell I bind,
I ruffle, tuck and gather;
And all machines I leave behind,
While I sew on forever.

Rev. C. N. Sims, D. D., at the M. E. church to-night. Don't fail to hear the distinguished orator. Tickets 25 cents.

Mr. A. A. Carr is a happy man, and not without sufficient cause. It's a boy and tips the scales at an even ten pounds.

W. J. Townsend Esq., is closing up his business in Fulton preparatory to removing to New York city, which will be in a few days.

The most veritable weather prophet we know of is the old gentleman who looks upward and says: "It's goin' to rain, or snow or suthin'."

Rev. Jay N. Taft, pastor of the Furman street M. E. church, Syracuse, is spending a few days with his relative, Mr. Ovid Taft, at North Volney.

At a special term of the supreme court, held in Syracuse last week, a decree of divorce was granted to Maria Beeles from Aaron Beeles. The parties are from Volney.

It is said that a good many of the members of the Presbyterian church living in Granby will not contribute to the new church if the same is to be built in the vicinity of the park.

There will be a donation for the Rev. Ormsbee of Fairdale, at the residence of Lewis Green, one mile and a quarter from Dexters Corners, Wednesday evening, Februay 22. Tickets 50 cents each including supper, etc.

Nicholas Althouse of this village was taken before United States commissioner Getty in Oswego last week and held to bail in the sum of $300 for selling liquor without a government license. U. S. Deputy Marshal Tucker arrested him.

Mr. E. G. Hubbard has formed a partnership with D. Hendrick in the undertaking business. They will remove to the Laduke building on First street by April 1st. A stock of fancy goods and a complete line of furniture will be put in. Upholstery and furniture repairing will also be done.

About this time look out for good bargains with Fulton merchants. They are shrewd and do not get scared at their own shadow and go into winter quarters to await the coming spring; but mark their goods down to the lowest notch to make room for spring stock. If you want good bargains call on any of them.

The popular lecture course of 1881-2 draws to a close next Monday evening and taken as a whole it has been one of the most satisfactory ever presented to Fulton audiences. Manager Mead has catered as liberally as the size of the town would permit and the course has embraced features that neighboring cities would not venture to secure. That his endeavor has been fully appreciated is seen in the full houses that have greeted every entertainment and a voluntary willingness upon the part of Fulton people to give a united effort in making successful first class entertainments.

At a meeting of the directors of the the Presbyterian society Monday even'g, $15,000 was voted to be raised by assessments upon the members of the church, making a total of $25,000 including the [illegible] and lot of the old church. The site for the building of the new church probably will be the W. J. Townsend [illegible] of property, situated south of the park, and the old Kenyon lot, and [illegible] known as the Falley place, these [illegible] desirable. A new committee consisting of C. R. Mrs. Peggy Earl, a widow lady, died at her residence three and one-half miles south of Fulton, last Thursday, aged [illegible] years. Funeral services were held at the Keller school house Saturday, Rev. E. Moyses of Zion church officiating. The remains were placed in the receiving vault at Mt. Adnah cemetery.

Armena Bascom Dada, widow of Rev. Lemuel Dada, died at the residence of her son, S. N. Dada, Esq., in this village, yesterday morning, aged 83 years. She was born in Northampton, Mass., March 27, 1799. February 8, 1881, Mrs. Dada suffered a shock of paralysis from which she never fully recovered and to which her death is directly attributable. She was a member of the Presbyterian church, a devout and consistent Christian and a lady beloved and respected by her large circle of acquaintances. For many years past she has made her home at the residence of her son where her declining days were made pleasant by comfortable surroundings. Funeral services will be held to-morrow at 3 p. m., from the house. Rev. J. S. Riggs will officiate.

Thursday morning, February 9th, 1882, Miss Carrie L. Benedict only daughter of Mr. J. G. Benedict, died at the residence of her parents in this village, aged 25 years.

Miss Benedict had been seriously ill for some days and her death was not wholly unexpected. She appeared to be afflicted with a complication of diseases that baffled the keenest human assistance. Miss Benedict was a young lady of rare attainments, both social and intellectual, and a mind and disposition that carried sunshine wherever she went. A kind and dutiful child, a practical christian, she goes to her final reward.

Funeral services were held from her late residence Saturday afternoon attended by the pastor of the Presbyterian church, of which deceased was a member. A large concourse of friends were present to pay a parting tribute to a respected friend, and a few beautiful flowers were very tastefully and appropriately arranged upon the casket. The service was brief and impressive. The remains were interred in Mt Adnah.

The following gentlemen officiated as bearers: Charles R. Nichols, Slater Laycock, W. J. Townsend, H. E. Nichols, J. H. Sheridan and F. A. Emerick.

Rev. A. A. Willits lecture in Nichols hall Friday evening was upon "sunshine" instead of "off soundings, or the sublimity and utility of the sea." It was a rather pleasing and good natured discourse and not particularly distinguishable for anything new. He is a pleasing speaker, rather jovial and undoubtedly carries "sunshine" in all the walks of his life.

The Oswego Falls reading circle was held last evening at the residence of O. J. Jennings, a short distance down the river. There was a large attendance, and the numerous selections were well rendered. A luncheon was served about 10 o'clock, which is a new feature, and if kept up the different residences will probably not be large enough to hold the members. The next one will be held at the residence of Mr. Skaden.

C. H. Austin, an old Fulton boy, now employed upon a steamship running between San Francisco and Australia, has entered the ranks of the benedicts. He was married on the 8th inst. in Sacramento Cal., to a young lady, formerly of Dubuque, Iowa, and a member of a very prominent and wealthy family. Fulton friends congratulate. The following telegram to Dr. I. C. Curtis, explains itself:

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL., Feb, 9, 1882.

DR. I. C. CURTIS.

Married last evening at Sacramento. Tell my people.

C. H. AUSTIN.

The doctor has performed his duty.

M. H. Bunn of Port Byron, N. Y., agent for the American Co-operative Relief Association of Syracuse is in town looking after the interests of that company. Its officers are well known Syracuse gentlemen and their plan of doing business commends itself to the thoughtful consideration of business men. J. Forman Wilkinson is president, R. Nelson Gere, vice-president, Ralph Friselle, treasurer, Daniel W. Beadel, secretary aud gen'l manager. Among the names of the Fulton members we notice the names of W. G. Gage, Henry C. Howe, Amos Youmans, R. B. Mc Cully and J. A. Foster. Mr. Bunn will be in town the remainder of the week and will make as many calls among business men as he can.

Mr. B. J. Kimball is in the employ of THE TIMES as collector. The promptness with which subscribers are paying up is gratifying to the publishers and commendable in them.

Contractor Emeny has a job to build a house for Willard Johnson at the corner of Second street and Broadway. Work was commenced yesterday. It is to be completed by May 1st.

Don't forget the masquerade at Nichols hall, next Tuesday evening. It will be under the management of Messrs E. Abbey, J. Briggs and B. J. Clark. A good time is in store for those who attend.

Cards are out announcing the marriage of Miss Libbie Hill, daughter of W. W. Hill, to Mr. Geo. Cross, of Jordan, N. Y. The ceremony will occur at the residence of the bride's parents, on Emory street, next Tuesday evening.

It becomes the people of Granby who are members of the Presbyterian church to turn out next Monday evening and attend the meeting at the Presbyterian church and vote on the question of site for the new church.

Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Taft of Oswego Falls, were certainly surprised last evening to see an army of friends take possession of their house. They were not long in making everybody at home and a pleasant and eyjoyable visit was the sequel.

Rev. E. Moyses, chaplain of the fire department will deliver his annual sermon to that body next Sunday evening at 7 o'clock in Zion church. Firemen are requested to meet at the engine rooms of the department at 6:30 o'clock to proceed in a body to the church. No uniforms will be worn.

The closing lecture in the Fulton course will be delivered next Monday evening, in Nichols hall, by Hon. William H. Parsons. Subject: "The Mediterranean Sea and its memories." Mr. Parsons' former visit to Fulton has demonstrated his ability as an interesting and instructive orator and people will be amply repaid by attending.

The Oswego Falls reading and cricket clubs will give a minstrel entertainment in Nichols hall one week from to-morrow night. There is abundant talent in these societies to present something first-class as previous exhibitions have demonstrated. The services of Cullivan, Hardy, Billy Norwood and other celebrities have been secured and an evening of merriment is positive to reign. Tickets at popular prices.

Vennor predicts the following for the remainder of the month of February:

12th to 18th—Mild at first, with more cold towards the close. Snow and rain storms. 17th or 18th—General snowstorms. 19th to 25th—A terrible week of rain storms, with snow in some quarters; floods and occasional very high winds and gales. 26th to end of month—Generally colder weather, with heavy snowfalls and a severe opening of March.

Seth Green, superintendent of the state fisheries at Rochester, writes: "We are daily receiving orders for Salmon, trout, brook trout, California mountain trout, black bass, Oswego Bass, rock perch and bullheads. The New York State hatcheries are fairly boiling over with fish and I hope all parties wishing fish for public waters will not fail to let me know before March 1st. The salmon trout fry are now ready for distribution, and parties desiring them should not fail to let me know at once."

"The Wages of Sin is Death."

A shocking crime was committed in a house of ill fame in Syracuse Saturday afternoon by which three lives were placed in jeopardy. William Tedre of Salina, a young man 29 years of age, called at the house and inquired for an inmate, Nellie Tart, an Oswego girl. He was intoxicated and abusive, consequently refused admission. He drew a revolver, forced his way in and fired a shot at Mrs. Stokey, the keeper of the place, the ball lodging in her back on the left side about a half inch from the spine and in the vicinity of the third or fourth vertebra.

He then ran through the house and up stairs where he encountered Nellie Tart, the object of his visit. He accused her of being unfaithful to him and threatened her life. Falling upon her knees she implored him to spare her. Crazed with rum and frantic with jealousy he heeded not her appeal. He fired but missed her. A second shot plowed into her right chest passing through the lung near its root. Tedre then left the house and went to his home in Salina and procured a revolver from his father and shot himself twice, first in the right eye and second in the ear, doing the deed in the presence of his aged parents.

A guard has been placed over Tedre and as soon as his condition warrants he will be arraigned. This morning they were yet alive, but the Tart girl is said to be very low.

A Fearful Accident.

Saturday forenoon George Carrier, a 14 year old son of Ira. R. Carrier, who resides about four miles southeast of Fulton was out in the woods hunting squirrels. He ascended a tree to shake one to the ground and when about eight feet up, a limb broke and precipitated him with great violence head first to the ground, breaking his right wrist and dislocating his left, cutting a gash in his lip, bruising his hip and otherwise severely injuring himself. He was picked up and carried to the house of his parents, about eighty rods distant, where he laid in an unconscious condition until Monday noon. Dr. D. E. Lake attends the young man. His condition this a. m. is reported to be more favorable for a speedy recovery.

HENRY WARD BEECHER.

The lecture to be given by Henry Ward Beecher at Nichols hall Monday evening, Feb. 27, bids fair to eclipse anything in the lecture line ever undertaken in Fulton, and the seating capacity of the hall will be taxed to the utmost. Everyone who holds tickets will be furnished seats, even if another house has to be provided. The subject chosen for the lecture is, "The moral uses of Luxury and Beauty." This is probably the last time Mr. Beecher will appear before a Fulton audience and all will do well to avail themselves of the opportunity of hearing the famous divine.

WILL REMOVE.

The office of THE FULTON TIMES will be removed to the Saunderson building, on First street, April 1st. Our present location is too limited for our growing business and the light in the press room and composing room is insufficient. The Saunderson building is one of the most centrally located in Fulton and the rooms are light and commodius and peculiarly adapted for a printing office.

A HUGE NO-SUCH-THING.

Fun is Fun, But By Thunder Don't Lie—Mr. Squires is not Dead as Reported.

To the Editor FULTON TIMES:

In your issue of 2 weeks ago was an article headed "Attempted Assassination." As my name is brought so conspicuously before the public I beg leave to say that the statement made in reference to myself is a contemptible falsehood. No fire cracker was thrown into the house, neither did any one fall to the floor, backward, forward or in any other way. No one said he was shot or thought of such a thing to my knowledge. No one went into the cellar or anticipated an assassination. "The young bloods of the place," as they are called, deny that they were even in my yard that night. That however, is a mistake, for some of them were, and we are satisfied as to the one who knocked on the door. A neighbor across the street says: "The firing waked me from sleep and I thought my house was on fire and ran up stairs to see." The Mexico Independent of December 21 has an article in reference to the same matter, where it is repeated. Another man ran up stairs and loaded his rifle, expecting to have a bloody time. Charles T. Cook is that other man and he says it is a big lie for he never thought of his rifle."

F. W. SQUIRES.

☞At Miss Saunderson's, on First street, can be found a beautiful line of Filling Silks, Embroidery Silks, and a fine and desirable line of Ladies' Furnishing Goods. 39

Although the holidays are past, yet the rush for 5, 10, and 25, cent goods continues at Draper's Fulton and Oswego Falls stores—where he receives new goods nearly every day.

[illegible] ously at variance to the one nature and education intended them to grace. An ex-judge in an eastern state is acting as waiter in a Leadville restaurant, while a graduate of Yale College is driving a coal wagon in Denver, are two illustrations of the case in point. Men removed from the influences that sustained them at home are sure to find their true level, if they are indolent and improvident they will be swept down with the current, while talent and worth will as surely be recognized as the needle moves to the pole.

The miner, the real old timer I mean, is a character whose peculiarities belong distinctively to himself, and are the outgrowth of a life of hardship and daring. He is usually an excellent story teller, a heavy smoker, and an uncommon good judge of whisky. Yet with all his faults he has the redeeming quality that all must recognize: he is the harbinger of civilization. From the opening of spring to the close of fall he is constantly on the move, from mountain to mountain, and from gulch to gulch in search of the "filthy lucre." Buoyed up by the knowledge there is no limit to the possibilities, summer after summer he scales the loftiest peaks in search of mineral bearing leads, and explores the lowest ravines looking for placer gold washings. He scales peaks and goes down into the earth, braving danger that none but the bravest would encounter, often at the risk of his life. If after all these privations he strikes a lead or discovers a placer from which he realizes a few thousands, as is often the case, he at once repairs to the nearest town and goes upon a spree which lasts until he is broke. At least such is usually the case. Bucking the cigar is a pastime that has brought many a miner to grief.

Then follows the ranchman, the mechanic and the business man; but first and by no means least in social importance the saloon keeper.

Railroads are built, cities spring up like a dream, the wilderness is reclaimed, the Rockies are made to yield up their treasures and refinement and civilization to follow in the wake of the prospector. The wealth of the American Republic is stimulated and the foundation of new states laid. Without the benefit of outside influence Colorado and almost the entire north-west would for all time remain the home of the wild beast and his companion the Indian. For without the discovery of mines there would be no market to make farming profitable to the limited agricultural community that dwell in the valleys.

Of this mountain country itself one must see it in order to appreciate its grandeur and magnificence. Last summer I had an opportunity of viewing some of the finest scenery in the state. Pen cannot portray the rocky canons through which the iron horse wends his way, that looks as if the elements had been in battle among themselves and huge masses of rock had been torn from their side and hurled into the gorge. At one moment you rush beneath overhanging rocks apparrently ready to fall and crush the train, the next instant the canon widens and the mountains roll back in graceful curves only to close again with precipitous rocky sides broken into ragged fantastic pinnacles. To a casual observer the scenery is much the same in all parts of the state, and yet a little familiarity will show quite a difference. In Platte canon you find the wonderful Dame Rock, a perfect temple in exterior appearance, lofty and grand stretching two thousand feet above the Platte river, which runs side by side with the road nearly all the way, where mythology might easily have imagined the gods to have assembled in some great banquet or festal service.

With full force of steam on slowly the train climbs Kenosha Hill, and then descends like a shot into the quiet sharply contracted beauty of South Park with Corno, Hamilton, and the immense coal fields in the distance. Here the Platte has its source and goes laughing and dancing over its wild and rugged pathway to the plain below. To my christian friend wearied and worn I would say, don't be in a hurry to shuffle off this mortal coil and wear brilliants and play upon fluted instruments, until you have drank of the clear cool waters and been enervated by the pure bracing air of Eldorado in summer time. As I fear that I have already trespassed at too great length upon the columns of your paper, I will not attempt to describe, but will leave to the imagination the quiet silvery beauty of the moonlight nights in the midst of the Rocky Mountains; the keen penetrating air, the never wearying glory of these majestic peaks reflecting from every summit the golden radiance of setting sun, or the rich mellow splendor of the rising moon, or perhaps canopied with the bleak storm cloud. In my next I will try and give you some idea of life in a mining camp religiously and morally. Upon the first branch of the subject but little can be said the second however, like time and space is without beginning and end.

J. T. S.

We would like you to examine our well selected stock of Buggies and Carriages, embracing the Side Timken Brewster End or Eliptic Spring, also the regular Platform Spring wagons, the Davis geared platform, the Gorton or 3 Spring platform, the 3 Spring platform, and the Eliptic Spring in front and platform behind, all of which we are selling at the lowest living profit. We are selling them at the present time all complete [illegible]

[illegible] Where, O where shall the weary and vexed spirit find [illegible] placid sea in which [illegible] and sunny isles, where [illegible] find contentment and the coveted rest. With anxious eyes we [illegible] page and thronging appear the loved ones just standing on the other shore.

We instinctively reach forward that we may grasp the loving hands, so near seems their presence, so real the remembered voice and kindly smile that our heart is filled with deepest joy.

How like a swift panorama pass the hours and days we loved and wrought together. How the bosom swells with grateful emotion and with desire intense goes out the chastened thought that we must again hear their cheerful, loving voice; to tell them the many things we left unsaid, to thank them for all they did for us, to hear again the sweet words of forgiveness for all the wrongs we may have done or the thoughtless, painful word we may have spoken. How precious the almost divine benediction that fell from their lips, doubly precious because we shall hear them never again,

Indeed, as a dream which the morning light scatters, is our life, and to-morrow our days are gathered with those beyond the flood. In our inner heart how we thoughtfully ponder—hesitating, sometimes doubting; praying the gracious and beneficent God to increase our faith as with upturned face we ask—when and where shall we meet the "disembodied spirits" that to us were so dear, so essential to our happiness? Shall that painful longing remain, and shall the noblest, highest aspirations of our soul ever be unsatisfied?

True, we have faithful, loving friends still to minister to our needs and sympathize with us in our common trials, who, with tender and willing hands help bear our burdens; still from the shadowy past ever and anon comes the thought and sacred memory of those we loved in days gone by, who, as ministering angels, walk at eventide by our side and lead us by "the side of still waters."

Is it not well that we join the past, the present and the future with the links of memory's golden chain, and with hearts subdued, "tender and true" shall we the more earnestly do those things which belong to and concern life here and everywhere. Nor need we suppress the starting tear nor the "sweetly solemn thought" that "comes to us o'er and o'er;" but trustingly, hopefully contemplate that grander and more beautiful Summer land where all is sunshine and content—for the aspirations of the soul shall there be satisfied.

"Guided thus, O friend of mine
Let us walk our little way,
Knowing by each beckoning sign
That we are not quite astray,

* * * * * *

Chase we still, with baffled feet,
Smiling eye and waving hand,
Sought and seeker soon shall meet,
Lost and found, in Sunset land!"

Court Notice.

[illegible]

[illegible]
"Time is the warp of life," [illegible] "O, tell
The young, the fair, the gay, to weave it well!"

I asked the ancient venerable dead,
Sages who wrote and warriors who bled;
From the cold grave a hollow murmur flowed,
"Time sowed the seed we reap in this abode!"

I asked a dying sinner, ere the tide
Of life had left his veins: "Time he replied:
"I've lost it! Ah, the treasure!"—and he died.

I asked the golden sun and silver spheres,
Those bright chronometers of days and years.
They answered, "Time is but a meteor glare,"
And bade me for eternity prepare.

I asked the seasons in their annual round,
Which beautify or desolate the ground,
And they replied (no oracle more wise;)
'Tis folly's blank and wisdom's highest prize!"

I asked my Bible, and methinks it said,
"Time is the present hour the past has fled:
Live! Live to-day! To-morrow never yet
On any humble being rose or set."

I asked old Father Time himself at last;
But in a moment he flew swiftly past.
His chariot was a cloud, the viewless wind
His noiseless steed left no trace behind.

I asked the Mighty Angel who shall stand
One foot on sea, and one on solid land;
"Mortal," he cried, the mystery now is o'er;
Time was, Time is but Time shall be no more."

He disturbed the meeting by continually coughing. He was not to blame for the cough, but was for not curing it, when Peerless Cough Syrup could be bought on his way to church.—Only 50 cents and $1 per bottle. For sale by R. E. Phillips.

"Ruts."

Humiliating as the admission may be, there is a tendency to remain in the mental rut into which father and grandfather have put the vast majority of humankind. Ancestral ideas have taken root and grown with the growth of the child till each individual actually believes the opinions to be his own, arrived at after due course of reasoning. But, as a matter of fact, they are such principally because their progenitors were.

People who get into a rut may be likened to a man looking through a tube. He sees only what is at the other end, and he may look all his days in that way and that is all he will see. Ruts are formidable obstacles to improvement.

From an extensive use of St. Jacob's Oil in the editor's family, we are able to speak confidently of its great worth in numerous ailments and fully recommended it is an article most desirable to have on hand in the medicine chest.—Stamford (Conn.) Herald.

Fashion Notes.

Small sleeve buttons are most stylish.

The close English coiffures still prevails.

Small jet bonnets are again worn for the street.

Black velvet dog-collars are again in fashion.

New French polonaises are short and very full.

Undressed kids still hold high favor for evening as well as day wear.

Black silk flounces are again worn on black satin trained skirts, but are confined to the front breadths.

Genoa velvet in Havana brown shades, with fringes of salmon colored satin, is much in vogue for long mantles.

White rat skin from Russia, a new fur said to be very soft and smooth, is the latest novelty for lining opera cloaks.

Jersey waists of black silk, beaded all over with jet, are now being used for the basques of handsome costumes that have satin skirts.

Tan colored long gloves, with loose wrists, are considered appropriate with dresses of any color, as well as with white or black dresses.

Shoulder knots of white satin or watered silk ribbon, fastened by a rose or delicate spray of flowers, take the place of floral epaulets worn last winter.

Mantles of last year's style may be lengthened by adding a plush border, or one of passamenterie and fringe, and thus modernize the garment. The neck and sleeves must, of course, be trimmed to correspond.

A stylish way of trimming a black silk or satin waist is to have a pointed collar or vest of pointon jet, incrusted with beads put on without design, covering the surface entirely, and edged with two rows of very large cut beads. Added to this are full ruffles of soft white lace at neck, front and sleeves.

The Jersey is transformed into a cuirass basque by being cut open down the front, and mounted with satin wide enough to support very small beaded jet buttons and button holes. The neck is then trimmed with a collar of solid jet, and there are jet cuffs, and the edge of the Jersey has a very heavy deep jet prince.

Novelties in the jewelry line are the coin jewels. They are in imitation of medals and coin, serve for all kinds of oranaments, and are artistic and quite inexpensive. They may be seen in necklaces, bracelets and fan chains, made in a style to correspond with the date of the medal they imitate. They sometimes consist of a single coin, surrounded by the very finest work. Scarf pins sleeve buttons, and similar articles are made in this way. [Rome Sentinel.

[illegible] United States, exclusive of Alaska, is [illegible] square miles; according to the new estimate it is 3,025,600, of which 17,300 are coast water of bays, gulfs, sounds, etc., 14,800 are made up of rivers and smaller streams, and 28,900 of the areas of lakes and ponds. There remains a total land surface of about 2,970,000 square miles. Virginia, in the old estimate, has a total area of 38,348 square miles, in the new 42,450, including a total water surface of 2,325 square miles. It is of interest to observe the wide contrast in area between, for example, California, with her 158,360 square miles, and Rhode Island with 1,250; or between Massachusetts, with 8,315 square miles, and Texas with 265,780. Arizona has 113,020 square miles of surface, Colorado 103,925, Dakota 149,100, Montana 146,080, Nevada 110,700, New Mexico 122,580. Delaware has 2,150 and the District of Columbia 70. New York, which has 49,170, is not as large as North Carolina, which has 52,250, and lacks nearly 10,000 square miles of the area of Georgia.

From A Young Lady.

A marriageable young lady in St Louis writes to the Globe-Democrat "to remonstrate against the hardships of our present customs in regard to making acquaintances." She "blushes to confess" that she desires to meet suitable admirers, but unhappy social customs so hedge the women of to-day about that she "dare not look" at "interesting" young men whom she meets casually upon the street, and so she "can only fold her hands and wait while the probalities increase" that she may never meet the man of her heart. This is quite too distressing, as some of the esthetic might remark; but the "marriageable young lady" should not despair. As a rule it may be remarked, husbands that are picked up on the street often prove entirely too-too, and difficult as it may be for "a marriageable young lady" to conceive it are frequently worse than none at all. It is sad to think of a young lady pining away for the male affinity who comes not, and fading like the lily waiting in vain for the light of the esthetic sun-flower. But after all such a fate, terrible as it is, is not near so bad as marrying an "interesting" looking young man about whom she knows nothing, finding that she has linked her fortunes irrevocably to an adventurer or vagabond. Twelve Rules for Dunning.

1. Never give the idea that you call because you happened to be in the neighborhood.

2. Never plead that you are in absolute need of the money.

3. Never explain why you want the money further than by some general phrase, as to meet outstanding bills. The debtor is usually an expert in showing a man how he can get along without money. He will worst you in argument, and if you should lose your temper it is an excuse to him why he should not pay.

4. Always be civil, however business-like and importunate you may deem it necessary to be.

5. Never think you have done wrong because a debtor gets angry. His anger, under civil treatment, shows that he does not intend to pay. This you might as well know early as late.

6. Show quite as firm a resolution to get the money on your tenth call as on any previous one, or else it would have been better if you had not made it.

7. Never leave a debtor without his setting a time when he thinks he can pay, and never fail to be on hand at the time set.

8. As between yourself and an employe let the most business-like of the two make the dun.

9. Suggest installments. Shame the debtor into making an arrangement to pay something every week or every month. If not $10 then $5, or $3, or $1. It will convince him that you have set to work in earnest to get the money.

10. If a debtor gets angry, or has worn out your patience, a threat to attach his wages may be effective, not so much that he is likely to fear you will get the money that way, as that he will be anxious that the affair shall not come to the knowledge of his employer.

11. A similar effect may be produced by saying you intend to place the bill in the hands of a lawyer, particularly if you mention a lawyer whom he hates, or who has a reputation for harrassing debtors. Professional debtors, however, become careless about legal processes.

12. Drop into a debtor's favorite haunts. It will make him very uneasy, especially if you don't hesitate to ask him politely, but plumply, for your money on occasion. This may often happen after he has displayed a roll of bills. [Old Collector, in N. Y. Sun.

When an Austin schoolmaster entered his temple of learning a few mornings ago, he read on the black-board the touching legend, "Our teacher is a donkey." The pupils expected there would be a combined cyclone and earthquake but the philosophic pedagogue contented himself with adding the word "driver" to the legend and opened the school with prayer as usual.

The Lawyer's Fee.

There is a good story which illustrates the advantage of being skilled in reading faces. An Englishman who could speak no language but his own, boasted that he had traveled through Europe without a courier, and had not been cheated one farthing. He was a good physiognomist, and filled his pockets with the small coins of the country in which he was traveling. Whenever called to make a payment to a man, he would begin by slowly dropping into the man's hand several of these coins, looking him keenly in the face. The moment he saw by a gleam of the eye or twitching of the mouth, that he had dropped the amount of the bill, he stopped.

A cotton speculator who once paid a fee several times greater than the lawyer expected, was not so shrewd a man. Soon after the fall of Vicksburg, he became involved with the authorities, who charged him with fraud. His cotton, which was worth a large sum of money, being seized, he sought the aid of Mr. Geiger, an influential Ohio lawyer, then visiting the city.

The lawyer in one day satisfied the authorities that there was no fraud, and secured the release of the cotton. The speculator was gratified, and informed Mr. Geiger that he would see him the next morning after he had finished loading his cotton on the steamboat.

The lawyer retired, but not to sleep. He was debating with himself what he should charge his client. The amount involved was large, the speculator would make a handsome fortune, and Geiger thought five hundred dollars would not be an unreasonable fee for his services. But in the morning the sum seemed so great for one day's work that he feared to ask it.

In this frame of mind while walking out toward the steamer, which was to carry off the cotton, he met the speculator.

"Well, Mr. Geiger, that was a good day's work you did for me yesterday," said the client, taking from his pocket a large roll of bank notes.

Holding up one knee, he thereon counted off four five-hundred-dollar bills, and without looking up at the lawyer, asked, "Is that enough?"

Geiger looked on speechless for a moment, but recovering himself said, with the habitual coolness of a lawyer:

"I guess you had better lay on another!"

It was laid on, and Geiger, putting the the two thousand five hundred dollars in his pocket, said, "Good bye, sir."

"FEMALE COMPLAINTS."

Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.: Dear Sir—I was sick for six years, and could scarcely walk about the house. My breath was short and I suffered from pain in my breast and stomach all the time; also from palpitation and an internal fever, or burning sensation, and experienced frequent smothering or choking sensations. I also suffered from pain low down across my bowels and in my back, and was much reduced in flesh. I have used your "Golden Medical Discovery" and "Favorite Prescription," and feel that I am well. Very respectfully, DELILAH B. MCMILLAN, Arlington, Ga.

They didn't Lynch Him.

In the pioneer days of Michigan, a horse thief or murderer stood as good a chance of being run up to a limb as one of those characters does now in the far west. One night, thirty years ago, a stranger, who had not only stolen a horse, but shot one of his pursuers, was overhauled near DeWitt, Clinton Co. and taken to jail. In half an hour a mob was drummed up and proceeded to the jail to remove the prisoner and hang him. One of the foremost was a lawyer named Green, dead long since. In fact he led the mob and acted as spokesman. When the crowd reached the "cooler," Green stepped forward alone to demand the prisoner of the jailor, and after a conference lasting five minutes he returned to the mob and said:

"Gentlemen, I at first believed the prisoner to be guilty, but now I have my doubts about it. In fact, I firmly believe in his innocence."

"How do you make that out!" yelled a dozen men.

"Why, gentlemen, I at first supposed he was a poor coon without a dollar in his pocket, but I have learned that he has $200 in cash, and it is my further duty to inform you that he has retained me as counsel. Gentlemen, stand back! The first red handed villian who raises a hand against my innocent client will pass the next ten years in state prison!"

RESCUED FROM DEATH

William J. Coughlin of Somerville, Mass, says: In the fall of 1876 I was taken with bleeding of the lungs followed by a severe cough. I lost my appetite and flesh and was confined to my bed. In 1877 I was admitted to the hospital. The doctors said I had a hole in my lung as big as a half dollar. At one time a report went around that I was dead. I gave up hope, but a friend told me of DR WILLIAM HALL'S BALSAM FOR THE LUNGS. I got a bottle, when to my surprise I began to feel better, and to-day I feel better than for three years past.

"I write this hoping every one afflicted with diseased Lungs will take DR WILLIAM HALL'S BALSAM, and be convinced that CONSUMPTION CAN BE CURED. I can positively say it has done more good than all the other medicines I have taken since my sickness.

THE INDEPENDENT.

"The foremost religious newspaper of the United States."—The Rev Joseph Cook.

Established in 1848, as an advocate of anti-slavery and of reforms in religion and politics, the Independent once became a recognized power throughout the country. Its influence has ever since been constantly growing. As it has fought against slavery and for cheap postage, so it will fight against Mormonism, for Civil Service Reform, and for purity in politics, and general uprightness in all things. It employs the best editorial talent and speaks fearlessly on all subjects. It pays for contributed articles and for editorial services more than double the amount paid by any other weekly newspaper.

It publishes more religious discussions than the religious reviews, and more poetry and stories popular monthlies, and gives more information than an annual cyclopedia. The long cable dispatches recently published from the great Methodist Council in London are a good illustration of what the Independent is constantly doing. A list of the most prominent religious and philosophical writers, poets and story writers in the country is the list of the contributors of the Independent. Besides the space set aside for these writers and for editorials, there are twenty-two distinct departments, edited by twenty-two specialists, which include Biblical Research, Sanitary, Legal, Fine Arts, Music, Science Pebbles, Personalities, Hymn Notes, School and College, Literature, Religious Intelligence, Missions, Sunday School, News of the Week, Finance, Insurance, Stories, puzzles, and Agriculture. 32 pages in all.

A Forgotten Item.

By W. E. Williams.

He was monarch of all he gazed on—was Editor, Prop. and Pub.
He was foreman, compositor, pressman and filled, the place of a "sub."
He was all of the little paper that weekly made its bow
To the people of Smithtown Village—the "when," the "what," and the "how."

It was eve in his little sanctum, another week's work was done;
And the web of the local doings which he'd labored hard and spun
In all of its various meshes, he'd stretched from door to door.
From the blacksmith shop to the tavern, from the millinery stand to store.

The Editor sat in the twilight, serene in a calm content,
As he footed the modest totals of "Auction," "For Sale," "To Rent."
For they winked with their full-faced head lines filling his heart with hope,
And he knew though they failed with silver, they would bring him beans and soap.

As he glanced with pride o'er the local his happiness seemed complete
For it told of the birth-day party that was had for Dora Sweet;
And it mentioned the last church social, while it whispered never a thing
Of the story that Mrs Snyder had told about Mr. King.

And it spoke of the last house-raising, likewise of the new big barn;
It certified, too, that a woman had knitted from one hank of yarn
Full four pair of socks for her husband, and called her a lady of sense,
And in the same column it mentioned the painting of Finnegan's fence.

The minister's yearly donation, who went, and the things they gave,
Was printed without any mention of how much the preacher could save -
From the crumbles and lattice work slippers that came to the holy man's sight,
As he took an account of his chattels when the donors had bid him "good night."

The avoirdupois of Brown's porker; who'd married, and fixings they wore;
Who'd vanished, and what they had murmured e're leaving earth's darkening shore;
In fact as he glanced o'er the pages, a smile wreathed the editor's face,
For nothing he thought was omitted, and everything was in its place.

But while he thus mused and reflected the sanctum door creaked in despair,
As a visitor passed through the portal, and stood by the editor's chair,
'Twas one of his oldest subscribers who'd always paid promptly in beans,
And once, when his beets needed thinning, he sent in a basket of greens

"I don't want your paper no longer," he said, with a blustering air,
"I don't want no deal with nobody what can't use his old neighbors square;
Last week, over Jennings' baby you made an almighty big fuss,
But not a blame word about our'n—an angel 'side that little cuss.

"A red headed, weazel-faced squaller, a bow legged bit of a brat,
Is better than our young'un maybe, but then, we aint losing no fat.
An' I guess we can do'thout your paper, so scratch my name off the list—
I'll get me a St Louis weekly, and your little thing won't be missed."

He was gone, and the editor lonely, was left in the deepening dusk,
His wheat fields had withered to stubble, his corn fields had faded to husk;
So dream lands will always be haunted—so ever forever I wot,
The slumbers of man will be broken, by babies that have been forgot.

JOHN PAUL.

He was doubtless a tramp. His worn and dusty dress, his crushed felt hat, his dirty shoes, and the checkered muslin shirt, tied at the neck with a bit of rusty black, and the little bundle borne on his shoulder from the end of a stout stick told the story plainly. Added to this was a beard of a week's growth, except the moustache, which had not been touched by a razor. He was rather a gay and good-looking fellow for all that with a keen eye and an open countenance, and a well knit figure, and he strode along as though he felt that the wandering idler was the king of other men an tramping a superior art.

Presently he threw down his stick and bundle and made a leap into the road, just in time to stop a runaway horse, with the long reins flapping about his feet and the wagon behind [illegible] from side to side. The occupants of the wagon, a couple as old fashioned as the carryall in which they [illegible] had been frantically crying to the [illegible] to stop, and now that someone had stopped him, were profuse in their [illegible]

"[illegible] not vicious," said the man, [illegible] and dress showed him [illegible] the society of Friends, "but [illegible] across the road, and be-[illegible] the reins [illegible]

"You may call me John Paul, if you choose."

"Well, friend Paul, does thee see that white house among the trees, off from the road back yonder? Thee go there and say to Rachel—that's our niece—that her uncle and aunt, Mahlon and Naomi Stacy, sent thee, and ask her to sew thy coat for thee. She'll make it passable, at least."

"Thank you, ma'am; I'll do so."

The tramp removed his battered felt hat, made a bow rather more courtly than might have been expected, and the parties pursued their several ways.

A brisk two minutes' walk brought John Paul to the lane leading from the road to the Stacy farm house. Down this lane he turned, and when half way in it heard a woman scream. The next minute a pretty young girl, with her hair flying over her shoulders, ran out of the house, pursued by a great, burly, rough fellow, who stopped when he saw the other tramp coming. The girl kept on, but, when she observed the new comer stopped also, in doubt whether it was not a confederate.

"Anything wrong?" inquired John Paul.

"That—that man!" gasped the girl.

There be tramps, and tramps. The one to whom Paul advanced was of the baser order, brawny, whiskey-sodden and brutal.

"What do you mean by frightening this young lady?"

"Take it easy, pard," rejoined the big tramp, grinning. "The gal gave me a lunch, and I wanted to sweeten the victuals with a kiss. There's no bones broken."

"John Paul's face reddened. He took off his coat and throwed it on the iron palings of the lane fence.

"Now," said he quietly," you'll leave."

"When I get good and ready," answered the other insolently.

"No, sir—now."

"Ha! Ha! suppose you spell able. Do you see that?" and he thrust his fist under the nose of the younger tramp.

It was dashed aside suddenly, and the right hand of John Paul fell with full force between the eyes of the tramp, who fell, doubled up in a heap. He was up in an instant, to go down again by another facer. Picking himself up he made a rush with both arms extended towards his opponent. It was impossible to parry this, and it was not attempted. Paul stepped suddenly aside, and before his antagonist could recover himself, caught him on the throat with his right arm, and suddenly bending him over his own extended knee, threw the great mass of flesh to the ground with a force that made quite an audible noise. The ruffian lay there for a minute or so motionless.

"Thee hasn't killed him?" timidly inquired the girl.

"No, miss," said John Paul, "but I've given his back bone a jar that makes him sick of fighting. "Come, sir, get up," he added, as the man began to stir; pick yourself up and go, or I'll give you more of it and worse."

"I'm goin'," said the other, rising slowly, and rubbing his back—"I'm goin' boss. But I say, you ain't a man, you're a steam engine, you are."

As soon as the fellow had dragged himself out of sight, John Paul took his coat, and, finding on inquiry that the girl's name was Rachel, gave her the message of her aunt. He followed her at her request, to the house, where he seated himself on the veranda, while Rachel, coat in hand disappeared in the kitchen.

In a few minutes she came out. "There is thy coat, friend, as good as new; it was only ripped in the seam, not torn, and—Oh, dear, there is that vexatious Crumple in the garden again."

Paul looked and saw that a cow had got into an inclosure not meant for browsing ground, and volunteered to get her out. It did not prove an easy job, however, and by the time he had managed to overcome her dodges and manœuvres, and finally get the brute safely into the barnyard, he saw the farmer drive in, and he knew from her manner that Rachel was telling them all about the fight. As he came forward to claim his mended coat, Mahlon Stacy met him with a beaming countenance.

"Thee has placed me under obligation again, Friend Paul," he said. "I hear thee was obliged to resort to force. It is against the principles of Friends, but since thee had to do it, I am glad to learn thee did it well. A big man, too, for I think the one we met with blood on his face was the one thee dealt with."

"There was no trouble in handling him, sir. The matter is not worth speaking of. I am only too glad to have been of service to the young lady." With these words he moved off.

"Stay friend," cried the farmer. "If thee won't have compensation for thy service, the'll at least grant us another favor and take supper with us."

The young man hesitated, but glancing at the young woman, said: "I—I am not in a fit condition for the table; I—"

"If that's all," eagerly rejoined Mahlon, "we can arrange that. Come with me." And the young man was speedily ushered into a chamber, where his host [illegible]

[illegible] latter after two or three preliminary remarks, spoke his mind.

"Thee was looking for work, perhaps, friend?"

"No, I can't say that I was."

"Thee would take a job if thee could get one, maybe?"

"That depends on what it is."

"Can thee mow?"

A smile broke over the young man's face. "Not very well," he said. "I did learn how to swing a scythe once—when I—when I was on a farm for a month in the hay season; but I am not an expert mower."

"That might come by practice," rejoined the farmer. "You see my man was obliged to leave me before the hay was all made; and when I met thee I was going after some one to take his place, and did not succeed. Thee might be of help if thee would, and I would give the fair wages."

"Well, sir, it is new business to me; but I'll do the best I can for you till you can do better; and as for wages, we'll not differ on that."

"Then the'll stay here, and we'll tackle the south field to-morrow," exclaimed the farmer joyously. "Naomi, the'll get a room ready for friend Paul. He's going to help me with the hay."

So John took service with Mahlon Stacy, or as he put it to himself that night, "I'm hired to Rachel's uncle," and he laughed at the same time as though it was the funniest thing possible.

The hay making was over in three days, but John, as they called him now, remained. He evidently knew little about farming, but took teaching kindly. He developed a great knowledge of horses, their needs and wants, and altogether Mahlon was satisfied with his new hand. The fourth day it rained so that outdoor work was stopped. The farmer and John sat in the kitchen, the farmer in a rather downcast mood. John watched Rachel's motion for some time, as she moved about gracefully and then took a book which laid upon the shelf began reading. Mahlon smiled grimly.

If thee likes to read," he said, there is 'No Cross, No Crown,' and Barclay's 'Apology' in the sitting room. That is a foolish book of poetry that Rachel delights in. But it can do no one any good. It is funny in parts, though."

It was Hood's poems.

"Some of this is by no means funny," said John: the 'Bridge of Sighs, for instance."

"I don't remember. Will thee read it out?"

John read the poem, and in the way that no one there had heard—read it with feeling and force,"

"Thee reads remarkrbly well, John." said Mahlon.

"Poor creature!" said Naomi. She referred to the heroine, and not to John.

Rachel said nothing but her eyes were full of tears.

On Saturday John got two hours leave of absence, and returned with a bundle, which he carried to his room. The next day he came down to breakfast in a new light suit. Mahlon made no comments, after breakfast asked John if he would go with them to the Friends' meeting, or to some other place of worship, or would he stay at home. "We go to meeting, of course; but Rachel's father was 'Piscopal, and Rachel goes there. Then there's the Methodists and Presbyterians."

"I shall go to the Episcopal church," said John.

"Ah! Well, we drop Rachel at the cross roads always, and thee can get out there."

So John walked from the getting out place to the church, which was a missionary chapel, where the rector of an adjoining parish gave a service every alternate Sunday. There were few attendants, and the coming of a fine looking young man made a sensation. When service was over, however, and they all came out, some whispered that the new comer was "Mahlon Stacy's hired man," and the sensation died out.

Absalom Brown was waiting in his buggy.

"Shall I drive thee home, Rachel?" he asked.

"Thank thee, no, Absalom. I came in the carry-all with uncle and aunt, and they'll stop for me at the corner."

Absalom walked alongside, however, leading his horse and talking to Rachel, and John fell behind. When they came to the corner, Mahlon and his wife were already there, and Absalom renewed his request. Rachel made no demur, for Naomi said it would relieve their horse with one less in. John smiled to himself. The aunt favored the courting.

The summer months came and went. Absalom Brown came and went once a week, and sometimes twice, and John Paul remained on the farm. He grew to be a favorite, and his activity and physical strength, with his great good nature, made him a favorite with the young men around. Absalom did not like him however. With Rachel he got along famously. She had been his friend from the first, never forgetting his opportune championship.

Then he read so beautifully, and was full of tales of adventure, for, according to his own account, he had traveled a great deal. In his wanderings he had picked up a deal of knowledge, too, as [illegible] bit by bit and he bade fair to make a good farmer, and the farmer liked him, too. But Mahlon, whose spirits had been [illegible]

[illegible] of meeting" but worse followed. Forsyth, who was on the downward course, soon got tired of his pretty wife, resumed his dissipation, and was drowned while drunk two years afterward, leaving his widow with a one-year-old child. Rachel Forsyth did not long survive her husband, who proved to be at his death bankrupt. He had managed to get Mahlon Stacy, who believed in him, to become bondsman in a case involving, it afterward turned out, a questionable transaction. Mahlon paid the judgment, but was obliged to mortgage the farm, which had been in the Stacy family for four generations. He adopted the little Rachel, sent her to West Town school and educated her, and bit by bit accumulated money sufficient to discharge the mortgage. The bank in which he kept his savings broke, and he not only lost his store, but was unable to meet the interest for a year. The mortgage was in other hands—a rich New Yorker held it—and proceedings to foreclose had been begun. If Rachel married Absalom Brown, who was rich himself and a rich man's son, there would be no difficulty. "They say that Rachel hangs back" concluded the clerk. "I rather guess she'll give in at last. That's the way Mahlon'll pull through, in my judgment,"

John came home after hearing all this, and found Absalom Brown there. The young Quaker was got up quite smartly—In plain clothes, to be sure, but his shad-bellied coat was of the finest olive colored broadcloth, and his broad brimmed hat of the very best beaver. He remained to supper, and was treated with marked consideration by the farmer and his wife. Rachel seemed to be a little embarrassed. John glanced at her a little curiously, and she avoided his eye. The hired man went out after he had eaten his supper, attended to the horses and cattle, and, this done, came into the house. It was usual for the family to sit together for an hour or two after supper before retiring to rest. It was their main recreation from daily labor. But the old couple had retired, and John retired also, leaving the young couple together.

John sat at the window in the dark, looking out on the night, and thinking. In a little while Absalom Brown left, and he heard the wheels of his wagon driven after the fashion of Jehu, the son of Nimshi. Then he heard the light step of Rachel on the stairs on her way to rest.

The next morning John went out early to see to the horses and cattle. When he returned to breakfast he observed that Mahlon was curt and monosyllabic of speech. Naomi [illegible] and Rachel distressed. John ate his meal silently, and then went to the field with Mahlon. But he soon made an excuse to return to the house. Rachel was alone there, seated with her face buried in her hands, and so intent on her thoughts that she did not hear him come in.

"What is the trouble, Rachel?" he asked.

The girl started up, and the blood rushed to her face, but she made no reply.

"Is it to be a wedding!" he continued.

"John Paul, there's—there's—"

"Or did you send Absalom B. about his business last night?"

"What is that to thee, John? Uncle is displeased with me, and aunt is sorry, and now thee must—what is it to thee whether I have or not?"

"Rachel," said he, taking her trembling hand, and retaining it in spite of her efforts to withdraw it, "it is everything to me, for I love you dearly."

The eyes of the girl filled with a sudden light: "Thee! thee love—me."

John read the answer to his question before he put it, and drew the sobbing Rachel to his breast.

"What keeps thee in the house, John?" inquired the farmer, entering the room. "We have work to get through with."

"Let that pass for a moment, Mr. Stacy. I have something to say. Who holds now the mortgage on the farm?"

"Why does thee ask?"

"From no idle curiosity. What is his name, and where does he live?"

"His name is Frobisher, and he lives in New York. It is his lawyer, Woodford, who has the business in hand."

"Woodford! Not Charles Woodford? So! In that case make yourself perfectly easy. I can arrange all that for you."

"Is thee serious, John Paul? Does thee think Frobisher would do it for thee?"

"Why not? He never refused me anything I wanted yet, from the time we went to the same school."

"Thee must be out of thy mind, John. This Frobisher, they say, is worth a million of dollars. Does thee expect to influence him? If I didn't know thy habits I should say thee'd been drinking."

"The man you speak of is worth more than you say, in estate, but he'll give you all the time you need. Let me see. It is nearly eight. The mail closes at ten. I have time to write a letter, hitch up, and get to the post office in good time. You'll have an answer by to-morrow evening," and without further delay he went out, harnessed the horse and drove to the village, leaving Stacy, staring in amazement. When he came back, the farmer was still in the house with Naomi and Rachel, discussing John's freak. During that day and the next morning Mahlon would glance at John at times with an expression made up of hope, and suspicion of John's sanity.

At noon next day John quietly [illegible] and handed it to Naomi. "thee made no vain boast. Woodford says I can have all the time I want. Thee has done me a great service. I only wish I knew how I could repay thee."

"Perhaps you can," said John, smiling, and taking Rachel by the hand. "Suppose you let me take care of this young lady in the future?"

"Why, Rachel!" cried Mahlon in astonishment. "Does thee and John—"

But Rachel's answer was not distinctly audible, her face being so close to John Paul's waistcoat.

"Has thee thought about means to support a wife?" inquired Naomi, with a last flutter or expiring loyalty to Absalom Brown.

"There need be no trouble on that score," returned John. "But I have a confession to make. I have in some measure deceived you. When you asked me my name, I just said—John Paul."

"And has thee been using a name to which thee had no right?" inquired Naomi, severely.

"I have a right to that name, but there is more of it. I am John Paul Frobisher."

"Frobisher!" exclaimed Mahlon, as a light broke in on him. Then there is—"

"I am, or rather was, the holder of your mortgage. I was—" drawing a paper from his pocket. "I have been to West Chester, and made an assignment [illegible] wife. I hope she'll be a lenient creditor to you, Mahlon. You see, I had been taking a pedestrian tramp for health and amusement, and you came across me just as I had run sufficiently to seed in the journey, and was about to take the cars for home. This face of Rachel's attracted me, and she's the captive of my bow and spear, anyhow. I won her by fair fighting," said he laughing.

PILES! PILES!! PILES!!!

A SURE CURE FOUND AT LAST. NO ONE NEED SUFFER

A sure cure for the Blind, Bleeding, Itching and Ulcerated Piles has been discovered by Dr William (an Indian remedy), called Dr William's Indian Ointment. A single box has cured the worst chronic cases of 25 and 30 years standing. No one need suffer five minutes after applying this wonderful soothing medicine. Lotions, Instruments, and Electuaries do more harm than good. William's Ointment absorbs the tumors, allays the intense itching (particularly at night after getting warm in bed), acts as a poultice; gives instant and painless relief, and is prepared only for Piles, Itching of the private parts, and nothing else.

Read what the Hon J. M. Coffinberry, of Cleveland, says about Dr William's Indian Pile Ointment: I have used scores of pile cures, and it affords me pleasure to say that I have never found anything which gave such immediate and permanent relief as Dr William's Indian Pile Ointment.

The BALSAM of TOLU has always been one of the most important weapons wielded by the Medical Faculty against the encroachments of the above Diseases, but it has never been so advantageously compounded as in LAWRENCE & MARTIN'S TOLU, ROCK and RYE. Its soothing BALSAMIC properties afford a diffusive stimulant, appetizer and tonic, to build up the system after the cough has been relieved.

GREEN B. RAUM, Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Washington, D. C., Jan. 26th, 1880, says: "TOLU, ROCK and RYE is an agreeable Remedy in Pectoral complaints and is classed as a Medicinal preparation under the U. S. Revised Statutes, and when so stamped, may be sold by DRUGGISTS, GROCERS, and other persons, without special tax," or license.

THE farmers in the vicinity of Mount Kisco, Westchester county, are greatly troubled in mind concerning the appearance of a black grasshopper, which was noticed two or three days ago in the fields. The farmers express alarm lest a new pest should make its appearance next summer, of which these hoppers are the advance guard. The insects are jet black and somewhat smaller than a cricket. Nothing like them was ever seen before at any time.

At the cabinet meeting Friday the Fitz-John Porter case was again under consideration, with a view to his possible reinstatement in the army, but no conclusion was reached. It is stated that the only legal way to afford the desired redress in this case, is for the president to pardon Gen. Porter, thus removing his present disqualifications from holding office in the United States, and then restore him to his former place in the army by nomination to the senate. If he is reinstated he will receive back pay and allowances amounting in the aggregate to $130,000. Gen. Grant is using his influence to have him restored.

OF all places in the United States where one would look for thorough justice to be meted out to colored people Washington D. C. is the place. The Fisk jubilee singers (colored) of Nashville Tenn., were in that city last week to give a concert and plainly in sight of the capatol building where legislation was enacted making them our equal in all respects they were denied admission to hotels and were forced to seek quarters in a colored boarding house. Prominent republican and democrat legislators have given hotel men in Washington to plainly understand that the entertainment of colored men will subject them to boycotting. Colored people are slowly coming to believe that they are loved only for their votes and the sooner they deposit them as becomes a freemen the sooner they can have their rights meted out to them.

MRS SCOVILLE has written a long letter to Mrs. Garfield praying her to intercede with the authorities to mitigate the sentence passed upon Guiteau. This exhibition of sisterly love and devotion is in one point of view to be commended, but there is some indelicacy in bringing the matter before the sorrowing widow of the late president. Mrs. Garfield declines to interfere and says that she entertains no malice for Guiteau and for Mrs. Scoville and other members of the family she cherished the kindliest feeling of pity. "As for Guiteau" she said, "for his great crime he must answer to God and the American people.

Further than this she declined to talk, and asked to be left alone with her grief. She is much affected by the rumors and reports that are constantly springing up, and the public is safe in assuming that there is no truth in them so far as anything emanating from her is concerned. She shrinks from publicity, and is doing all within her power to escape observation.

Mrs. Scoville the other evening said in an interview with a reporter that her letter to Mrs Garfield was not intended for the public, but as a personal appeal from a woman to a woman for forgiveness for [illegible] insane act. How the letter became public is a mystery to her. She [illegible] Mrs Garfield's [illegible]

The winding waters that lull the verdant banks and caress with wimpling fondness the love-lorn lillies of that lovely stream, on whose shores I first saw the light of day, and in whose embrace I have sported the summer hours away, in far away days, I see as distinctly, hundreds of miles away, as though I wandered by its pearling element. The receding years do not dim the pictures of other days. The opening spring beings to me the memory of that valley, whose undulating mounds and woody hills, will doubtless furnish in my last hours a source of consolation that nothing else can be compared to, because the outline has never changed to me:

Friends grow old. The dearest heart wrinkles, and loses its virgin freshness. Loved ones perish, under the horrid fiat of an eternal destiny, and are borne to the sepulture amid broken sobs, and streaming tears. All animate objects hurry with the forceful tide. to the breakers of decay, and on through the breaking surges to be swallowed up in the ocean of the frightful forever. But the purling stream changeth not. It ripples on, forever, the same. The hills change only, as stern winter shrouds their summits in a mantle of spotless snow, or, adorns the trees in robes of various dyes, and translucent beauty, in summer,

Thus it is, that the "birth-place" is always dear to one who dwells 'neath far away skies, because one views the familiar scenes always, as they never change.

The destruction of the Presbyterian church, brings to me memories of old, which are ineffaceably connected with the sacred edifice now, no more. When a mere child (I recall the age well,) my delight was to listen to the organ, played then by John Wood, son of the late Gardner Wood, both lying in Mt. Adnah cemetery. He was a true poet, and performed exquisitely upon the old instrument. He also played on the little organ in the Universalist church en Second street. From him, or, rather from his playing, I conceived many ambitions, and seemed to lose all sense of outward things. while my sense of hearing drank in the swelling sounds and noble harmonies worked by this devotee of music. After him came Mrs. Chas David, nee Hubbard, who played for many years. Then came Hector Breed, the sweetest organist of all to me, and from his inspired harmonies I date my resolve, to become an organist. From the years gone by until I appeared last October before a body of old friends, (who welcomed me right royally too,) and played the new organ, I have been the master spirit in many organ lofts, and in many cities. And I say, without a spark of egotism that I have not only held my own with artists who have studied abroad, but in many instances been chosen from a number of applicants to take the vacant positions, and always at a large salary. In my travels I have filled engagements in something like twenty-eight churches of different denominations, and can say with pride that, I was never removed for incapacity or, other cause whatever, but resigned of my own free will, and have to-day the respect and regard of every pastor with whom I was associated.

Last Sunday afternoon I sat in the great organ loft of old Trinity church, at a Vesper Service. My friend, Mr. Tirsch, the organist, performed one of my organ compositions upon the instrument that in my young life I viewed with admiration bordering upon awe.

Now, however, I am a welcome guest, and often sit down before the mighty giant of organs, and dream away my heart in the midst of thunderous sounds, and roaring pipes.

The case of Sam Williams, accused of the murder of James Hall at Sodus Point, will be presented to the grand jury at present in session at Lyons, for indictment. He will unquestionably be indicted and arraigned the present week. Williams was visited by his brother on Friday and they had a jolly time, Sam playing on the banjo and singing. He told his brother that he was innocent and never wanted money bad enough to kill a man for it. According to the Auburnian Williams hankers after delicacies and that paper asks "Who will send them?" Williams should have delicacies by all means. Let the jailor be instructed at once to feed him on nothing but pie.

We are pleased to note upon our return from a short absence last week the marriage of our old and respected citizen and friend, Hon. A. H. Tyler, more familiarly known in this community as Dr. Tyler, to Mrs. A. L. Chase, of Syracuse. The happy event took place on Wednesday evening last, February 8th, 1882, Rev. M. L. Donahey tying the knot. Mrs. Chase is the daughter of our fellow-townsman, J. W. Hudson, and is the mother of the accomplished and popular elocutionist, Miss Lillian Chase, who is her only child. Miss Lillian will in the future make her home with her step-father at his beautiful residence on the corner of Lumbard and High streets in this place, which will be welcome news to her many friends and admirers in Napoleon. The happy couple have our most hearty congratulations.

Mr. Tyler referred to above, is a brother of the late Judge Tyler, of this village. Both of the contracting parties have many friends and acquaintances in Fulton.

All Sorts.

Last Sunday, reporters of the New York Sun went to all the curious religious services in the metropolis, all "out of beaten paths." They found A. J. Davis talking to 65 persons, generally old and hirsute like himself, in the Harmonial institute on The Prophesy of Life; bishop S. S. Snow, a patriarchal looking man, who advertises that he is "called insane because he teaches pure bible truths" speaking to people on "The World to Come; L. D. Broughton lecturing on Druidism; Douglass Campbell, the "Scotch poet-author," speaking on temperance; J. McAuley, managing his Cremorne mission among his lowest characters; Felix Adler addressing free thinking Jews on the position of women; pastor P. A. Sequin speaking French to a French Baptist mission and having a wedding at the close of the service; Edward Kelp addressing eight little girls, two little boys and three men at Five Points: Dr. Landis occupying the desk of his scientific church and speaking on the subject, Should Clergymen be physicians; Rev. Jacob Freshman, the son of a rabbi, but converted to Christianity, addressing other Christian Jews; Dr. Kennion, dispensing spritual food and also bread and coffee; C. W. Sawnal holding a gospel meeting: Catherine Schwartz addressing the Christian Isrealites, most of whom were dressed in quaker garb; Mrs. Colby gave spiritualistic answers to questions; Rev. Charles McCarthy speaking on Agnosticism; Rev. C. C. Goss talking to show the "necessity of a reconstruction of our marriage and divorce laws" and saying during his discourse: "Every young man wants to marry an heiress, and every young woman a count;" Charles Partridge conducting a meeting of spiritualists with a shorthand reporter by his side to take down any inspired utterances which might be made; Thomas J. Cox, a policeman, managing a second adventists meeting; Father O'Conner, of the independent catholic church, delivered an address on "Nuns and Nunneries; or convent Life;" Robert Edwards, a Swede and a singing evangelist, with a crowd about him; and a number of small and irregular meetings without definite leaders. Almost all the managers of these out-of-the-common-line services showed by their appearance and bearing that they were eccentrics. Most of the people in the audiences were long haired men or short haired women or young people drawn by curiosity.

THE SCORE

For February is a varied number. It opens with a Life of Schumann by its editor, Mr. Louis C. Elson, and this is followed by a satire on the art of making tone pictures. A short musical primer, in the prevalent burlesque style, adds to the spice of the paragraphic column. The other departments are well filled, and excellent music is contained in the number; Published by J. F. Perry & Co., 13 West st., Boston. Price 10 cts. a number, or $1.15 a year. Send for sample copy,

EHRICHS' FASHION QUARTERLY

We have received from Ehrich Bros., of New York, a brace of interesting pamphlets, which are sent out as the avant couriers of the Spring number of that well-known magazine of fashion. EHRICHS' FASHION QUARTERLY. The First is the PREMIUM LIST of the QUARTERLY, and tells its readers what good things they may secure by subscribing to the FASHION QUARTELY themselves and inducing others to do the like. The second pamphlet is entitled SHOPPING IN NEW YORK, and is intended to convey an idea of the plan and scope of the FASHION QUARTERLY, and we must say that if the Spring number of the QUARTERLY only carries out the promises made for it by its forerunner, it will be a very complete magazine indeed. The FASHION QUARTERLY is published by EHRICH Bros., of 285 Eighth Avenue, New York who will send the pamphlets referred to, free on application.

THE NORTH AMERICAN REVIEW

For March presents a striking array of articles, every one of which possesses the characteristic of contemporaneous interest. First we have a contribution from Senator George F. Edmunds, on "The Conduct of the Guiteau Trial." Ex-Minister Edward F. Noyes communicates the results of his observations of political affairs in France under the title, "The Progress of the French Republic". In Trial by Jury", Judge Edward A. Thomas describes the social conditions under which our jury system had its origin, and notes its defects in view of the altered relations of modern life. Mr. John Fiske makes an able and ingenious analysis of that great intellectual movement the Reformation, educing therefrom the "True Lesson of Protestantism." In "Law for the Indians." the Rev. William Justin Harsha endeavors to demonstrate that one rational and effectual cure for our Indian troubles is to extend the jurisdiction of the civil and criminal courts over all the social relations of the red man. Prof. A. B. Palmer writes on the "Fallacies of Homeopathy". Finally, the Hon. Neal Dow contributes an article on the "Results of Prohibitory Legislation", demonstrating the success of the efforts to suppress the liquor traffic in Maine.

WHAT ALEXANDER MIGHT HAVE DONE.

The late Czar of Russia was eminently a great man, as his action in liberating thirty-six million serfs from slavery qualified him to be. Yet with all his greatness Alexander left it to Dr. Swayne to liberate the world from the annoyance and pain of sores of skin diseases, by producing Swayne's Ointment. Think of the tens, hundreds and thousands it has cured, and then remember it is economical, effective, reliable, and pure, and if you will only try it you will have a cure.

THE SUN.
NEW YORK, 1882.
THE SUN for 1882 will make its fifteenth annual revolution under the present management, shining, as always, for all, big and little, mean and gracious, contented and unhappy, Republican and Democratic, depraved and virtuous, intelligent and obtuse. The Sun's light is for mankind and woman-kind of every sort; but its genial warmth is for the good, while it pours hot discomfort on the blistering backs of the persistently wicked.
The Sun of 1868 was a newspaper of a new kind. It discarded many of the forms, and a multitude of the superfluous words and phrases of ancient journalism. It undertook to report in a fresh, succinct, unconventional way all the news of the world, omitting no event of human interest, and commenting upon affairs with the fearlessness of absolute independence. The success of this experiment was the success of The Sun. It effected a permanent change in the style of American newspapers. Every important journal established in this country in the dozen years past has been modelled after The Sun. Every important journal already existing has been modified and bettered by the force of The Sun's example.
The Sun of 1882 will be the same outspoken, truthtelling, and interesting newspaper.
By a liberal use of the means which an abundant prosperity affords, we shall make it better than ever before.
We shall print all the news, putting it in readable shape, and measuring its importance, not by the traditional yardstick, but by its real interest to the people. Distance from Printing House Square is not the first consideration with The Sun. Whenever anything happens worth reporting we get the particulars whether it happens in Brooklyn or in Bokhara.
In politics we have decided opinions; and are accustomed to express them in language that can be understood. We say what we think about men and events. That habit is the only secret of success of The Sun's political course.
The Weekly Sun gathers into eight pages the best matter of the seven daily issues. An Agricultural Department of unequalled merit, full market reports and a liberal proportion of literary scientific and domestic intelligence complete The Weekly Sun, and make it the best newspaper for the farmer's household that was ever printed.
Who does not know and read and like The Sunday Sun, each number of which is a Golconda of interesting literature, with the best poetry of the day, prose every line worth reading, news, humor—matter enough to fill a good sized book, and infinitely more varied and entertaining than any book, big or little?
If our idea of what a newspaper should be pleases you, send for The Sun.
Our terms are as follows:
For the daily Sun, a four page sheet of twenty-eight columns, the price by mail, post paid, is 55 cents a month, or $6 50 a year; or, including the Sunday paper, an eight page sheet of fifty-six columns, the price is 65 cents per month, or $7 70 a year, postage paid.
The Sunday edition of The Sun is also furnished separately at $1 20 a year, postage paid.
The price of the Weekly Sun, eight pages, fifty-six columns, is $1 a year, postage paid. For clubs of ten sending $10 we will send an extra copy free, Chauncey Wolever was crossing the Moss farm, below Fulton, last Wednesday, and discovered grasshoppers flying about as lively as though a July sun was limbering up their wings.

The poem on the first page of to-day's issue we found in a St. Louis paper. It is from the pen of W. E. Williams and truthfully portrays the tribulations some country editors undergo.

Steven and James Conners, Fulton boys, send THE TIMES a late edition of the Black Hills Pioneer, of Deadwood, containing sixteen pages. It is a marvel of enterprise for a comparatively new city.

Frank McNamara, at his tobacco store adjoining the Midland depot, is selling the Unique Blended Tea. It bears a good reputation among tea drinkers who have used it and he would like to have others try it.

Mr. Herbert Little, a young man who studied medicine in this village with the Drs. Pardee, a few years ago, is now located in New York city and enjoying a large practice. He is examining officer for an insurance company at a good salary, in connection with his regular business. He has also been selected to deliver lectures this spring in the college from which he graduated. Mr. Little has always been a tireless worker of which his upward career is the natural result of.

Lonzo Howell of Lower Oswego Falls went to Owasco, Cayuga Co., about Feb. 1st., on a visit to friends. He returned last Wednesday and found that his house had been broken into and everything in the shape of provisions had been removed and also a few cooking utensils and a water pail, pans, basins ect. Furniture, clothing and books were not molested the robbers evidently being of a hungry kind. Mr. Howell says he will accept pay for what was stolen or if the theif or theives will present themselves he will assist them to what is left.

Our New Railroad.

At an early hour last Friday morning says the Syracuse Standard Gen. Burt of the Boston, Hoosac Tunnel and Western railroad, arrived in that city, in company with Francis Fox, of the firm of Sir Charles Fox & Sons of London, and Mr. Woodward, of Bowen & Woodward, a distinguished firm of contractors, also of London. These gentlemen represent the English branch of the syndicate which proposes to complete Gen. Burt's line to the west. Mr. Bowen who visited this city ten days since, was not with the party, he having sailed for Liverpool on Sunday last. In company with gentlemen from this city the visitors first made a trip over the Chenango road to Cazenovia, and on returning they drove to Liverpool over the proposed route of the Phœnix and Fulton railroad. Divison Engineer Charles K. Moore, of Oneida, accompanied the party.

The English gentlemen expressed much gratification with the prospects for the new line. In conversation yesterday afternoon they stated that the English parties had placed $1,000,000 to the credit of Gen. Burt's company. The money is now on deposit in Montreal, and $100,000 of it will be deposited in the Salt Springs National bank of this city, to be used nuder the direction of A. A. Howlett for the benefit of the Phœnix road. It has been decided to put the construction of this branch in the hands of James Barnes of Phœnix. The gentlemen also stated that the syndicate is now ready to furnish $20,000,000 as rapidly as money is needed with which to push operations. Work on the divison between this city and Utica was ordered resumed yesterday.

Some one has laid the Lake County (Indiana,) Star upon our table with the following paragraph marked:

O. G. Wheeler's tinner, James Cooper, was the best disguised person at the mask ball, having neither domino nor costume. He only washed his face.

Jim used to be in the employ of Geo. Johnston in this village.

Chas. N. Sims, D. D., chancellor of Syracuse university delivered his lecture "Character and Characters," for the benefit of school No. 1 in the M. E. church last Wednesday evening. He was greeted by a large and unusually intelligent audience and his remarks from beginning to end were as interesting as words could make them. He is an orator of high merit and will find a warm welcome awaiting him should he ever return to Fulton. The lecture was a grand success financially some $38.00 above expeuses be saved. The people appear to be with Prof. Simpson in his efforts to raise money to further the interests of his school, and a right good school he has.

The closing lecture in the Fulton course was delivered in Nichols hall, Monday evening, by Hon. Wm. H. Parsons, of Ireland. The lecture was preceded by a solo by Mr. N. H. Gilbert, which was well rendered and heartily appreciated by the audience. Upon arriving in Fulton Mr. Parsons made his way directly to Mr. Gilbert and importuned him to open up the evening's entertainment with a song. His subject was changed from that advertised to "Columbus, the Sea and the Sailor." Mr. Parsons is a fluent and easy speaker and easily won the admiration of his auditors. His subject was replete with historical allusions and followed the career of Columbus in his endeavor to enlist sympathy to further his scheme that ended in the discovery of the western continent. Mr. Parsons will always find a welcome in Fulton.

We find the following in the Clyde, (N. Y.) Times, regarding a lady and family well-known in the town of Volney:

The 91st birthday of Mrs Josiah Hull, which occurred on Friday, February 3d, was celebrated by a pleasant and somewhat unusual gathering of relatives at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. A. Gregory. On this occason Mrs. Hull's six children—four sons and two daughters—were present, as follows: Judge Amos G. Hull, Colonel Harmon D. Hull, Messrs. Elmer W. Hull and Franklin Hull, all of New York city; Mrs. Justin Curtis, of Oswego, and Mrs. A. Gregory, of Clyde. As a number of Mrs. Hull's grand-children and great-grand-children were also present, four generations were thus represented. Mrs Hull, notwithstanding her advanced age, is still in good health, and retains her mental faculties to a remarkable degree.

Rev. A. Smith, the blind pastor, at the Free Methodist church Sunday morning was rather worldly in his remarks for a man of his persuasion. He abjured his congregation "not to sit stiff as cobs; rigid as posts, or brazen faced as the devil could make them while he prayed, but to kneel. Christ kneeled, why not you?" he asked with tears streaming down his cheeks. After a moment's lull he asked "Did Christ ever attend a pull-and-haul-'em, or a snatch-and-catch-'em party or play a fiddle at a church fair?" He then switched off on to a prohibition epic. He said "I hate to hear a man shouting about temperance when he is soaked through and through with tobacco. How would it look" he ironically remarked "to see Jesus and the twelve apostles coming down this aisle each with a meerschaum [illegible]. Mr. Smith is very [illegible] and [illegible] in his speech [illegible] audience [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible] Miss [illegible] who has been sojourning in Europe since last summer, is expected home the latter part of this month.

FOR SALE.—A desirable house and lot on Hannibal street, in lower Oswego Falls. Large garden. Apply at the TIMES OFFICE.

The Oswego Falls reading circle was held last evening at the residence of Mrs. Skadin, which was very entertaining and enjoyable.

The certificate of the increase of the capital stock of the Oswego Falls co-operative society to $5,000 has been filed at the county clerk's office.

Last Friday at Granby Centre a son of Hiram Ballard, aged 14, cut his right foot with an ax, sustaining a serious wound. Dr. Andrews was called.

One week from to-morrow evening at Nichols hall, Crossen's Celebrated Case will be presented. This is a first-class company. Tickets on sale at C. R. Nichols'.

Mr. Geo. Hees of Oswego has purchased the handsome dapple grey carriage horse of Chas. Van Wagenen of this village. It is about six years old and an excellent traveler.

The Spring term at Falley Seminary begins Monday, March 27th. Rates for tuition have been reduced. Present term closes 17th. of March. Regents examination next week.

In speaking of the improvements at the residence of Geo. M. Case last week, mention was inadvertently omitted of the system of electric bells that are placed throughout the house. They were put in position by Mr. D. A. Waterman.

The latest craze among young gentlemen is the collection of hair pins from young ladies. They are placed in albums and marked with the names of former owners. We understand that one or two gentlemen in town already have quite a collection.

Miss Mary J. Boggs, of Oswego, will resume her night school at the school house in upper Oswego Falls to-morrow night. She especially invites those who are backward in common branches. She is a young lady of education and ability and those who wish to brighten up their intellects will now find an excellent opportunity.

The Oswego Falls correspondent of the Palladium writes to that journal:

W. P. Hillick of Fulton is getting to be a rival of Vennor and Devoe, the weather prophets. The only difference between them is that Mr. Hillick foretells the weather with wonderful accuracy. Mr. Hillick has made the study of the barometer a specialty and has got it down so fine that he has no rivals.

Deputy U. S. marshal Tucker of Oswego was in town last week to subpena witnesses in what are known as the "Oswego Falls naturalization cases," in which John E. Parker of Oswego Falls and Lyman H. Patterson of Fulton, are charged with perjury. The case will be tried at the next term of U. S. court which will be held in Utica next month.

The following dollar subscriptions have been received by supervisor Rice in Fulton for the Garfield monument fund and forwarded to the county committee in Oswego: Arvin Rice, G. M. Case, H. C. Howe, H. N. Gilbert, N. H. Gilbert, H. S. Gardner, Jefferson Bailey, E. R. Redhead, W. G. Gage, Wm. Waugh, L. C. Seymour, Bennett Bros., R. K. Harris, H. Hulett, D. W. Gardner.

Noah Baldwin died at his residence in the eastern part of this town Thursday, February 16, aged 59 years. Mr. Baldwin was one of the oldest residents of this town and was for many years a member of the Presbyterian church in this village. He was in poor health for many years and was not actively engaged in any business. His wife survives him. Funeral was held Friday, at his late residence, Rev. W. R. Stone, of Volney, officiating. His remains were interred in Mt Adnah.

There appears to be a feeling among the members of the Presbyterian church to yield in favor of the majority in selecting a location and purchare the most feasible and pleasant site for the erection of their new church. The region of the park (north) is conceded to be by far the most enhancing situation. The only objection its being too remote from the business part of the village. As the village is steadily spreading in that direction the Harvey Townsend lot will naturally be the most centrally located place in the village in another decade. The natural surroundings are pleasing and it is thought the grading and foundation work necessary for its construction can be erected at a much less cost than any place in the village. To-night the Harvey Townsend lot will probably be chosen.

☞At Miss Saunderson's, on First street, can be found a beautiful line of Filling Silks, Embroidery Silks, and a fine and desirable line of Ladies' Furnishing Goods. Also a first-class stock of English crewels. 39

FOUR LIVES SAVED.

Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup relieved four of my children of a most alarming attack of Whooping Cough, from which their throats and necks became so swollen as to prevent them from swallowing. Nothing would give them even temporary relief, until the Syrup was tried. One bottle, in one night, saved their lives, I verily believe.

The Bible Says

"Cleanliness is next to Godliness." If that be a fact, what a good people we Fultonians must be. It may not be very generally known that Mr. Waterman at 34 first street is agent for the Empire steam laundry at Syracuse, a concern (conceded by all) as [illegible] to none in [illegible] for the beauty and finish of their goods. He sells on the [illegible] from 120 to 150 [illegible] [illegible]

[illegible] "Patience" &c. [illegible] persons great and small in costume [illegible] anything before put upon the stage.

The fine arts including poetry and oratory and tableaux vivant as well as painting and the beautiful in nature and much that pertains to the theory and philosophy of taste will be illustrated. But words fail—come and see!

Refreshments and Ice Cream can be ordered on the European plan.

A bed quilt constructed of the latest principle of aestheticism will be sold to the highest bidder containing a thousand names of living citizens.

Admission to Hall 15c. Lunch and Coffee 15c. Ice Cream 10.

Hannibal Items.

Mrs. Stanley Higgins, of Pa., is visiting her father, Dr. E. H. Boyd, of this place.

A series of meetings are being held at the stone school house, conducted by Rev. Hooks.

[illegible] has exchanged his house and lot in this place for a farm in the town of Ira.

Rev. Darling received about $75 at the donation held at Mr. Barlow's last week.

Mrs. Hinman who we reported ill at her son-in-laws J. Stevensons, has so far recovered as to be moved to her home.

The M. E. society are going to have a new S. S. library.

Mr. Orville Wiltse is attending business college at Utica.

Miss Jessie Wiltse is very ill.

Miss Mertie Peckham, who has been ill for the past two weeks is slowly recovering.

Miss Mate Blackie, of Sterling, spent a few days in town last week.

Mr. A. S. Guthrie has been appointed postmaster, in place of J. W. Burt, who has held the office for the past 13 years, and we venture to say the change is a matter of regret to nine-tenths of the patrons of the office.

Mr. Arthur Wiltse is making preparations for an exhibition at the close of his school in Dist. No. 1, next week.

Mrs. E. S. Tallman is visiting in Jefferson County.

The republicans of Sterling, Caynga Co., nominated E. R. Robinson for supervisor by acclamation, at their caucus last week. Mr. Robinson has already served three terms and will undoubtedly be elected again next Tuesday.

There has been but little noise about the town offices, but there will be several tickets in the field, and an interesting fight may be expected in this town.

There has been some talk in town of forming a stock company to run a telephone line from this place to Fulton. We guess it will end in talk. CORPORAL.

To A Departed Friend.

Why was she taken when we were left,
Is a question not for us to ask.
Still it comes with force to hearts bereft—
To feel 'tis best is a weary task.
But with some the race is quickly run,
Their sheaves all gathered, their work all done;
And while it is morning they enter in
To the rest prepared for the free from sin.

Yet 'tis very hard to understand
That it was better for her to go
And sever that home so bright, so grand,
Leaving our hearts to rend again in their woe.
For with heart as bright as the sunshine
She scattered the heavy cares of time.
And the pure sweet smile that wreathed her face
Gave it a winning and most tender grace.

Earth's fairest flowers are taken soon when
The young buds first their beauty unfold.
So buds for Heaven are taken the same,
Gathered in freshness and taken to God
Because their buds up yonder never fade
But bloom in the glory Christ has made,
And earth's fairest flowers most bright and rare
The Father of all has gathered there.

Just why for her the summons was sent
We cannot tell; but it was God's plan;
And with this thought we must be content,
For God's ways are not the ways of man.
He needed this bud to make complete
The wreath of flowers round the Mercy Seat.
And knowing that she is at home with God
We can bend, submissive, and kiss the rod.

James R. O'Gorman, of Oswego has been appointed clerk of the assembly judiciary committee, of which Mr. Poucher is chairman.

The masquerade party at Nichols hall last evening was passed very pleasently. About fifty couple of maskers were present and about 100 spectators.

We learn that Rev. Mr. Titus, who for nearly two years has suffered from nervous peostration and vertigo, has been at Clifton Springs the past three weeks for treatment. No material improvement is yet manifest.

There will be a temperance meeting at the Universalist church Friday evening. Parke Burgess, a Congregational minister, of Newark, N. Y., will address the meeting. Rev. J. R. Lovalle, of Toronto, Ont., will assist in the services. All are cordially invited to attend.

The firemen were out in good numbers Sunday evening to listen to the annual sermon by the chaplain Rev. E. Moyses, at Zion church. He depicted the courage and brave daring exhibited by firemen and paid them a well deserved compliment for their fidelity to the trust they voluntarily assumed. The firemen are more than pleased with the sermon and desire to return thanks to the chaplain and the officers of the church for courtesies extended. The chief rendered appropriate music.

On Thirty Days Trial.

We will send Dr. Dye's Celebrated Electro Voltaic Belts and other Electro appliances on trial for thirty days to young men and older persons who are afflicted with nervous debility, lost vitality, etc., guaranteeing speedy relief and complete restoration of [illegible] [illegible]

The midland shops in Oswego are running on full time. One hundred and fifty men are now employed and three gondolas are turned out every day.

The Unionville mills situated at Unionville, three miles west of Oswego, and run by Dolan & Watts, were totally destroyed by fire Monday morning. Insured.

Mrs. Stokey and Nellie Tart, of Syracuse, victims of the jealous Tedre, are still alive. Tedre has been removed to the penitentiary. It looks now as though the two would recover.

At the charter election in Syracuse yesterday Demong, democrat, was elected mayor by sixty-six majority over his competitor, Geo. Barnes. The board of aldermen of the city is republican and the board of supervisors is republican.

A large anti-ploygamy meeting was held at Syracuse last night. Addresses were delivered by Judge Andrews, Rev. C. P. Lyford, Rev. C. C. Cregan and Hon. Geo. N. Kennedy. Resolutions were passed denouncing polygamy and requesting the representative to do everything possible to aid in its suppression.

One of the greatest revivals ever known in Oswego is in progress in the First Methodist church there, of which Rev. F. H. Beck is pastor. It is said more than a hundred persons have professed conversion. Mrs. Maggie Van Cott the noted revivalist is assisting in the services and is attracting immense throngs.

The Merchants' Bank of Watertown suspended payment last Saturday. There was over $700,000 on deposit considerable of which belonged to people in moderate circumstances. Speculation in wheat is the cause assigned for the failure. The attorney-general is preparing to begin legal proceedings for the appointment of receiver for the bank.

Chenango county may claim the banner for intelligence with its coroner's juries. A few days since, Thomas Letson, aged 70, was found dead in his bed at Norwich. An inquest was held and the jury returned the following verdict: 'That Thomas Letson came to his death, in consequense of fatty deposits about the valves of the heart, together with the gradually weakened condition dependent upon its hypertrophy and probably the great weakness consequent upon the apparent inanition of the system."

About six weeks ago Morgan L. Rowland, who lives with his son John on East Seventh, between Cayuga and Seneca streets, suffered a third stroke of paralysis, which affected his throat so that he is unable to swallow. For 35 days he has taken no nourishment of any kind, not even water, which he rejects as soon as it is put to his lips. When Mr. Rowland was stricken down he weighed 190 pounds; he now weigs 130 pounds. Should he continue in his present state it is only a question of time when he dies of starvation. Mr. John Rowland drives a delivery wagon for Manister Worts. This is a remarkable case and will be watched with a great deal of interest by the medical fraternity. The elder Rowland was a soldier in the Black Hawk war. [Oswego Times Sat.

The people of North Hannibal have been favored with two lectures from Miss Carrie Downer of Baldwinsville, and a full house greeted her each time Sunday morning she was preceded by Mrs. Wise, a Free Methodist from Fulton, who preached for more than an hour, most of the time to the audience which had gathered to hear Miss Downer; the latter not knowing that Mrs. Wise had an appointment, thought she was trying to talk her down as she was using her time. The audience became very impatient with the extended remarks of sister Wise and seemed to think she used but little wisdom in crowding herself upon the time expected to be occupied by another. Miss Downer finally delivered her lecture which, as on the evening previous, was listened to with marked attention, and almost breathless silence. At the end of her lectures she called for subjects from the the audience and improvised poems upon same some of which were beautiful. Whether she speaks from spirit inspiration or not, her lectures are charming and elevating. [Oswego Express.

About six o'clock last evening an accident occurred whereby a well known resident of the city, John W. Mooney, lost his life. The casualty happened at the residence of his mother on West Oneida, between Ninth and Tenth streets. For several days the deceased had been engaged in making repairs to the family residence, and for this purpose a couple of scaffolds had been erected in front of the house. These we understand, had been constructed by the deceased, and from the evidence produced at the inquest were of a substantial character. It was not by the fall of either of the scaffolds that the unfortunate man met his death. The clapboards had been removed from the front of the house for the purpose of placing paper beneath, after which the clapboards had been replaced. All this had been accomplished and Mr. Mooney was about commencing the task of painting the front when he met his death. He had started to paint on one corner of the building when by a misstep he fell from the upper scaffold. He was seen in his descent to be falling head first, striking the lower scaffold, from which he fell to the ground. A moment later he was carried into the house. Dr. Milne was summoned and that physician was in attendance within [illegible]

[illegible] witness the marriage of their daughter Mattie to Charles O. Lawton. At eight o'clock the couple were conducted to the parlor where the Rev. Mr. Blakford of North Scriba pronounced them husband and wife. After the ceremony had been performed the guests were invited to the dining room where a bountiful repast had been prepared. After doing the supper ample justice returned to the parlor for a social time which lasted until the small hours of the night. After giving the newly married couple our best wishes we went home feeling that it was good for us to be there. The presents are beautiful and useful; just what a couple want to commence housekeeping and are valued at $125 and were very numerous.

LINES ON HEARING THAT MR. BEECHER IS GROWING OLD.

BY JESSIE SCOTT.

A calm old age seems fit and meet,
And satisfies like things complete,
Nor finds us pining;
And though we from the borders shrink,
Most storm tossed souls are glad, I think,
At life's declining.

But O, not he, it cannot be,
With soul so woodrous strong and free,
Not made for dying;
E'en Time himself might stay his hand,
And fear to do his work so grand,
At our strong crying.

So many years in strength he's stood,
To plead for all that's true and good,
To make us better,
That now we dread the vacant place,
When age e'en him meets face to face,
His tongue to fetter.

O Time, stand still, and pause just now,
Nor add one furrow to that brow,
His manhood crowning;
Methinks 'twould shame grim fate himself,
To snatch from us such royal pelf,
Our needs disowning

* * * * * * *

Nay, nay poor heart, this is not all.
Dost think that truth and progress fall
With one man's going?
Age comes to all and so 'tis best.
His words shall live when he's at rest
Wrong still o'erthrowing.

The storm which set in Monday changed yesterday to sleet and rain. It froze rapidly and trees, telegraph, telephone and fire alarm wires suffered to a great extent. The wires were encased in a heavy coating of ice and sagged nearly to the ground resembling huge cables. Trees, unable to bear their heavy load, fell to the street, in many instances impeding travel. This morning there is about four inches of snow upon the ground and people with sleighing outfits are utilizing it for all it is worth. Telegraph communication with Oswego and Syracuse was entirely cut off during the day and night.

There is More Strength restoring power in a bottle of Parker's Ginger Tonic than in a bushel of malt or a gallon of milk. This explains why invalids find it such a wonderful invigorant for mind and body. See other column. 37m1

SCANDALOUS PROCEEDINGS.

We very much regret the scandalous proceedings of representives of an insurance company under the name of the "Prudential." It is said that these fellows followed the agent for the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., Mr. J. R. Forsyth of our town, among his patrons trying to discourage them by false statements and carrying on more like wild beasts than men. The citizens of Oswego Falls and Fulton are quite content with Mr. Forsyth who has come among us and made himself welcome by his endeavors to please his members and the people at large. The sooner these fellows leave town the better. 40t1

"MADE NEW AGAIN."

Mrs. WM. D. RYCMAN, St. Cathherines Ont., says; "R. V. Pierce, Buffalo N. Y., I have used your 'favorite prescription,' 'Golden Medical Discovery,' and 'Pleasant Purgative Pellets,' for the last three months and find my self—(what shall I say)—'made new again' are the only words that express it. I was reduced to a skeleton, could not walk across the floor without fainting, could keep nothing in the shape of food on my stomach. Myself and friends had given all hope, my immediate death seemed certain. I now live (to the surprise of everybody) and am able to do my own work."

For Sale.

Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure.

A Southern School Episode.

A young woman teaching school in Marion County has a man forty years of age attending the school. He missed his lessons, whereupon the teacher announced her intention to open the pores of the skin with a switch, to see if she could teach him something in that way. He flatly declared that he could not take a whipping, and would quit school first. Finally she left it to a vote of the scholars as to whether she should whip him. The youngsters were unanimously in favor of war. The young woman then gathered the bearded scholar by the collar, and to his utter astonishment gave him a sound thrashing. He is now disgusted with the school business, and believes the whole thing a farce.

What heart can help sympathizing with a child in evident suffering, too young to tell what ails it. Frequently the cause is worms, and no child, however young, can possibly be injured by the use of Peerless Worm Specific. For sale by R. E. Phillips.

Fashion Notes.

White moire fans are in favor.

Pleated puffs make effective tabliers.

Scotch ginghams are now offered for sale.

A tiny silver teapot is the new watch charm.

New floral garniture is made wholly of beads.

Chenille ruches are stylish trimmings for mantles.

India foulards are imported for ladies in mourning.

Virgin gold is a pale shade that is to replace old gold.

Mother of pearl satin is the novelty for wedding dresses.

Diamonds are set in a row around the finger in guard rings,

An interrogation point in diamonds is a new Parisian brooch.

New spring bonnets will be in the close-fitting princess style.

No wardrobe is complete during Lent without a severe black dress.

A gold sunflower is the æsthetic design for breastpins and finger rings.

Pongee trimmings wrought in lace patterns are among the late novelties.

A short mantle of seal skin completes Paris dresses of brown and watered silk.

A single piece of Russian lace is made to cover the front of satin dress skirts.

A garland of mixed roses are newer than the corsage boquet for evening dresses.

Trimming ribbons are wider than those of last season, and will measure from three to four inches.

Primary colors and old-fashioned shades are announced for spring goods in place of the faded blues and dingy greens now fashionable.

The red hats that were so fashionable last summer, are repeated in darker shades, in smooth, light braids, as well as in the heavy-looking rough straws.

Lace ribbons are the novelty of the season. These imitate the designs of moresque and Spanish laces, which are woven in thick figures on a lace like ground that forms the ribbon, and the edges are scalloped.

A novelty, probably suggested by the introduction of kid waists among Parisian fashions, are bands of kid, with arbesque design like Venetian lace, placed against velvet of the same color, but in a different shade.

The first importation of bonnets show straws in grert variety, to the exclusion of chip braids. Englise split straws and Milan braids will probably find most favor, as they come in narrow braids of satin-like lustre, and are light in weight. The cream-weite and ecrue are most in favor.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE.

I had a serious disease of the lungs, and was for a time confined to my bed and under the care of a physician. His prescriptions did not help me. I grew worse, coughing very severly. I commenced taking your "Golden Medical Discovery," and it cured me. Yours respectfully.

The New York Produce Exchange has organized a glee club. They will probably sing. "Tis wheat to be Remembered" as an opening chorus; followed by such a selection as "Ryes and Shine" "Peas, be still," "The Prairie Flour," and closing with a vigorous cadenza of wild Western oats. [Pittsburg Telegraph.

Tommy was a little rogue, whom his mother had hard work to manage. Their house in the country was raised a few feet from the ground, and Tommy, to escape a well-deserved whipping, ran and crept under the house. Presently the father came home, and hearing where the boy had taken refuge, crept [illegible]

[illegible] around a dry goods box all the afternoon piling up a pebble fort, and nearly die off when his big sister wants him to pick up a basket of chips for the parlor stove. And he'll spend the biggest part of the day trying to corner a stray mule or a ball black horse for a ride, and feel that all life's charms have fled when it comes time to drive the cows home. And he'll turn a ten acre lot upside down for ten inches of angle worms, and wish for the voiceless tomb when the garden demands his attention. But all the same, when you want a friend who will stand by you and sympathize with you and be true to you in all kinds of weather, enlist one of those same boys.

ATTENTION VETERANS!—After rations, every man of you should take one of Cobb's Little Podophyllin Pills. They will cure you of that trouble in your digestive organs, which the exposures of the late War left to harass you. 25 cents per bottle. For sale by R. E. Phillips.

Some New Geography.

"Of what is the surface of the earth composed?"

"Of corner lots, mighty poor roads, rail-road tracks, base ball grounds, cricket fields and skating rinks."

"What portion of the globe is water?"

"About three-fourths. Sometimes they add a little gin and nutmeg to it."

"What is a town?"

"A town is a considerable collection of houses and inhabitants, with four or five men who 'run the party' and lend money at fifteen per cent. interest."

"What is a city?"

"A city is an incorporated town, with a Mayor who believes that the whole world shakes when he happens to fall flat on a cross walk."

"What is commerce?"

"Borrowing $5 for a day or two and dodging the lender for a year or two."

"Name the different races."

"Horse race, boat race, bicycle race and racing around to find a man to endorse your note."

"Into how many classes is mankind divided?"

"Six; being enlightened, civilized, half civilized, savage, too utter, not-worth-a-cent and Indian agents."

"What nations are called enlightened?"

"Those which have had the most wars, the worst laws and produced the worst criminals."

"How many motions has the earth?"

"That's according to how you mix your drinks and which way you go home."

"What is the earth's axis?"

"The lines passing between New York and Chicago."

"What causes day and night!"

"Day is caused by night getting tired out. Night is caused by everybody taking the street car and going home to supper."

"What is a map!"

"A map is a drawing to show the jury where Smith stood when Jones gave him a lift under the eye."

"What is a mariner's compass?"

"A jug holding four gallons."

Aphorisms.

Passion makes the will lord of the reason.

True merit is always a little suspicion of praise.

That is the best part of beauty which a picture cannot express.

All men have their imprudent days,

Life is full of bitter lessons, the simplest of which is that one man's fall makes forty men laugh.

If anything is possible for man, and peculiar to him, think that this can be attained by thee.

We cannot too soon convince ourselves how easily we may be dispensed with in this world of others,

A cheerful face is neerly as good for an invalid as healthy weather. To make a sick man think he is dying, all that is necessary is to look half dead yourself.

It is generally safe to converse freely with an unreserved talker, but when a man lets you carry on all the conversation it is well to be on your guard, for the probability is, he is taking your measure.

Building air-castles is a harmless business so long as you don't attemp to live in them.

Men owe their resolution, and most of their success, to the opposition they meet with.

The smaller the calibre of mind the greater the bore of a perpetually open mouth.

THE INCONSISTENCY OF MAN.

Scheming, diverse, and manifold advertisements of worthless goods will never attract profitable customers, only meritorous articles such as Swayne's Ointment for skin diseases are sought after by the people. Real worth always receives its just merit. A man may profit for a while by imposing upon the public, but it is only a question of time when he will reach the end of his rope. Man has never dared to doubt the efficancy of this great vegetable Ointment.

No piece of art in America has charmed Oscar Wilde more than the picture on the back of Uncle Samuel's hundred-dollar bills.

An Ex-Consul's Story.

To the Editor of The Brooklyn Eagle:

A late United States Consul at one of the English inland posts, who is now a private resident of New York, relates the following interesting story. He objects, for private reasons, to having his name published, but authorizes the writer to substantiate his statement, and, if necessary, to refer to him, in his private capacity, any person seeking such reference. Deferring to his wishes, I hereby present his statement in almost the exact language in which he gave it to me.

C. M. FARMER,
1690 Third Avenue, New York.

"On my last voyage home from England, some three years ago, in one of the Cunard steamers, I noticed one morning, after a few days out of port, a young man hobbling about on the upper deck, supported by crutches and seeming to move with extreme difficulty and no little pain. He was well dressed and of exceedingly handsome countenance, but his limbs were somewhat emaciated and his face was very sallow and bore the traces of long suffering. As he seemed to have no attendant or companion, he at once attracted my sympathies and I went up to him as he leaned against the taffrail looking out on the foaming track which the steamer was making.

"Excuse me, my young friend,' I said, touching him gently on the arm, 'you appear to be an invalid and hardly able or strong enough to trust yourself unattended on an ocean voyage; but if you require any assistance I am a robust and healthy man and shall be glad to help you.'

'You are very kind,' he replied, in a weak voice, 'but I require no present aid beyond my crutches, which enable me to pass from my stateroom up here to get the benefit of the sunshine and the sea breeze.'

'You have been a great sufferer, no doubt,' I said, 'and I judge that you have been afflicted with that most troublesome disease, rheumatism, whose prevalence and intensity seem to be on the increase both in England and America.'

'You are right' he answerd; 'I have been its victim for more than a year, and after failing to find relief from medical skill have lately tried the Springs of Carlsbad and Vichy. But they have done me no good, and am now on my return home to Missouri to die. I suppose. I shall be content if life is spared to me to reach my mother's presence. She is a widow and I am her only child.'

"There was a pathos in his speech which affected me profoundly and awaken'd in me a deeper sympathy than I had felt before. I had no words to answer him, and stood silently beside him watching the snowy wake of the ship. While thus standing my thoughts reverted to a child—a ten year old boy—of a neighbor of mine residing near by my consulate residence, who had been cured of a stubborn case of rheumatism by the use of St. Jacobs Oil, and I remembered that the steward of the ship had told me the day before that he had cured himself of a very severe attack of the gout in New York just before his last voyage by the use of the same remedy. I at once left my young friend and went below to find the steward. I not only found him off duty, but found he had a bottle of St Jacobs Oil in his locker, which he had carried across the ocean in case of another attack. He readily parted with it on my representation, and hurrying up again, I soon persuaded the young man to allow me to take him to his berth and apply the remedy. After doing so I covered him up snugly in bed and requested him not to get up until I should see him again. That evening I returned to his stateroom and found him sleeping peacefully and breathing gently. I roused him and asked him how he felt. 'Like a new man,' he answered with a grateful smile. 'I feel no pain and am able to stretch my limbs without difficulty. I think I'll get up.' 'No, don't get up to-night, I said, 'but let me rub you again with the Oil, and in the morning you will be able to go above.' 'All right,' he said laughing. 'I then applied the Oil again, rubbing up his knees, ankles and arms thoroughly, until he said he felt as if he had a mustard poultice all over his body. I then left him. The next morning when I went on deck for a breezy promenade, according to my custom, I found my patient waiting for me with a smiling face, and without his crutches, although he limped in his movements, but without pain. I don't think I ever felt so happy in my life. To make a long story short, I attended him closely during the rest of the voyage—some four days—applying the Oil every night, and guarding him against too much exposure to the fresh and damp breezes, and on landing at New York, he was able, without assistance to mount the hotel omnibus, and go to the Astor House. I called on him two days later and found him actually engaged in packing his trunk, preparatory to starting West for his home, that evening. With a bright and grateful smile he welcomed me, and pointing to a little box carefully done up in a thick brown paper, which stood upon the table, he said: 'My good friend, can you guess what that is? 'A present for your sweetheart,' I answered. 'No,' he laughed—'that is a dozen bottles of St. Jacobs Oil, which I have just purchased from Hudnut, the druggist, across the way, and I am taking them home to show [illegible]

RESCUED FROM DEATH

William J. Coughlin of Somerville, Mass, says: In the fall of 1876 I was taken with bleeding of the lungs followed by a severe cough. I lost my appetite and flesh and was confied to my bed. In 1877 I was admitted to the hospital. The doctors said I had a hole in my lung as big as a half dollar. A one time a report went around that I was dead. It gave up hope, but a friend told me of DR WILLIAM HALL'S BALSAM FOR THE LUNGS. I got a bottle, when to my surprise I began to feel better, and to-day I feel better than for three years past.

"I write this hoping every one afflicted with diseased Lungs will take DR WILLIAM HALL'S BALSAM, and be convinced that CONSUMPTION CAN BE CURED. I can positively say it has done more good than all the other medicines I have taken since my sickness.

How to Secure Health.

It seems strange that any one will suffer from derangements brought on by impure blood, when Scovill's Sarsaparilla and Stillingia, or Blood and Liver Syrup will restore health to the physical organization. It has been proven to be the best blood purifier eve discovered, curing scrofula, syphilitic disorders, weakness of the kidneys, erysipelas, ~~malaria, nervous~~ disorders, debility billious complaints, and all diseases of the blood, liver, kidneys, stomach, skin etc. A single bottle will prove a health renewer, for it acts like a charm, especially when the complaint is of an exhaustive nature.

THE INDEPENDENT.

"The foremost religious newspaper of the United States."—The Rev Joseph Cook.

Established in 1848, as an advocate of anti-slavery and of reforms in religion and politics, the independent once became a recognized power throughout the country. Its influence has ever since been constantly growing. As it has fought against slavery and for cheap postage, so it will fight against Mormanism, for Civil Service Reform, and for purity in politics, and general uprightness in all things. It employs the best editorial talent and speaks fearlessly on all subjects. It pays for contributed articles and for editorial services more than double the amount paid by any other weekly newspaper.

It publishes more religious discussions than the religious reviews, and more poetry and stories popular monthlies, and gives more information than an annual cyclopedia. The long cable dispatches recently published from the great Methodist Council in London are a good illustration of what the Independent is constantly doing. A list of the most prominent religious and philosophical writers, poets and story writers in the country is the list of the contributors of the Independent. Besides the space set aside for these writers and for editorials, there are twenty-two distinct departments, edited by twenty-two specialists, which include Biblical Research, Sanitary, Legal, Fine Arts, Music, Science Pebbles, Personalities, Hymn Notes, School and College, Literature, Religious Inteligence, Missions, Sunday School, News of the Week, Finance, Insurance, Stories, puzzles, and Agriculture. 32 pages in all.

Home and Tuition	44 00
Board and Tuition (short week)	36 00

Other branches at Moderate Rates.

Next Term begins Monday, March 27th. The school is designed for those wishing to make rapid progress in their lessons. To this end the classes are small, so that each pupil may have individual attention. No student is required to wait on another but passes from one class to another so soon as qualified. Small schools, select in their character, are a great advantage to the timid and backward pupil. The charges are very low for the advantages offered. Boarders are received in the family of the Principal at very low rates. Apply to the REV. JAMES GILMOUR.

Wives.

"A good wife gear enow,
An ill wife is an ill fate."
[Scotch Proverbs.

Oh he that gets a good, good wife,
Gets gold enough and to spare;
And he that gets an ill, ill wife,
May make and may still be bare.
For a man may ask of a wife he weds,
"Can I be rich? May I be great?"
And he that mates with an evil wife,
He mates with an evil fate.

For a man may spend, and have to the end,
If his wife on his fortune wait,
He may give to the poor and help a friend,
And may still grow rich and great.
But a man may spare and still be bare,
He may toil through smooth and rough,
If his wife be naught, ill luck is caught,
He will never have enough.

Oh a man that gets a good, good wife,
Has pleasure enough and to spare;
Outside his life may be full of strife,
May be full of trouble and care,
But his heart can sing—"At home I'm king,
At home there is pleasure and rest,
I've a wife to bide at my own fireside,
And her love, of all loves, is best."

But a man who gets an ill, ill wife,
Gets trouble of every kind;
He's a weary part, and a hopeless heart,
And prosperity's hard to find.
There's a bitter drop in his sweetest cup,
In his joy there is a pain,
And through all his strife for a broader life,
He works like a man in a chain.

Don't marry for beauty, don't marry for gold
And on nobody else depend;
For your own life, you choose a wife,
And for your own home a friend.
And he that gets a good, good wife,
May easy be rich and great,
While he that weds with an evil wife,
Mates life with an evil fate.

Florence Nigthingale.

BY G. W. HUGHES.

Our heroine was the daughter of an English gentleman, and was born beneath the sunny skies of Italy, in Florence, the Mecca of artists throughout the world.

Her character was always lovely and at times mysteriously sublime. Her childhood was marked by extraordinary facility in learning, which was fostered with peculiar care, as her parents were both wealthy and cultivated. She became a proficient scholar in the classics, in mathematics, and in natural sciences. She enjoyed the advantages of foreign travel, as well as the best instruction.

When a mere child she sympathized with the sick and suffering and had generous impulses towards the infirm and aged. To know her was to love her. It might be said of her like Milton's Eve:

"Grace in her steps, Heaven in her eye,
In every gesture dignity and love."

She was only twenty-one years of age when she first investigated the sanitary condition of hospitals. From that time she visited most of the civil and military hospitals in Europe and suggested many important reforms. She might have spent a life of ease and luxury at her home in England, but the true womanly spirit within her would not permit her to be a drone in this busy world. For several months she was at Kaiserwerth, on the Rhine, where protestant sisters of mercy are taught to nurse the sick in a proper manner, and here she acquired a knowledge which in years afterwards proved a blessing to suffering humanity.

When she returned to England she assumed charge of the sanitarium for governesses in London, which greatly increased in efficiency during the time she was superintendent. After she had returned to her quiet home in Derbyshire and had lived a while in comparative seclusion, clouds of war were seen gathering in the political sky of Europe, and at last settled in a dark mass over the peninsula of Crimea. Turkey and her English and French allies had invaded the dominions of the czar, to stem the swelling tide of Russian aggression, and never was there a more desperate and bloody war.

The nations of the world looked on with deep interest and well they might for the contest was between four of the renowned nations in Europe.

At last the cry came from the east "Are there devoted women in protestant England to do for the British soldier what the sisters of charity do for the French army?" Miss Nightingale offered at once to go. She started on her mission of mercy to the Crimea, accompanied by a band of noble women whom she had inspired with her own noble spirit. Their coming cheered the desponding hearts of the sick soldiers. Providence always produces the right [illegible] at the right time. Rumor [illegible] were a disgrace to any [illegible] and the [illegible] were found attending to the wants of the sick and dying.

She assumed charge of the hospital where there were two thousand patients, and made speedy perparations to receive the wounded from the field of Inkermann, and for twelve hours without rest or relaxation, moved about on her angelic mission. The spring of 1855 she spent in Crimea organizing camp hospitals and a more efficient nursing department. Weakened with care and worn with weary watching she was prostrated with fever; but her energy of mind was superior to bodily infirmities, and she still continued to give directions concerning the care of the sick and wounded.

The queen gratefully recognizing her services, sent her a letter, and presented her with a beautiful and costly jewel. This, however, was only a shadow of a higher approval and nobler reward on that day when all human conduct shall pass in review before the King of Kings and Lord of Lords. The soldiers raised a fund to erect a monument in her honor, but she declined the distincton, preferring a living monument of grateful hearts, which is more beautiful and more enduring than marble. She desired the fund to be used for benevolent purposes. The names of brave men who scaled the towers of Reden and Malakoff, and the other names fill the world with wonder, but more glorious than these will appear the self denying action of Florence Nightingale who left the refinements of home, not to acquire fame, but to do good. She sought no applause but refused the honors of a grateful nation. Quietly she retired to her home, though the hand of royalty offered her a title of nobility.

Miss Nightingale's character is remarkable not only for positive qualities, but for the rare combination of seemingly opposite traits. Force and executive ability are often accompanied by at least a semblance of sternness. Amiability and gentleness are often accompanied by a want of power and energy. Her charcter was amiable without weakness and strong without severity. Seldom are sweetness of disposition and strength of will so harmoniously blended that each is heightened by contrast with the other. Invitations to spend her remaining days in the glitter and pageantry of regal life, had no charms for her. But in her own quiet home she communed with the unseen; and finally she is laid away in the church yard near her home, while the morning star of the resurrection trembles on a brightening sky.

Before Matches were Made.

People who light their pipes, cigars or lamps or kindle their fires by the instantaneous ignition of friction matches, have, unless they are old people, very little conception of the labor and tribulation attending upon the same process fifty years ago. Every well regulated family at that time was provided with a tin box of tinder, produced by a combustion of rags and a flint of steel, and matches which had been dipped in brimstone. When fire was wanted, the flint and steel and tinder was produced. And the tinder being ignited sparks were precipitated from the steel by means of the flint, a match was touched to the burning mass, and being lighted was applied to some prepared kindlings, and a fire thus produced. The whole process occupying from five to fifteen minutes, according to the skill or luck of the oprator. This was attended with so much labor, and productive at times of the use of so many naughty words on the part of the persons operating, that fires were generally kept all night. This was done—there were few stoves and hard coal had not come into very general use then—by covering the huge and blazing black-log in the fireplace with ashes, and in the morning there was generally found in its place a bed of live coals, which, by the application of fresh wood, and with the aid of the then universal bellows, usually produced a blazing fire in from 15 minutes to half an hour. Sometimes, however from some cause, the back-log would be wholly consumed, leaving nothing but a bed of ashes. In this case, particularly if there was an absence of dry kindling in the house, some member of the family must take the shovel, and oftimes through snow, knee deep, trudge to the nearest neighbor's, 'after fire.' And, sometimes indeed, the nearest neighbor's fire would be out, too, in which case the walk would have to be extended until the fire was procured. The live coals were borne home on a shovel, often carefully guarded with the hand to prevent blowing off, placed between two brands, the bellows set vigorously at work, and the fire thus set blazing. In lighting a candle a live coal was taken up with a pair of tongs and blown upon with the mouth until a blaze was produced. Pipes were lighted by placing a life coal on top of the tobacco, and cigars by holding the burning coal to the end and puffing with all one's might.

The first improvement on this in New England was the substitution of a bottle of phosphorus, into which, the cork being removed, a brimstone match was thrust, and being thus ignited the bottle was quickly closed, in order to retain [illegible] as much in the shade as the other had the flint and steel. This was the application of a preparation of phosphorus and brimstone to the tips of matches, which only required to be drawn between the leaves of a piece of folded sand paper to produce a light, so that the smoker had only to carry his matches in one vest pocket and his folded sand-paper in the other to light his pipe at any moment. These later were known as "Lucifer matches," as partaking, it is presumed, of the character of the scriptural "son of the morning." But the spirit of invention was not satisfied to stop here, and the result was, the present world used friction matches, that alike serve all people, and the making of which at the present time, in all probability consumes almost as much wood as there was burned by the United States for all the purposes of warming and cooking a century ago.

The Horrors of Sing Sing.

E. R. Campbell, ex-keeper of Sing-Sing, publishes a statement declaring that the prison is run in the interest of contractors. He states that but little religous or moral instruction is provided for the convicts. A third of the prisoners never go to church at all, and many are compelled to work in their shops on sundays. Campbell alleges that Joe Coburn, the prize fighter, is treated with distinguished consideration and holds the position of runner in the mess room, while there are hundreds of cripples and consumptives, any of whom are able and would be glad to do this work. On the other hand gentleman Joe (the blackmailer) being unable to do some hard work given him, was paddled and deprived of food until broken down. He applied for admission to the hospital, but was refused, and died the same night, having been in prison only a few months. Campbel also says Polkato, the convict was driven insane by ill treatment. Being noisy he was knocked down by a stream from a hose, beaten unmercifully, and afterwards taken to Auburn asylum. William C, Brandon was compelled to work at the emery wheel tho' he had a terrible cough and frequent hemorrage of the lungs. He died after being in prison three years. Edward Young, colored, aged 16, unable to do hard tasks, was dungeoned, paddled and deprived of food, and died in a few weeks. Robert West, an old man was badly ruptured and also overworked and denied medical treatment till he died. William Thompson worked in the foundry eleven years and his constitution was shattered. The keeper refused to let him off for a day. The next morning he was unable to leave his cell. He was locked up in a cold cell two days before he was taken to the hospital, where he soon died. John Fox a boy, was placed in a foundry, and tho' suffering from consumption, was repeatedly punished untill he became a pitable object. Appeals to the doctor had no effect. One night Fox, in his cell called for the doctor, declaring that he was dying. The guard merely swore at him. In the morning Fox was found dead. Campbell gives a number of other instances of alleged inhuman treatment of convicts and says; "The foregoing are but a few of the cruelties practiced in Sing Sing. I could write a chapter about men who attempt suicide and the horrible tortures that led them to it."

Cranks.

'Am dar' a crank present in de hall tonight?' softly asked brother Gardner as the meeting opened.

Not a voice answered.

"Have any one of you seen a crank aroun' town dis las' week?" continued the president.

Not one had, or at least no one admitted it.

"Two weeks ago de kentry was full of 'em. You could find 'em on de street kyar, at do depot, around de hotels, an' eben in church. All of a sudden you can't skeer up a single crank. De bizness has got to be unhealthy. De plea of insanity doan' go down wid de jury as slick as it did. De time when one man can put a knife in anodder an' make de jury believe he was bo'n dat way and couldn't help it has 'bout expired. The crank mus' go. He mus' quit shootin', stabbin', stealin' an' bein' heard of in de land. When de crank fust brought for'd de idea dat de Deity was behind him an' urged him on, it was sunthin' new and novel, but dat idea am played out wid de rest.

"My frens, let de cantankerous bizness alone. Doan' call stealin' by any odder name. If your hands itch fur money dat belongs to some one else, take it and skip, an' when de law overhauls you doan' sot up de plea dat an angel from Heaven urged you on. Legal farces have had deir day in dis kentry. Insanity, kleptomania, sudden emotion, drunkenness and loss o' memory will be poo' excuses befor fuchur juries."

JUDGE MEN BY THEIR WORKS.

A man is jugded in this life by his works, and in this connection it may not be inopportune to add, that Dr. Swayne has accomplished more good through the medium of his Ointment for skin diseases, than has the entire school of physicains combined. "It is an ill wind that blows nobody good." What the physicians have lost Dr. Swayne has gained.

A Tobacco Chewer's Mistake.

One of the Senators elected by the Democrats of New Jersey at the last election was when a boy, a resident of Newark and has a number of friends in that section, whom he used, some years ago to visit occasionally. On one of these visits he spent the evening with an old friend who then lived on South Main street. The friend was as strong a Republican as the New Jersey man was a Democrat, and they rarely got together without falling into a heated discussion over the merits of each party. It was so on this occasion. They both sat in the dining room and argued and argued. The wife of the Republican was present, engaged in knitting. It was not at all likely she heard any of the argument. When watching her needles she peered over her glasses at the floor, the walls and stove. It was a very clean, tidy and cosy apartment. There was not a loose thread to be seen on the carpet, not a speck of dirt on the walls, not a particle of dust about the stove. Justly the woman prided herself on the perfection of her domestic arrangements. She was neatness personified. There was a door that lead from the room to the yard. The New Jersey Senator bore this in mind, and when he got advanced well in his argument he primed his mouth with a goodly charge of tobacco. The door he designed for a cuspadore, as there was none other prepared by the careful housewife. Her husband not being a chewer. As the argument advanced and heated the man from Jersey increased the ardor of his chewing. As the liquid formed in his mouth sufficiently to impair the thought, he would open the door, eject the surplus, resume his chair, and continue. He had repeated this performance several times, when the attention of the hostess fell away from a contemplation of the neatness and brightness of her handiwork and alighted upon him. The color suddenly left her face, and almost immediately charged back again, making her cheeks glow with scarlet. She saw him get up and fire out the door again, watching his every motion with a fascinated gaze, but seemingly unable to speak. Again she saw him go through the performance, and then, while her knitting fell from her nerveless fingers, she gasped:

"Mr. C., do you know where you are spitting?"

"Certainly, out in the yard," replied Mr. C.

"No you aint," she cried out. "you're spitting in my parlor."

Surely enough Mr. C. had got hold of the wrong door, and had been unconsciously fireing away into the parlor, as a light brought too plainly revealed.

The affairs of the nation were permitted to drift away from Mr. C.'s mind the balance of the evening. [Newark Call.

Time for Men to Fly.

"There is no question about it," said Mr. Crandall, the inventor, as he sat in his mechanical study in Brooklyn, at work upon something new. "A flying-machine can be constructed, and as soon as I get to my mark in money-making I am going to construct one. I am sure I can do it. Of course the bird is the model, just as the fish is the model for a boat. My notion is to make a body, egg shaped, out of rawhide, drawn over a model and formed when wet, and to suspend it beneath two large wings of papier-mache. These wings, of course, will be made like a bird's. It has often puzzled me to know how a bird, after making its first leap from the ground, mounted higher and higher. I have, I am sure, discovered the mechanical method, and I provide for it by fitting the wings [illegible] the machine. A bird can turn its wings at any angle. The man in my flying-machine can do the same thing by pressing upon pedals in the bottom of his boat. He can thus have perfect control of his course, and can shape it to any point of the compass."

"What would be your motive power?"

Electricity. I would run the wings by an electric engine operating a crank in the middle of the boat. I calculate that the rawhide boat would not weigh over ten pounds, and that the electric engine would be of about the same weight. The wings would be about fifteen feet long, and the speed of the machine would depend upon the velocity at which these wings may be worked. See what a weight in body the gossamer wings of a humming bird carry or the wings of a bumble bee. Yet they fly at great speed because they move their wings with great rapidity. I think that with batteries of bottled electricity and the tiny electric engine of great power the flying-machine is taken out of the category of dreams and appeals to the inventive faculties of practical men.

"I believe that before another century is gone by men may have flying-machines on their housetops in Brooklyn, that they can take a seat in them, turn a tiny switch, and put their feet upon their pedals, unfold a morning paper, and cross over to New York with as little concern as they now feel in a ferry-boat, or as they may sometime, sooner or later, feel on the bridge. The plan is made, and I am not ready yet to begin it. Perhaps some other inventor will take it up." [N. Y. Sun.

PILES! PILES!! PILES!!!

A SURE CURE FOUND AT LAST. NO ONE NEED SUFFER

A sure cure for the Blind, Bleeding, Itching and Ulcerated Piles has been discovered by Dr. Williams, [illegible] Indian remedy, called Dr. William's Indian Ointment. A single box has cured the worst chronic cases of 25 and 30 years standing. No one need suffer five minutes after applying this wonderful soothing medicine. Lotions, instruments, and electuaries do more harm than good. William's Ointment absorbs the tumors, allays the intense itching (particularly at night after getting warm in bed), acts as a poultice, gives instant and painless relief, and is prepared only for Piles, itching of the private parts, and nothing else.

Read what the Hon. J. M. Coffinberry, of Cleveland, says about Dr. William's Indian Pile Ointment: I have used scores of pile cures, and it affords me pleasure to say that I have never found anything which gave such immediate and permanent relief as Dr William's Indian Pile Ointment.

ROSCOE CONKLING has been rewarded by President Arthur with a nomination to be associate justice of the supreme court of the United States. Mr. Conkling is reticent regarding the favor and has not yet expressed a willingness to accept or refuse.

THE Sprague divorce suit which has occasioned so much talk in the country is settled, for the present at least. Mrs. Sprague is to have the two daughters and the governer the boy Willie. The disposition of the old shot gun has not been formally announced.

NEW YORK is enjoying another walking tourney. At midnight Sunday ten contestants entered the ring for a six days contest. It is claimed that some 10,000 people were present at the hour of starting. Rowell, Hughes, Hart and several well known pedestrians are in the race. At last accounts Rowell was well ahead of his competitors.

JOHNSON, republican clerk of the assembly, feels grateful to Tammany for the part they played in electing him. Of the thirty-three appointments made by clerk Johnson to clerkships, pages ect, fourteen are Tammany men's boys. The assembly librarian and assistant librarian and three of the deputy clerks are conspicuous Tammany politicians.

The men in New York state who so nobly responded to our country's call for more men—when they were drafted—are forming a league throughout the state to support no candidate for the legislature who will not pledge himself to a bill to refer the subject of their reimbursement to the tax-payers. They want a bill passed authorizing towns and cities to equalize the bounties paid under the first draft with those afterward made. Oswego county has about 400 drafted men within its borders and they are getting ready to stir themselves.

A CONVENTION of the superintendents of county poor in this State will be held in Albany, March 14. It is claimed that Europe is emptying her poor houses and asylums into New York city, and naturally they wander into the interior counties and become public burdens and as a consequence the people are taxed beyond endurance for their support. The State is powerless to prevent the increasing pauper and criminal immigration. The superintendents, on behalf of their constituents, are urged to attend this convention, in order to devise methods for impressing upon congress the necessity of a national immigration law.

THE Senate has passed the bill placing Mr. Grant upon the retired list with rank and pay of a major-general $13,500 per year. Mr. Grant is a private citizen and the retired list of the U. S. army was created for officers who had become incapacitated through service in behalf of their country. Is this the case with Mr. Grant? The right to place him there is sincerely questioned by nine-tenths of the people of this country and justly too. The House will undoubtedly concur with the Senate and pass the bill. The pension act in America is becoming sadly perverted and a poor, crippled, meritorious veteran finds hard work in many instances to have his claim for assistance even entertained.

MONDAY was observed as memorial day in all the principal cities and towns throught the union. Mr. Blane's oration at the capitol, on Monday in eulogy of the late President Garfield, was not unworthy the solemn occasion. It was an earnest, carefully prepared and scholarly production, not, perhaps, attaining the higher plane of oratorical grandeur; but eloquent and impressive. Nothing less was to have been expected from one well practiced in the art of addressing [illegible] assemblages; for the theme was in [illegible] an inspiration to mental effort, [illegible] Mr. Blaine's intimate relations, so[illegible] and politically, with Mr. Garfield [illegible] character to qualify him for [illegible] of paying this formal tribute to [illegible] memory of his murdered friend and [illegible]sman.

Saturday morning Mrs. Theodore Cook of Constantia Centre, was suddenly siezed with bleeding at the nose, and for six hours all efforts to check it were unavailing. When finally checked she was so weak that restoratives were administrated.

Appointing M. A. Guthrie postmaster in Hannibal has cut the republican party in twain in that town. Tallman, stalwart, present supervisor, is going to contest in the caucus Saturday with Barrett, half-breed, for the nomiuation. The democrats imagine they can elect their supervisor this spring.

Clarence Snow, of Norwich, extra brakeman on the way freight, had his left hand crushed while coupling cars at Constantia last Thursday morning. Doctors Whyborn and Potter of Cleveland amputated the hand at the wrist joint. He was making a trip for one of the regular men who was laying off.

"Dick" Quigg, an old Oswego canal groceryman, has commenced an action in the supreme court against Sophia Rozelle of Oswego. From the complaint it appears that the action is brought to recover $5,000 damages for enticing away Augusta Quigg, wife of the plaintiff, and his daughter Sarah Quigg, and causing them to abandon their home and lead a life of shame.

James O'Brien lost a valuable cow a few days ago. She was found dead in the barn one morning. Mr. O'Brion and family have been sadly afflicted of late in the loss of six of his children by diphtheria, and the loss of properuy is an added weight to their burden; yet the burden is doubtless somewhat lightened by the substantial tokens of sympathy they have received.

Mr. Chamberlin of St Lawrence county has introduced the following bill in the Assembly:

Sec. 1. Whoever shall dilute with water or in any way adulterate or take any cream from any milk, or keep back any part known as "strippings" of any milk, which shall thereafter be sold supplied or delivered to be manufactured to any butter or cheese factory in this State without the knowledge or consent of all the patrons of said factory, or whoever shall with the intent to defraud, sell, supply, or deliver to be manufactured to any butter or cheese factory in this State, any milk which has been diluted with water, or in any way adulterated, or from which any cream has been taken, or from which any part has been kept back known as "strippings," shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof, shall be punished by a fine of not less than $20, or by imprisonment in a county jail for not less than thirty days or more than ninety days, or by both such fine and imprisonment for each and every offence.

Sec. 2. This act shall take effect immediately.

Rules for Lenten Season.

Bishop McNeirny has issued the following circular, which was read last Sunday in all the Catholic churches of the Albany diocese:

1. All the week days of Lent, from Ash Wednesday till Easter Sunday are fast days of precept, on one meal, with the allowance of a moderate collation in the evening.
2. The precept of fasting implies also that of abstinence from the use of flesh meat. But by dispensation, the use of flesh meat is allowed in this diocese at the principal meals on Mondays, Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays of Lent, with the exception of Holy Thursday and the second and last Saturdays of Lent.
3. There is neither fast nor abstinence to be observed on Sundays of Lent.
4. It is not allowed to use fish with flesh meat at the same meal in Lent.
5. The church tolerates the custom, which was obtained here, of using eggs, butter or cheese.
6. Necessity and custom have authorized the use of lard instead of butter in preparing fish, vegetables, etc.
7. The church excuses from the obligation of fasting (but not of abstinence from flesh meat, except in special cases of sickness or the like) the following classes of persons: First, the infirm; second, those whose duties are of an exhausting character; third, persons who are attaining their growth; fourth, women in pregnancy or nursing infants; fifth, those who are enfeebled by old age.

CORPORAL.

The Burt Road in Trouble.

The New York Sun of yesterday says the Attorney-General, in the name of the people of the State of New York, has instituted a suit against the Boston, Hoosac Tunnel and Western Railway Company to annul its corporate existence and wind up its affairs. The grounds of the Attorney-General's complaint are that the scheme violates the laws of the State, which do not allow the consolidation of "paper railways" not constructed or even located, nor of crossing and diverging lines forming no continuous or connecting route. It is alleged by the attorney general that the company exceeded its powers and exercised forbidden franchises by executing a mortgage for the security of such bonds, upon local railroads belonging to other corporations, in which roads the Burt company has no interest or title. This security, it is claimed, is illusive and deceptive, and its creation an offense against the statutes, justly forfeiting the existence of the company, if it ever had a lawful existence. The venue is laid in Onondaga county, and it is said the case will be brought to trial at once. The papers were served in New York and Boston yesterday.

HAMLET PRINCE OF DENMARK.

The illustrious bard of Avon is being honored with still another edition of his works, and this time it is one that will delight not only the rich, who are pleased to adorn their libraries with beautiful books, but also the millions of book-buyers, to whom the possession of a handsome edition of Shakespeare has heretofore been impossible, on account of the high cost. We have received from The Useful Knowledge Publishing Company a charming little volume containing "Hamlet Prince of Denmark", 148 pages beautiful, leaded type, excellent paper, and tasteful cloth binding, which they sell for 20 cents! They are issuing his complete dramatic works in 10 handy "Elzevir" volumes uniform with this, for the amazing low price 25 cents per volume, and will publish a "Red-Line Elzevir" edition, gilt edges richly ornamented in black and gold, in ten volumes all for $4.50. This Company announces a large number of standard and exceedingly valuable publications, excellent in quality in every way, at prices such as the world has never before seen. Specimen pages and catalogues will be sent upon application by postal card to The Useful Knowledge Publishing Company 162 William Street New York City.

THE CENTURY MAGAZINE.

The Century Magazine for March has for its frontispiece a portrait of W. D. Howells, the popular novelist. "From Morelia to Mexico on Horseback" is an entertaining account of an interesting tour, the admirable illustrations being by the auther. Another illustrated paper is "A Ramble in Old Philadelphia" by Elizabeth Robins. The gypsy episode in it is capital. Other illustrated articles are "Opera in New York," the first of a series by Richard Grant White; "The Black Bear," by Charles C. Ward; "The Danish Skate Sail," by T. F. Hammer; "Some of the Union League decorations." Perhaps the most taking paper of the number is Mary Cowden Clark's reminiscences of Leigh Hunt. Other valuable articles are "The copyright Negotiations," by A. G. Sedgwick; "William Dean Howells," by Thomas Sargent Perry and "Has Utah a Republican form of Government?" by Allen G. Cambell. The serial novels of Mrs. Burnett and Mr. Howells are continued; the poets of the number are Margaret J. Preston, D. L. Proudfit, W. F. Smyth, Mary W. Plummer and Ella C. White, and the editorial departments are full of good material. "Home and society" begins an elaborate series of illustrated papers on home construction, which has a practical value.

ECLECTIC MAGAZINE.

The March number of the Eclectic is at hand and presents a copious array of interesting articles. The table of contents is as follows: "The Biologists on Vivisection," by R. H. Hutton; "Morley's Life of Cobden," by A. J. Balfour, M. P.; "How the Stars Got their names;" "At Anchor," by the author of "Consolations;" "The Retreat of the European Glaciers," by Professor C. Dufor; "Westminster Abbey," a poem by Matthew Arnold; "Inside Kairwan: The Holy City;" "A Gondolier's Wedding;" "A bit of Loot;" "Pococurantism;" "The Seed-Time of Health," by Dr. B. W. Richardson; "Note on the character of Mary Queen of Scots," by Algernon Charles Swinburne; "Photographic Chronicles from Childhood to Age," by Francis Galton; "Winter: An Elegy," by J. Logie Robertson; "How I married him" edited by Wilkie Collins; "Jenner and his Successors," by Sir J. Risdon Bennett M. D.; "Labedoyere's Doom," by the Rev. Malcolm MacColl; "Finance West of the Atlantic;" "Fashion and Art or Spots on the Sunflower;" Literary Notices; Foreign Literary Notes; Science and Art; and Miscellany.

Published by E. R. Pelton, 25 Bond Street, New York. Terms, $5 per year; single copy, 45 cents; Trial subscription for three months, $1.

THE SUN.
NEW YORK, 1882.

THE SUN for 1882 will make its fifteenth annual revolution under the present management, shining, as always, for all, big and little, mean and gracious, contented and unhappy, Republican and Democratic, depraved and virtuous, intelligent and obtuse. The Sun's light is for mankind and womenkind of every sort; but its genial warmth is for the good, while it pours hot discomfort on the blistering backs of the persistently wicked.

The Sun of 1868 was a newspaper of a new kind. It discarded many of the forms, and a multitude of the superfluous words and phrases of ancient journalism. It undertook to report in a fresh, succinct, unconventional way all the news of the world, omitting no event of human interest, and commenting upon affairs with the fearlessness of absolute independence. The success of this experiment was the success of The Sun. It effected a permanent change in the style of American newspapers. Every important journal established in this country in the dozen years past has been modelled after The Sun. Every important journal already existing has been modified and bettered by the force of the Sun's example.

The Sun of 1882 will be the same outspoken, truthtelling, and interesting newspaper.

By a liberal use of the means which an abundant prosperity affords, we shall make it better than ever before.

We shall print all the news, putting it in readable shape, and measuring its importance, not by the traditional yardstick, but by its real interest to the people. Distance from Printing House Square is not the first consideration with The Sun. Whenever anything happens worth reporting we get the particulars whether it happens in Brooklyn or in Bokhara.

In politics we have decided opinions; and are accustomed to express them in language that can be understood. We say what we think about men and events. That habit is the only secret of succes of The Sun's political course.

The Weekly Sun gathers into eight pages the best matter of the seven daily issues. An Agricultural Department of unequalled merit, full market reports and a liberal proportion of literary scientific and domestic intelligence complete The Weekly Sun, and make it the best newspaper for the farmer's household that was ever printed.

Who does not know and read and like The Sunday Sun, each number of which is a Golconda of interesting literature, with the best poetry of the day, prose every line worth reading, news, humor—matter enough to fill a good sized book, and infinitely more varied and entertaining than any book, big or little?

If our idea of what a newspaper should be pleases you, send for The Sun.

Our terms are as follows:

• For the daily Sun, a four page sheet of twenty-eight columns, the price by mail, post paid, is 55 cents a month, or $6 50 a year; or, including the Sunday paper, an eight page sheet of fifty-six columns, the price is 65 cents per month, or $7 70 a year, postage paid.

Friday morning about one o'clock [illegible] Wilkinson discovered the fire in the east end of the Stephens building, corner of Cayuga and Second streets. An alarm was sounded and the firemen responded as promptly as possible under the circumstances. The night was cold, the water froze and considerable inconvenience was encountered in laying the hose. It was one of the most stubborn fires the department has had to combat with in a long time, but they worked heroically and confined the fire to the building in which it originated.

The upper portion of the building is a wreck from fire and the lower portion made untenable from the great volume of water thrown in.

The basement was occupied by J. D. Patrick as a shoe shop, His goods were removed without any serious loss. No insurance.

Geo. D. Richardson used the first floor fronting on Second street and two-thirds fronting on Cayuga Street as a grocery. A large part of his stock was removed to the Midland freight house. That remaining in the store being a complete loss from smoke and water. His stock was insured for $2,000. He has settled with the insurance company.

The eastern part of the ground floor was occupied by Mrs. A. Clark as a millinery and dress making establishment. This place was entered and many of the goods removed, but cannot be found. Mrs. Clark's loss is variously estimated at from $800 to $1000 with an insurance of $300. This is the second time within four months that Mrs. Clark has experienced severe losses by fire and she has the sympathy of this community.

The second floor was fitted up into tenement rooms and were occupied by Mrs. Alanson Loomis, Mrs. Benjamin Rogers and Mrs. Joseph Lamphere. These families were unable to save any of their household goods. Mrs. Loomis and Rogers escaping without sufficient clothing to protect them from the cold night air. It is really unfortunate for these three ladies, as their possessions are a total loss, none carrying insurance.

The building is owned by Mr. J. J. Stephens, of Washington, D. C., and was insured for $2,000, which amount is thought will hardly place it in good condition. Mr. Stephens will repair the building immediately.

☞ Builders' hardware at prices that defy competition at Sheridan & Baker's.

Evening School.

Prof. Simpson will open a night school in the No 1 school building. A meeting will be held to-morrow evening to perfect arrangements and all wishing to become members may apply to him at the school house. A good opportunity is now offered to any wishing to study the common branches, higher arithmetic book keeping and algebra. A class will also be formed in Latin if desired, Prof. Simpson has made a specialty of book keeping being a graduate of one of the leading commercial colleges in the state. Thorough instruction will be imparted in all studies and those who attend will receive the closest attention. This school will be organized at the request of many anxious to attend school who are busily employed in the daytime.

Fulton has contributed $25.00 towards the $300, Oswego county is to raise for the Garfield monument fund.

Don't forget that Elder receives oysters fresh from the beds every day, and sells them by the pint, quart or gallon.

THE TIMES is under obligation to Hon. J. D. Lasher for the annual report of the superintendent of public instruction for the year 1881.

J. D. Patrick, shoemaker, has removed his shop from the basement of the Stephens building to the rear of Whitaker's meat market. Bring on your work.

Mr. Harry J. Baker will remain in the hardware store of J. H. Woodin, and invites his patrons to give him a call. He will be in readiness to attend to their wants with promptness.

Yesterday was Mrs. Wm. Hornibrook's birthday. A very acceptable present was received in the household in the shape of a plump little boy weighing ten pounds. May he live to become president.

The patrons of the South Granby cheese factory are requested to meet at the factory March 15th, 1882, at 2 P. M., to elect officers for the ensuing year and transact other business as may come before the meeting.

A meeting of the Granby Sunday School Union will be held at Dexterville next Sunday at 2 p. m. Questions pertaining to vital Sabbath school work will be in order and answered by the convention. It is hoped that the Rev. Mr. Smith, of Fulton, and others will be present.
D. M. Cox, Pres.

KUM! KUM!

The Aesthetic Festival under the auspices of the ladies of the Universalist society, will be held at Nichols hall, March 8, 1882. Oscar Wilde and his retinue will be present. Somethings that most every fellah don't know will be made perceptible.

Coffee and lunch 15 cents, ice cream 10 cents. Admission to hall 10 cents.

Mrs. T. G. Snodgrass a former Fulton lady will open a class in Kensington work at the Decorative Art Rooms in Syracuse to-day where she will be pleased to see all who may call. Mrs. Snodgrass has just returned from New York with a large assortment of all kinds of material for this work, also a large variety of new and beautiful designs for stamping.

Miss Libbie L. Hill, daughter of Mr. W. W. Hill, of this village, was united in marriage at the residence of her parents, on Emory street, Monday, Feb'y 20, to Mr. R. N. Cross, of Jordan, N. Y., Rev. J. S. Riggs, of the Presbyterian church, executing the ceremony. After receiving the congratulations of the many friends present the company sat down and discussed a richly spread collation. Mr. and Mrs. Cross were also the recipients of many valuable and substantial gifts. They have taken up their residence in Jordan, where Mr. Cross is employed.

Crossen's combination in "A Celebrated Case" at Nichols Hall to-morrow evening.

The Utica Herald says "Crossen's New York Combination opened last night to a crowded house. The entertainment justifies the comments of the eastern press. Every man, woman and child who was there spent the most part of last evening and the greater part of to-day telling how things were conducted by this excellent company. Mr. Crossen's acting last evening could not be excelled—it was admirable. His Jean Renaud is, by all odds, the most finished and artistic representation of that character it has ever been our good fortune to witness; and it is but saying the simple truth to assert that we never saw on any stage, a play acted so well in all its parts."

Tickets 50 and 75 cents. On sale at Nichols' jewelry store.

The minstrel entertainment at Nichols hall Thursday evening under the auspices of the C. C. & R. R. of Oswego Falls was well patronized, the seating capacity of the hall being overtaxed. For a local amateur minstrel organization they are indeed worthy of special merit. Cullivan was the only professional connected with the affair and he has so improved since last he appeared before a home audience as to be the subject of much favorable comment. The Bramham brothers in their songs and farces were up to the standard. Messrs. Robertshaw and Dixon have grand and effective voices, their ballads being received with favor by the vast audience. Mr. Geo. Clark's ballad "Time may steal the roses," was excellently rendered. Hardy and Cullivan kept the house in a pleasant mood with their inimitable jokes. The clogs and double songs and dances by these two gentlemen were well executed. The entertainment throughout was much better than the average traveling troupe and they are being strongly urged to repeat it.

Saturday evening of this week they will give an exhibition in Howard Opera house, Baldwinsville, and Saturday evening March 11, at Phoenix. We trust they will meet with the same success abroad they have at home.

Notice.

After April 1st, Mrs. A. Clark will open her millinery and dress making rooms [illegible]

[illegible] Beecher [illegible] in Brooklyn [illegible] Mr. Beecher is an ardent admirer of the beautiful in art and nature and [illegible] loves money. As he will scoop in about $3,000 from a two weeks lecturing tour his assertion is certainly worthy of credit. As a writer he occupies a front position in America but as a lecturer he has a myriad of superiors.

Notaries Public.

The following gentlemen have been appointed notaries public in the following towns in Oswego county:

Fulton—Sheldon B. Mead, Henry E. Nichols, Arvin Rice, Slater Laycock, Jonathan H. Case, Clarence W. Streeter, S. N. Dada, Elizur M. Baldwin.

Granby—Salmon B. Dutton, George F. Schenck, Daniel L. Gilbert, Melvin F. Stephens.

Hannibal—David D. Metcalf, Henry M. Barrett.

Hastings—Norman S. Wilson, Jared Mallory.

North Volney—Francis W. Squires.

Oswego Town—John W. Bohannan, L. P. Taylor,

Pennelville—Ambrose Gregg.

Palermo—Oliver P. Jennings, Edwin F. Babcock.

Phœnix—Henry A. Brainard, Lorenzo W. Robinson.

Rosevelt—Erastus Baily.

Scriba—Monroe Hubbard, LeVendee L. Sherman, Clayton R. Parkhurst, E. Clarence Stone.

Political Points.

Vote early and often.

Applications for locks are flowing in. Wait until after the election boys.

C. C. Fuller is reported to have been tendered a position as lumber inspector in Oswego during the coming season.

John Vedder, present supervisor of Granby and Felix Rice of the same town, both democrats, are looking up their chances for the nomination in the caucus Saturday.

The Greenbackers claim they will be able to poll nearly one hundred votes at the ensuing town meeting. They will put a full ticket in the field. No coalesing this spring.

Jefferson Bailey has made an active canvass for the nomination of town collector and unless something unforseen intervenes he will receive the nomination in the republican caucus Saturday.

It seems to be pretty generally conceded that Mr. P. F. Conger will receive an appointment in the Oswego custom house. He is arrayed on the strong side which makes success remarkably easy for some men.

James Mack is soliciting a petition asking for the appointment of captain of the state scow. Whether petitions are important factors in securing an appointment is a debatable question with some of our neighbors.

Timothy Salmon of Lower Oswego Falls has an eye on the custom house. Mr. Salmon would make a good man for any position he might receive, but he has not mingled in politics actively enough to base a claim, so it is said.

Arvin Rice Esq., as supervisor, has attended to the interests of the town of Volney with fidelity and marked ability. There appears to be a willingness among people of all shades of political opinion to return him. He will undoubtedly be the unanimous choice of the republicans at their caucus Saturday, if he will consent to serve another year.

Killed by the Cars.

We learn from this morning's Oswego Express that yesterday afternoon a frightful accident occured at the union depot in Oswego as the 5:30 train on the D. L. & W. was leaving for Syracuse. Michael Burns, had went to the train for the purpose of seeing a friend off. In company with his friend he boarded the train and entered the smoking car. A moment or two was passed there in conversation, when "all aboard" was called by the conductor. Burns delayed leaving till the train commenced moving. He attempted to descend from the rear platform of the car. In doing so, by some means he slipped, and fell beneath the wheels. The unfortunate man fell on the track in such a position that a wheel struck the left arm above the elbow, breaking that member. The upper portion of the thigh next suffered, the wheel striking his body at the hip, producing a compound fracture, and passing along mashed the knee and leg terribly. He was removed to his residence and died at 9:30 p. m. The deceased was about thirty years of age, and was unmarried. He was a stone mason by trade, and had been employed on the new capital at Albany, but returned home a short time since owing to want of material to continue work on the State building. He was an industrious man and was greatly esteemed by his acquaintances.

A LAST WARNING.

As I was passing up Second street last evening on my way home I was grossly insulted by a certain party. If it is ever repeated it will not be well for them. This is not the first time this has happened, but I hope it will be the last. I think it is a shame for a husband to go around and malign his wife's character and encouraging such proceedings.

MRS. EMMA MOSHER.

Fulton, M'ch 1, '82.

A QUERY.

To the Editor of TIMES:

H. Bostwick, barber, has left Fulton having accepted a position on a railroad in British Columbia.

The Oswego Falls reading circle will be held at the residence of Lonzo Howell this evening. A good time is expected.

Mrs. Cora Blackman nee Nelson, entertained about forty of her friends last evening at her father's residence, on Ontario street.

John O'Brien has purchased the Bostwick barber shop in the Lewis house and will conduct it hereafter. He will be pleased to see all of his friends, Montague's market is teeming with all that is first-class in the fish and oyster line. Give the "Old Reliable" a call, opposite Midland depot Second street.

LOST.—A prohibition petition, containing a number of signatures. Finder please leave at this office or with Mrs. Milo Lawrence, Second street near Broadway.

Samuel Cashman, who has been in the employ of the Boston Clothing store since its opening in Fulton, left for Chicago yesterday morning to accept a situation as traveling salesman for a wholesale house in that city.

Three $500 cancelled bonds of the town of Volney issued in aid of the construction of the Midland railroad, were filed in the county clerk's office Monday. These bonds are refunded by others bearing 5 per cent. interest.

It is rumored that John J. Stephens of Washington will return to this village next week, and make arrangements to place a mansard roof on the post office building, making another story. It is said that the new apartment will be occupied by a photograph gallery.

Robert Dine presents THE TIMES with an apple limb that was grafted into some forty years ago. The original limb and scion have become nearly one yet preserving the color and strength peculiar to the two varieties. It is certainly a curiosity and is drawing the attention of many people,

Geo. Charlton and family will leave Fulton the latter part of April for York, England. Mr. Charlton's father recently died in that city leaving quite a sum of money to be divided among his children six of whom are living. The amount he is unable to determine until he reaches York. He will come back to Fulton.

Last March Robert Jarrard, of Rochester, shot Valentine Rice in that city, and three days afterward committed suicide, thus shutting off the possibility of a criminal prosecution. Rice lingered till last Sunday, when he died from the effect of his wound. Robert Jarrard was for many years a resident of Fulton and was here married. His wife is dead.

Mrs. Sarah Ann Dodgson, has commenced an action against the village of Fulton for $5000 damages for the death of her husband. One year ago last June John Sharp Dodgson drove into the hydraulic canal near the plaster mill, and was drowned. The matter was brought to the attention of the board of trustees last evening but no action was taken in regard to it.

There are several people in this vicinity who seem to be familiar with the contents of each week's issue of THE TIMES whose names do not appear upon our list. Their neighbors complain that they swoop down upon them and borrow THE TIMES before the carrier boy gets out of sight. THE TIMES at $1.25 per year is easily within the reach of all. Try it for six months or a year.

A pleasant home is offered for sale in the eastern part of this village on the Emory road formerly occupied by Mr. Geo. Converse, deceased. The lot contains nearly five acres and also has a good barn. Lot well watered and drained. A healthy and desirable location with a school house seventy-five rods away. Terms easy. Apply to James Chesbro, Fulton, or Ira Carrier near the place, or G. W. Robinson, Ilion, N. Y., administrator.

"LET HIM WHO WINS IT BEAR THE PALM."

"He who cures the ills of flesh" quoth the sage, "is even greater than he who conquers in war." Certain it is then, that Dr. Swayne has earned the laurel of greatness. His Ointment for skin diseases has been the means of releasing thousands from the indescribable horrors of that complaint. The best evidence of an article is obtained by a practical test, and the unsolicited endorsement of those who profit by its use.

A beautiful new variety of [illegible]

[illegible] St. Paul's church in that city. Miss Riley formerly lived in Fulton.

Mrs. Cornelia D. Lathrop, wife of Rev. O. C. Lathrop, died at her residence in the eastern part of this village yesterday at 11 a. m., of consumption, aged 73 years. Mrs. Lathrop had been an invalid for some time, suffering from consumption, and although her death was rather sudden it was not wholly unexpected. She was a member of the M. E. church and a lady of rare christian qualities. She leaves a husband and three children to mourn her loss.

Hon. Dewitt C. Peck of Mexico died suddenly at his home in that village last Saturday, aged 51 years. He was born in Oneida Co., Dec. 14, 1831. He was a former principal in the Mexico academy relinquishing this position to study law. He was a member of the Oswego county bar. He served in the assembly from the third Oswego district in 1877-8. He was a candidate for state senator in 1879 and came within two or three votes of receiving the nomination. Mr. Peck's funeral was held yesterday at 2 p. m., from his late residence attended by a large assemblage of friends including many from out of town.

Mr. Charles T. Richardson, a prominent member of the Oswego county bar, died at his residence in Oswego Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock after a short illness. Mr. Richardson had been ailing for a week but his sickness occasioned no alarm until Friday. On Saturday congestion of the lungs set in from which he never rallied. Mr. Richardson was born at Springport, Cayuga county, in 1832. When a young man he came to Oswego and went into the custom house under his uncle, Jacob Richardson, who was collector of the port at the time. Afterwards he took up the study of law and attended the Albany law school from which he graduated. In 1853 Mr. Richardson was admitted to the Oswego county bar, and formed a partnership with Mr. Mason. On the breaking out of the war Mr. Richardson went to the front as quartermaster of the gallant 24th and did good service. Several years ago the firm of Rhodes & Richardson was formed, which continued until his death.

His death occasioned great surprise and regret and the many eulogistic encomiums paid his memory reveal the high estimation in which the community held him in which the active portion of his life had been spent.

His wife and eldest daughter were at New Orleans when he was prostrated and were telegraphed. They had reached Buffalo when word was conveyed of the death of the husband and father. They were conveyed by special train from Buffalo to Oswego. His widow, two daughters and a son survive him.

Funeral will be held at the house today at 2 p. m.

A Lad Who Fell and Rose Again.

A young, man decidedly handsome, of prepossessing manners and elegantly dressed, came into Counselor William H. Beddiman's office recently and greeted him warmly. There was a brief but frank and pleasant conversation between the two men. When the younger man was leaving, he gave the lawyer a grip that showed forth a noble and impulsive nature. There were tears in his eyes when he said good-bye. The counselor was silent and thoughtful for a time after the door had closed upon the departing visitor. "Sometimes" he said, earnestly, at length, "an occasion will arise that will afford a recompense for all the evils that assail one. My first meeting with that young man was an event. I never shall forget it."

"And the circumstances were?

"I don't think I ought to say. However, I suppose you never will meet the man again, and in any case you must promise never to give the name with the story,"

The promise was given.

"Well," said the counselor, "during the last year of Col. Mann's incumbency of the office of district attorney, I was acting for him. I observed one day among the crowd of criminals in the dock a handsome intelligent lad about fifteen. There w[illegible] thing about him that fasten[illegible] my [illegible]ntion. I called Judge L[illegible]s attention to him. 'I think w[illegible]ought to make some inquries as to that boy's history,' I said 'he doesn't seem to be in his element in such company.' The Judge agreed with me. I called the boy into a side room and had a long talk with him. He was charged with embezzlement of funds belonging to his employer. He frankly said that he was guilty.

"Temptation had assailed him and he had fallen. I saw it was a case in which to imprison him would have been to sacrifice him. He said he had an uncle living some distance in the country. I said that if he would agree to leave the temptations of city life and go out to that uncle, I would try to have him set free. He promised. The matter was explained to his employer, who agreed to abandon the prosecution. The boy was discharged. Two or three years after a youth called upon me one day in my office. I did not know him at first. It was my young friend. But how changed. He lived in Ohio, respectably employed, and with excellent prospects. He was grateful for what we did for him. He overwhelmed me with gratitude, indeed. He never comes to this city now without paying me a visit. I felicited once upon his prospects. 'Yes' he said 'I am doing very well. But if I had been abandoned at that time, when the cloud hung over me, I would have gone to perdition, sure."

To the North Pole.

Commander John P. Cheyne, an Englishman. who was in this country, and who is endeavoring to get up a balloon expedition to the north pole has been revealing the details of his plans to an inquiring reporter. Cheyne says the first want is money. (a very natural want) in amount about $80,000. Subscriptions are rapidly coming in, so the "sinews of war" are not likely to be wanting. The intention is for the expedition to start from the city of New York next June. The vessel will be called the "Grinnell," and the route will be through Davis' Straits, Baffins Bay and Smith's Sound to St. Patrick's Bay. At this point is a great bed of coal, the supply being comparatively unlimited. The distance from St. Patrick's Bay to the pole is 495 miles. The outfit of the party will consist of several portable houses and balloons, in addition to the usual equipments. At the winter quarters a large wooden observatory will be erected, and at the distance of 50 miles another will be built all three connected together with telegraphic lines. Three trained observers will be stationed at each observatory, and simultaneous hourly meteorological observations will be taken at three points commanding a range of 100 miles north and south. Commander Cheyne will be at the central observatory, projecting on sheets of paper the deflections of the wind curves as they occur every 60 minutes. This observational work will be continued until he will have become thoroughly acquainted with the wind curves passing over a large extent of polar circle. Three balloons will be employed with a carrying capacity of two tons. Each balloon party consisting of men and dogs, will be provided with sledges, and with provisions for 51 days. A fine telegraph wire over 500 miles long, which will reel off as the three balloons move north, will be used for keeping up communication with the party left at the station. The final journey will not be undertaken until the commander will have determined with accuracy the course of the current [illegible] which he wishes to start. His expectation is that less than 24 hours will [illegible]

TERRIBLE LOSS OF LIFE.—It is estimated that 482,000 worms die annually by being expelled from children by the Peerless Worm Specific. This represents, however, in its reflex phrase, many thousand children made comfortable and happy. Only 25 and 50 cents. For sale by R. E. Phillips.

Some Tough Ones.

There died in England not long since a madman, in whose body was found twenty buckles, fourteen pieces of glass, ten pebbles, three knotted strings, a piece of leather, a fish hook, a pin, nine copper buttons and 1,728 nails and tacks. A French convict carried around in his stomach fifty-two objects, including several knives and a piece of hoop iron four inches long. A sailor died in a London hospital a few years ago who, at various times when he was drunk, swallowed pen knives and clasp knives by the half dozen. In Boston in 1805 he swallowed four in one evening, and next morning, encouraged by the notoriety, swollowed eight more. He was finally siezed with vomiting, and was only relieved by heroic measures, but his stomach was ruined. But next December, being again drunk he swallowed nine clasp knives, and was several months in getting rid of them. He did not, in fact, get rid of them all, and died of slow emaciation four years afterward.

The violation of nature's laws brings its warning by the feeling of discomfort. Exposure will induce colds, throat diseases, consumption, etc., all of which give warning by a troublesome cough. Use Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup in time, and remove both the cause and effect of your discomfort.

His First Case.

A lawyer in central New York gives the following account of one of his first cases: "My client sued a neighbor for the alleged killing of a favorite dog. The proof consisted in the mysterious disappearance of the animal, and the possession of a dog's skin by the defendant, which, after considerable argument was brought into court in evidence. It was marked in a singular manner, and was postively identified, with many tears, by the plaintiff's wife and daughter as the undoubted integument of the deceased Bose. In summing up to the jury, I was in the midst of a highly colored picture of the virtues of the deceased and of the love of the children for their four-footed friend, when I was interrupped by a slight disturbance in the crowd near the door of the little schoolhouse which served as a court-hose. Looking around I saw my client's youngest son, a tow-headed urchin of twelve, coming forward with a dog whose skin was the exact counterpart of the one put in evidence. The dog wagged his tail with good natured composure, and the boy cried, in his childish treble, 'paw Bose has come home.' I gathered up my law books and retreated, and I have never had perfect confidence in circumstantial evidence since."

"First a cough carried me off,
And then a coffin they carried me off in!"

This will not be your epitaph if you take your cough and Dr. R. V. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery" in time. It is specific for weak lungs, spitting of blood, night sweats, and the early stages of consumption. By all druggists.

Webster Described.

His personal appearance, his voice and manner, then, as always, greatly enhanced the effect of everything he said. The slender boy, unfit for the labor on the farm, has developed into a man of large and commanding presence. Mr. Webster was less than six feet in heigth, yet every artist has portrayed him of almost heroic stature. The fact was that he impressed those who saw and heard him as of gigantic mold. A Liverpool navvy is said to have pointed at him in the street, and cried out, "There goes a king!" and Carlyle is said to have reported that he looked like "a walking cathedral." His head was very large, of fine shape, and with a most noble brow, beneath which great eyes looked out full of dusky light when in repose, and glowing like fires when he was excited. His massive features, black hair and swarthy complexion, together with a manner extremely grand and solemn, all contributed to render him impressive to an extraordinary degree. His voice was one of great richness and compass, in his highest pitch never shrill, but penetrating to the lowest corner of the hall or senate chamber, or in the open air to the very outskirts of a vast crowd.

A LOVER'S TALE.—In a pause in the conversation, Algernon asked Desdemona what she would take. Her eyes dropped to the ground, and in her sweetest tones she answered one, just one of Cobb's Little Podophyllin Pills. Only 25 cents for 40. For sale by R. E. Phillips.

A smooth sea never made a skillful mariner; neither does uninterrupted prosperity and success qualify for usefulness and happiness. The storms of adversity like the storms of the ocean, arouse the faculties and excite the invention, prudence, skill and fortitude of the voyager.

A Texas paper says—"Previous good character counts for something in this state. A man who was on trial for arson brought forward witnesses to prove that he had neglected two good chances to steal horses, and the jury decided that 'no [illegible] as that could be guilty of burning a barn.'"

GENTLEMEN: Having received from the use of Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure very marked benefit, I can cordially recommend it to others.

A. C. Kendrick

(D. D., Professor of Greek in the Rochester University and New Testament reviser).

Thousands of equally strong endorsements—many of them in cases where hope was abandoned—have been voluntarily given, showing the remarkable power of Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure, in all diseases of the kidneys, liver or urinary organs. If any one who reads this has any physical trouble, remember the great danger of delay.

A New Mother Shipton.

When lawyers fail to take a fee,
And juries never disagree;
When politicians are content,
And landlords don't collect their rent;
When Boston folks give up their beans;
When parties smash all the machines;
When naughty children all die young;
And girls are born without a tongue;
When ladies don't take time to hop;
When office holders never flop;
When preachers cut their sermons short,
And all the folks to church resort;
When back subscribers all have paid,
And editors have fortunes made;
Such happenings will sure portend,
This world must soon come to an end.

Lord Byron, in reference to a beautiful lady, wrote to a friend—"Lady——— has been dangerously ill, but now she is dangerously well again." American belles attacked by any of the ills that flesh is heir to, killing and avoid being killed by taking Dr. R. V. Pierce's "Favorite Prescription," which banishes feminine weaknesses, and restores the bloom of health. By all druggists.

A Squirrel Story.

A story so strange that it seems almost incredible comes from the Zoological gardens but is nevertheless true. A few days ago a little squirrel killed a rattlesnake which was about to devour it, and thus the aggressor became the victim. It is customary to place live animals, such as the rabbit the rodent or the squirrel in the dens of the reptiles. The snakes when they are hungry, with fearful deliberation approach their terrified prey and deliberately devour it. The squirrel crouched tremblingly in a corner of the snake's abode and seemed to understand that it would soon be food for the disgusting creature. Slowly but surely the rattlesnake crawled toward the squirrel, but the bunny quickly jumped on a perch above the deadly reptile's head. The long flat head was raised upon the perch and the forked tongue spit forth its venom. But the squirrel with a sudden spring, alighted on the back of the snake and bit off one of his rattles. The wounded reptile wheeled quickly around and struck the little hero a fearful blow, breaking his right hind leg. Brave little fellow, once more he leaps beyond the reach of his maddened foe. Another spring and the squirrel was triumphant. He caught the snake behind the head, and with one firm thrust of his sharp, white teeth decapitated the slimy monster and fell exhausted by the wiggling mass; but the battle had been won and the snake was dead.

A PICTURE WORTH BEHOLDING.

Hanging between two small windows, and catching the light from a larger one opposite, in one of the offices of Adams Express Company, at 59 Broadway, New York—the office occupied by W. H. Hall, head of the delivery department—is a plainly finished but neatly framed chromo about 2½ by 3 feet in size, which is looked upon by hundreds of people daily, on many of whom it has a wonderful and salutary effect. It represents a flight of half a dozen rough stone steps leading from the swarded bank of a placid lake to a little rustic temple set in the rugged side of a mountain which rises in grand proportions in the background all covered with a rank luxuriant growth of foliage in brush and tree. In the open door of this little temple stands a half concealed figure, with an arm extended, holding forth a small dimly defined package, while seated on the sward at foot of the steps an aged pilgrim, barefooted, lame and decrepid, bears a staff in one hand, and the other holds before his dim eyes a small bottle, whose label he eagerly scans. This label bears the words "St. Jacobs Oil the Great German Remedy." Simple as this little chromo appears in its unostentatious position it has an influence which it would be difficult to estimate. "It is to that picture and the persuasions of Mr. Hall," said Mr. Edward J. Douglass, a gentleman connected with Mr. Hall's department, "that I owe my present ability to perform my work. Some weeks ago I was violently attacked with sciatic rheumatism, and hour by hour I grew worse, and nothing my family or the doctor could do gave me relief. I began to think in a few days that my case was hopeless and that I was doomed to be a helpless cripple for life. But at last I thought of that picture which I had so often looked at with but little interest, and then Mr. Hall came to my bedside, and telling me how St. Jacobs Oil had cured him of a worse and longer standing case than mine, urged me to use the same remedy. I did so that very night, directing my wife not to spare it but to apply thoroughly according to the directions. This she did with a large piece of flannel cloth saturated with the Oil, and then bound the cloth to the affected parts. The next morning I was free from pain, and although I was a little sore in the hip, was able to dress myself and the next day resumed my duties in the office as sound as a dollar. Here I am now in full health and strength, having had no touch of rheumatism or other pain since. Whenever I see one of our drivers or any other person who shows any symptoms of lameness or stiffness, I point him to the picture in Mr. Hall's office, and then direct him to go for St. Jacobs Oil at once."

RESCUED FROM DEATH

William J. Coughlin of Somerville, Mass. says: In the fall of 1876 I was taken with bleeding of the lungs followed by a severe cough. I lost my appetite and flesh and was confied to my bed. In 1877 I was admitted to the hospital. The doctors said I had a hole in my lung as big as a half dollar. At one time a report went around that I was dead. It gave up hope, but a friend told me of DR WILLIAM HALL'S BALSAM FOR THE LUNGS. I got a bottle, when to my surprise I began to feel better, and to-day I feel better than for three years past.

"I write this hoping every one afflicted with diseased Lungs will take DR WILLIAM HALL'S BALSAM, and be convinced that CONSUMPTION CAN BE CURED. I can positively say it has done more good than all the other medicines I have taken since my sickness.

How to Secure Health.

It seems strange that any one will suffer from derangements brought on by impure blood, when Scovill's Sarsaparilla and Stillingia, or Blood and Liver Syrup will restore health to the physical organization. It has been proven to be the best blood purifier ever discovered, curing scrofula, syphilitic disorders, weakness of the kidneys, erysipelas, malaria, nervous disorders, debility bilious complaints, and all diseases of the blood, liver, kidneys, stomach, skin etc. A single bottle will prove a health renewer, for it acts like a charm, especially when the complaint is of an exhaustive nature.

THE INDEPENDENT.

"The foremost religious newspaper of the United States."—The Rev Joseph Cook.

Established in 1848, as an advocate of anti-slavery and of reforms in religion and politics, the Independent once became a recognized power throughout the country. Its influence has ever since been constantly growing. As it has fought against slavery and for cheap postage, so it will fight against Mormanism, for Civil Service Reform, and for purity in politics, and general uprightness in all things. It employs the best editorial talent and speaks fearlessly on all subjects. It pays for contributed articles and for editorial services more than double the amount paid by any other weekly newspaper.

It publishes more religious discussions than the religious reviews, and more poetry and stories popular monthlies, and gives more information than an annual cyclopedia. The long cable dispatches recently published from the great Methodist Council in London are a good illustration of what the Independent is constantly doing. A list of the most prominent religious and philosophical writers, poets and story writers in the country is the list of the contributors of the Independent. Besides the space set aside for these writers and for editorials, there are twenty-two distinct departments, edited by twenty-two specialists, which include Biblical Research, Sanitary, Legal, Fine Arts, Music, Science Pebbles, Personalities, Hymn Notes, School and College, Literature, Religious Intelligence, Missions, Sunday School, News of the Week, Finance, Insurance, Stories, puzzles, and Agriculture. 32 pages in all.

Beginning Again.

When, sometimes our feet grow weary,
On the rugged hills of life,
[illegible] and dreary
With trial and labor rife,
We pause on the toilsome journey,
Glance backward in valley and glen,
And sigh with an infinite longing
To return and begin again.

For behind is the dew of the morning,
In all its freshness and light;
And before are the doubts and shadows,
And the chill and gloom of night,
We remember the sunny places
We passed so carelessly then,
And ask, with a passionate longing,
To return and begin again.

Ah, vain indeed is the asking,
Life's duties press all of us on;
And who dare shrink from labor,
Or sigh for the sunshine that's gone.
And, it may be, not far on before us
Wait fairer places than they;
Life's paths may yet lead by still waters,
Though we may not begin to-day.

For ever more upward and onward
Lie our paths on the hills of life;
And soon with a radiant dawning
Transfigure the toil and strife,
And our Father's hand will lead us,
Tenderly upward then;
In the joy and peace of a fairer world
He'll let us begin again.

BLAKE'S WIDOW.

Jem Blake had been shot dead in his own doorway by Antonio Gueldo, and the trial was to come off immediately.

The extraordinary interest in the affair was less due to the murder and its peculiar circumstances than to the fact that this was the first case tried at San Saba in any more formal court than the time honored institution of Judge Lynch. Jem had been a quiet man and a good neighbor, with a hand always ready to help any one who was out of luck, so public sentiment ran pretty high against Antonio. If the general inclination had been followed—as up to that time it had—the last named gentleman would have found very scant opportunity to make any remarks in his own behalf.

However, things were advancing at San Saba as well as elsewhere, and it wouldn't do to hang Antonio without a regular trial, no matter how agreeable such a proceedings might be to the people at large.

So ran the opinion expressed by Judge Pitblado, whose ideas on such subjects were usually accepted without comment. Nevertheless, there was more than one dissenter in the present instance, to whom it was by no means clear that there could be any sense or profit in this beating about the bush.

"Ef Antonio's goin' ter be hung, why in — don't we hang him?"

This was the pertinent inquiry of Jake Smith, the leader of the opposing faction, and his view of the question put in so clear a light that the judge had great difficulty in impressing people with his convictions. He said things had gone on in an irregular way long enough, and here was a chance to start the law in properly and give it a fair show. Besides, it didn't make any kind of difference; Antonio had shot Jem, hadn't he? Well, then, what was the use of talking? All the jury would have to do now was to return their verdict of guilty in the first degree, and there you were all comfortable.

It was just the same thing in the end—exactly.

"I tell yer," said the judge, who felt the weight of his title, albeit the same was altogether one of courtesy; I tell yer there's nothing like doin' a thing reg'lar, purticklerly when you know how it's comin' out."

So the judge's argument supported by his influence, and increasing bias in San Saba in favor of more civilized views, settled the matter, and it was decided that Antonio Gueldo should be tried before he was hanged.

As there was no place specially arranged for such ceremonies, Judge Pitblado hospitably offered the use of his shed.

Here a rough table and a chair were placed for the judge, the other necessary furniture intending to represent the dock, the stand, etc., being eked out with boxes from Silas Daggett's grocery store.

Jack Smith looked on at these preparations for a time with frowning discontent, and then strolled down the road, turning into the lane that led to Blake's.

When he reached the door of the shanty he leaned against the jamb and pushed his naked head inside, fanning himself in an embarrassed way with his [illegible] He had come [illegible] with the intention of saying something, but the sight within made [illegible] was she had [illegible] since the [illegible] before him. The sun- [illegible] face of the [illegible] to the door, [illegible] his blood, and the baby playing with his hair. She screamed once, the first and last complaint any one had heard her make; then she was quiet and hopeful through it all; when the men came and lifted him up; when they laid him out upon the rough bed in the other room; when they carried him to his grave, she followed with the baby in her arms.

Jake Smith was trying to find the link missing in his thoughts; he sniffed with perplexity—or something—and Blake's widow looked up without speaking. Jake nodded pleasantly four or five times.

"Pooty chipper?" asked he.

Blake's widow smiled sadly, bent over the sleeping child and smoothed the clothes with a tender touch.

"The're agoin' ter try him in a court," Jake went on, "an' I don't believe—"

"Try who—Antonio?" She turned to the burly figure in the door with a flash of interest in her black eyes.

"Yes, the judge is makin' a court out of his shed. I hope it'll turn out all right, but it seems like givin' that Mexican devil a chance he ought not ter have."

"He can't get clear, can he?" she asked, rocking the cradle gently and patting the coverlet.

"I don't see how, but he's got some kind of a law cuss to speak for him—a feller that stopped here a day or two on his way to Galveston, an' it makes me kind o' nervous."

Blake's widow did not appear to notice the last remark, for the child, disturbed by the talking, had awaked and sat up in his cradle with a wondering look.

"Pooty, ain't he?" said Jake, regarding the small figure with interest. "Looks just like—ahem!—you. Poor little—I—a—" he stammered and treated his hat like a mortal enemy. "Of course he's had—you've got—ther' ain't nothing I could do fur yer, maybe?"

She answered with a grateful look, but it was accompanied by a shake of the head.

Jake bent down, and, with his big forefinger softly rumpled the hair of the baby's head; then he went out and left them, Blake's widow sitting as he found her, and the baby staring down the path after him.

He walked on until he reached the top of the little hill, where he could look down upon the roof which covered the piteous scene he had just left. Here he seemed to have half a mind to turn back, for he hesitated and stopped; but he changed his partial intention after lingering a moment, and walked meditatively onward with the exclamation: "Wall, some women do beat h—l amazin'!"

II.

Of course everybody came to the trial. The arrangements were soon found to be altogether to meager. Pitblado's shed was filled to overflowing, and Daggett made a clean sweep of every empty box in his store.

Antonio's lawyer, a sharp-eyed, sharp featured fellow from Galveston, had bustled about with surprising agility on the day previous, holding mysterious conference with ill conditioned fellows of Gueldo's kidney.

Jake Smith was highly dissatisfied, and even the judge was heard to mutter some misgivings; however, by the time the proceeding had really commenced he gained confidence.

The court had assembled, the jury had been chosen, and the witnesses were all present, save one—Blake's widow.

Pretty soon there was a stir at the door; then a murmur of surprise ran through the crowded room.

"May I be d—d," said Jake Smith, audibly, "if she ain't brought the baby!"

What reason she may have had for not leaving the little thing in charge of some sympathizing women—and there were plenty who would have been glad of the trust—was not apparent; however that might be, there it was clasped firmly in her arms, its bright red cheeks contrasting with her whiteness, and its father's sunny hair mingling with her dark locks.

With some difficulty way was made through the throng to her seat, which was made through the throng to her seat, which had been placed on one side of the judge, directly opposite the candle box on the other, where Antonio sat. She took her place and never moved during the whole of trial, except as she was required to testify, and once when the baby tugged at some glistening thing that lay hidden in the folds of her dress, at which she took pains to distract its attention with a chip from the floor.

As for the baby, it sat there with its big blue eyes open to their fullest extent, entirely absorbed in the novel scene, save at the moment when that irresistable glitter caught its eye.

Every one being now present, the trial went on in good earnest. A number of witnesses were examined, whose testimony showed that Guelo had had trouble with Blake, and more than once threatened his life; that Gueldo's pistol was one charge short on the evening of the day of the murder, whereas in the morning it had been full; that he was seen that morning around Blake's house, and more than all that, Blake's widow had heard Gueldo's voice just before the fatal shot, and had seen his retreating form [illegible] in.

[illegible] the Galveston law- [illegible] diction, the witness who had sworn to having seen Gueldo near Blake's house. Then he expiated on the case with which one person may be mistaken for another, and brought a witness to show how Gueldo had already been said to resemble some one in the village. Finally he produced three of the ill-looking fellows before referred to, who swore that Antonio was with them on a hunting expedition during the whole of the day on which the murder was committed.

It was a clear case of alibi. Jake Smith's astonishment at the ease with which the thing had been accomplished was unbounded. He threw a look of disgust at Pitblado, but the Judge was nonplussed, and didn't seem to be interested with things in Jake's vicinity.

There was a pause before Pitblado gave his charge, and when he rose his face was rather blank.

"Gentlemen of the Jury," said he, "things has took a turn I didn't altogether expec'. I don't know as there is much more to be said. I s'pose you've got to go by the evidence, an' that don't need any explainin'. Ef you kin make out accordin' ter that, that Antonio Gueldo killed Jem Blake, why, just recollect that's what yer here fur."

The jury filed out, and the expectant audience occupied itself with tobacco and whispered comments.

Jake Smith fidgeted about on his box, and cast anxious glances through the open door, towards the clump of nopals where the jury were deliberating.

Antonio talked and laughed in an undertone with his counsel, and Blake's widow sat staring at them with compressed lips, and a strong expression of determination coming into her face.

It wasn't long before the jury filed in again, all seating themselves but the spokesman, and Judge Pitblado rose, wiping his forehead with his shirt-sleeve.

"Straightened it out, have yer?" asked he, nodding to the spokesman.

The man nodded slowly in return.

"Wal, le's have it then."

"Yer see," said the spokesman, with a hesitating and disappointed air, "ef yer hadn't a corralled us with stickin' ter the evidence, we might a done better, but accordin' ter that, Antonio wasn't thar when the murder was done, an' ef he warn't thar, he couldn't a done it, an, ef he didn't do it, why—then—of course he's—not guilty."

Pitblado didn't dare to look at anybody; he stared at the rafters—down at the table—nowhere in particular; and then turned halfway toward Antonio.

"You kin go," said he, speaking with great deliberation, "but I wouldn't stay around here too long."

There was a dead pause for a minute, and nobody moved.

Jake Smith exploded a single expressive word, which he had held for some time past, and Blake's widow stood up.

"Have you got through, [illegible]?" she asked.

"Wal—I—s'pose so."

"And there's nothing more to be done?"

"I'm afraid thar ain't."

"And he's free to go?"

"Y-a-a-s."

Antonio Gueldo rose with an insolent grin, and picked up his hat.

The baby crowed, for it saw the glittering thing again.

There was a sharp report—Antonio pitched forward in a heap upon the floor, and Blake's widow stood with the pistol pressed to her breast,

A line of thin, blue smoke curled up from the muzzle of the weapon, and formed a halo around the child's flaxen head. The glittering thing was quite near the little hands now, and they took it from the yielding grasp of the mother.

Blake's widow looked steadily at the figure on the floor—it was quite motionless—then she turned, and went through the wide passage opened for her by the silent crowd, holding the baby very tenderly, and the baby carrying the pistol.

The child laughed with delight: it had got its shining plaything at last.

A REMARKABLE CONFIDENCE.

It is a matter of journalistic record, that some years since, a schooner set sail from Baltimore, having on board a crew of thirteen men. By a most singular freak of nature, the entire force was attacked by a skin disease, which manifested itself in large ulcerated sores on the arms and hands, wholly incapacitating the men from duty. The result was that the vessel was towed back to the city where the men were placed in the hospital. Moral! Had Swayne's Ointment for skin diseases been used in the first place, the crew would have recovered in from 12 to 24 hours.

A Three-legged Man.

A man named George Lippert, and who has three legs, was exhibited before a class of students at the Good Samaritan Hospital in Cincinati. Lippert was born in Bavaria, is 33 years of age, and the malformation, or third leg, commences at the hip in the right side of the body. It is doubled up and Lippert sits on it. There are six toes on this foot. The leg which is used for locomotion on the right side has a foot but with one toe, and is a sort of a club foot. The most perfect leg on the right side is the one that is bent up, the other one on the same side being shrunken and having but one bone in it. The man has wonderful control over the six toes that are on the extra leg, being able to move or work them about with the ease and pliability of fingers. When a young boy Lippert commenced to bend the leg so as to hide it from the gaze of [illegible]

Moonshiners.

A writer in the Atlantic Monthly has been visiting the moonshiners of the South, and has succeeded in putting their side of the question just as they look at it. The "moonshiner," that is, the manufacturer of illicit whisky, who makes it chiefly at night, in order to avoid the vigilance of the United States excise officers, is usually a small farmer, to whom his "still" is no more than a cider mill to a Northern man. Like his fathers and grandfathers he has always made whisky. "It don't do any body any harm," said one of them to the writer. "It's about all the way we have of makin' any money in this wooded country. It don't go into the general trade of the country enough to amount to anything," which, if we may believe what is said about its merits, is deeply to be regretted; the liquor is made out of their own corn, and if the tax were actually collected upon it all, it would drive them out of the country. What they most fear is disturbance from the outside—the invasions of railroads and commerce and improvements generally. As one old man expressed it:

"But this hyur country's all a goin' to change. It's a goin to be most everlastin'ly improved, ye see; I'm too old, But the old ways is comin' to an end. They's men a buyin' up thousan's of acres of this land. They'll be railroads built direc'ly, bither an' yan, more'n'll do anybody any good. They'll cut off the woods for fuel an' quarries up hyur, they say. And they'll be mean, dirty little towns laid out all about. Then instid' o' people drinkin' a little healthy whisky, as we've always done, they'll be forty times as much miser'ble pison stuff sold and drunk, and whoever drinks it'll begin to steal an' lie. I reckon they'll be some fine houses built some-'eres along this river, and they'll put up big, scientific locks on their doors, and thieves'll come from Cincinnartar and Chat'noog', an break into 'em.

"They ain't never ben a lock on to a door in these mountains. But they's goin' to be the allfiredest improvements about hyur, an' I s'pose our people'll larn to steal too; haf' to, to keep up an' live. An' they'll be some o' them city women hyur, I reckon, from them big places, with their fine feathers an' fine dresses a draggin' on to the ground, an' they'll be the deuce to pay among our young men. That's what they call civ'lyzation, ain't it stranger? I tell yo, this country'll soon be improvin' like the deuce, but I shan't live to see much of it, I reckon."

The "informer" is known among them as the "reformer," which is an unconscious pronunciation of the name, and they account for his zeal in pursuing them by the fact that "the reformer gets half."

The St. Louis (Mo) Post-Dispatch at the close of a long article says: In fact St. Jacobs Oil is pushing all other remedies out of the field, and, excellent through some of the lineaments, formerly offered are, the efficacy of St. Jacobs Oil is crucial in cases of sciatica, rheumatism pleurisy, neuralgia, nervous headache, lumbago and scores of other disorders; while in the case of sprains, burns or injuries it is an absolute panacea, and for general use is better than the advice of many physicians. "A word to the wise is sufficient."

How Pilgrim Weakened.

It used to be said of Pilgrim, who was a resident of Clinton County Mich., for thirty years, he never paid a debt in his life, and no one ever found a way to make him. The nearest he ever came to such a climax was when a neighbor found him mired in a swamp in the woods, two miles from any house. Pilgrim was over his knees and slowly going down when accidentally discovered, and the situation offered the neighbor just the chance he had long wanted. Taking a seat on a log near by he said;

"Pilgrim, you owe me $16."

"It's outlawed," was the reply.

"I can't help that. It was a just debt and you've got to pay it or I'll leave you to sink out of sight."

"I don't pay outlawed debts," was the grim answer.

"Then down you go," said the creditor as he started away.

Of course he did not mean to leave old Pilgrim to die, but he thought he'd give him a scare. He therefore hid in in the bushes where he could see him, and during the two hours he was there the debtor went down until only his head and shoulders were above the swamp. It wanted only an hour to sundown when the creditor came forward and said;

"Pilgrim you are in a bad fix."

"Yes, rather bad."

"Unless you have help you'll be out of sight in two hours."

"Looks that way to me, too."

"Now, then, will you pay that debt?"

"It's outlawed."

"I can't help that, you owe me $16. Will you pay it if I'll help you out?"

Pilgrim glanced around at the darkening forest, and seemed to fully realize his situation, but after a moments reflection he called out:

"I'll tell you what I'll do. I'll wait till I go down to my chin, and then if no one else happens along, or the boys don't come this way after the cows, I'll give you my note for $10 payable in a year. How's that."

"I'll let you go down and be hanged to you!" roared the creditor as he moved away.

"Hold on! Hold on!" called Pilgrim. "I forgot to say that the note must be drawn without interest, and you must [illegible]

Opening a United States Court.

A Washington paper tells in the following how the United States District Court is opened; All courts are to the laity queer places. There is a certain amount of ceremony and procedure which, to the casual looker-on, has neither rhyme nor reason. As an instance, I will cite the "calling" of a defendant or plantiff when it is well know that he is absent and cannot possibly respond, but he is "called" and the record is made up against him. The peculiar formula used in opening court is another queer thing; and here in Washington it is wonderfully queer. Just imagine that before the court begins any business whatever a man of medium size, but with lungs like the bull of Bashan, steps up to the end of the judge's desk, taps with his knife-handle, and in a voice that could de distinctly heard in a hall of 20,000, calls out, "come to order, gentlemen; hats off." He waits a moment, glances around the court-room, lays his left elbow on the desk, straightens himself, drops his head upon his breast, closes his eyes, fills his lungs with several cubic feet of air, then he says in a volume of voice as big as the British cyclopedia: "Ho-o-o-h-yees." He pauses and gathers his breath again, and the second flood of sound rools out; "Ho-o-o-h-yees." Those who are accustomed to it turn to those who are strangers in the court-room and say: "How's that for a voice?" And the answer is: "Why, he could be heard a mile." Meanwhile the cryer is swelling up for the next thundering utterance, and he belches out; "Ho-o-o-h yees." He pulls in a mighty breath and bellows: "Sa-w-w'l pers sa-awing bees misfor thou bull ju-u-dga s'preme court th'does strickelum." He gathers himself again, his chest expands, his eyes close, and he goes on: "Na-a-a-o'd dinge-criminal term." Another gathering of the Berean forces and: "Draw-aw-aw near, gun give yer ten dunce the courtsnaw pen!" As he utters the last part the thunder runs suddenly down to a zephyr all muddled in together, and he is half way down the steps.

It took one man, he was from Ohio, four days to translate the cryer's conundrum. By those who know what his business is, to-wit, to open court, no effort is made to guess whether he is calling "oldraes" or "so—o—o—ap." They let him wind up and run down, and then go to business. The result of a careful investigation showed that the call never varies. Like the cogs in a wheel the words move in the groove every time. When the Ohioan had finally wresteled the conundrum out, he found it read as follows: "O yes, O yes, O yes, all persons having business before the honorable judge of the supreme court of the District of Columbia, now holding its criminal term, draw near and give your attendance. The court is now open."

Many Miserable People drag themselves about with failing strength, feeling that they are sinking into their graves when Parker's Ginger Tonic would begin with the first dose, to bring vitality and strength back to them. 37m1

"Please pass the butter," as the man remarked when he sent his goat by rail.

[illegible] after reading the tale of the atrocious outrages committed by the Russians on their neighbors, the Jews, is [illegible] to realize the base grade of civilization which still prevails in the empire of the czar. Why should not this government employ its good offices with the Russian convert to obtain a cessation of these wrongs? Russia would receive a protest more graciously from the United States than from Great Britain.

Those who heard Henry Ward Beecher in Fulton last week were surprised at the apathy maintained by him throughout the evening. In Chicago, Monday evening, he spoke for some time and suddenly fainted and fell. He was carried to his hotel and restoratives administered. Mr. Beecher is growing old and the severe strain on his mental faculties is begining to tell. This will explain to Fulton people his inability to put his wonted fiery eloquence into his lecture. He may be compelled to cancel his lecture engagements. This will be his last attempt, it is said, to make a lecture tour.

ON Thursday of last week, the steamship Illinois, of the American line, arrived in Philadelphia, bringing 547 passengers, 325 of which were Jewish refugees from Russia. Eighty six were women, sixty-nine children and the remainder men. For weeks preparations have been in progress for their reception and the old Pennsylvania Railroad depot had been fitted up with every convenience for their use, and upon their arrival they were escorted to their quarters by the committee having them in charge.

The cause of their leaving their native land, was the terrible persecutions they suffered at the hands of the Chrstians or members of the Greek church. Their money was stolen, their property destroyed and their wives and children brutally maltreated. The authorities failing to give them the necessary protection at home they sought an asylum in the Free States, the name they give America.

Measures are being taken by parties in New York and elsewhere to furnish homes and employment for the refugees. Within the next ten days another party of six hundred are expected in New York.

[illegible] the holders regarded them as first class security, until they began to default in payments. Since then several installments of principal on the bonds have become due, which, together with the unpaid interest now makes the past due obligations very large. To this must of course be added the expense of litigation, now amounting to thousands of dollars. In every suit against the town we believe the decision has been against them. This makes the town pay the cost of both sides to the suit. The total amount levied upon the town each year for usual town expenses is from $5,000 to $8,000. In addition to this there are judgments, past due bonds and defaulted interest enough to make the amount many thousand. The report comes now that the town has sued the commissioners. This would seem to be an abandonment of the claim against the validity of the bonds. The defence against the bonds was that the issue was not in accordance with law, that the bonds were fraudulent and therefore void. The charge against the commissioners must be that the bonds are good, at least so held by the courts, and that the commissioners exceeded their authority in issuing the bonds, and are therefore, personally liable, for the full amount of the bond, interest and costs paid in damages to the town. The two claims it seems to us are opposed to each other and cannot both be maintained by the same party. It is an unfortunate affair. Judging from the action of the courts in this and other cases the town will ultimately have the whole to pay together with a very large sum in the way of costs. The lawyers of course are delighted to have so expensive a suit contested. Their pay is sure, and the people foot the bills. Beside this it brings into the town bitter wrangling, and dissension that it will take many years to heal. While we feel badly for the town, many of its people are our friends, our advice is—and some day they will say it was good—discharge your lawyers, pay your debts and make peace with your neighbors.

PROMPT SETTLEMENT BY THE METROPOLITAN LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY.

OSWEGO N. Y.

Mrs. Coon, Oneida street, received rrom the Metropolitan Industrial Ins. Co., of New York, payment in full on the death of her son, John Coon, within 24 hours after sending in her claim.

The Metropolitan was the first company to start this plan of insurance in this country and is making rapid strides towards a monopoly, having branch offices in all the principal cities and towns in the United States and are issuing policies at the rate of 8,000 per week, which is more than all the other companies combined We watch with pleasure the headway they are makng and hope they will continue in their present success in making a provision for the middle and poor classes which benefits them in the hour of greatest need.

HISTORY OF THE UNITED STATES.

Barnes' Popular History of the United States, was undertaken at the close of the first hundred years of American Independence. The author proposed to give the whole people of the United States and the world a thoroughly impartial history of America, from the mound builders to the present time. The work is now finished down to President Arthur's administration. In it the truth of American history is impartially given in true historic form without passion and without fear or favor. It is a work that all sections of the country can read and enjoy. Although the author is a northern man and soldier his work is popular and widely used as a [illegible] East, West, North and South.

[illegible]

[illegible] to cause no little commotion among those who read them, anxiously inquiring [illegible] as to the genuineness of the interview and the validity of the statements it contained. The name of the physician, was at that time suppressed at his own request. The seal of secrecy however can now be removed, as the important and interesting letter which appears below abundantly show.

In order, however, that the reader may better understand this letter, a few extracts are her ewith given from the interview in question.

After an exchange of courtesies and a few reminiscences about the war, in which the doctor was a prominent surgeon, the reporter remarked upon the doctor's improved appearance, upon which he said:

"Yes I have improved in health since you last saw me, and I hope also in many other ways. One thing, however, I have succeeded in doing, and it is one of the hardest things for any one, especially a doctor, to do, and that is I have overcome my prejudices. You know there are some people who prefer to remain in the wrong rather than acknowledge the manifest right. Such prejudice leads to bigotry of the worst order. Now, I am a physician, and of the "old school" order, too; but I have after years of experience and observation, come to the conclusion that truth is the highest of all things, and that if prejudice or bigotry stand in the way of truth, so much the worse for them they are certain to be crushed sooner or later. Why, when I knew you in Detroit, I would no sooner have thought of violating the code of ethics laid down by the profession, or of prescribing anything out of the regular order, than I would of amputating my hand. Now, However I prescribe and advise those things which I believe to be adopted to cure, and which my experience has proven to be such."

"How did you come to get such heretical ideas as these, doctor?"

"Oh, they are the result of my experience and observation. I obtained my first ideas upon the subject, though, from being cured after all my care and the skill of my professional brethren had failed to relieve me. Why. I was as badly off as many of my patients, with a complication of troubles, including dyspepsia, and consequently imperfect kidneys and liver, and I feared I should have to give up my practice. For months I suffered untold agonies. Dull, indefinite pains in various parts of my body; a lack of interest in everything about me; a loss of appetite; head-ache all these disagreeable symptoms were added to pains that were both acute and constant. Sich as I was, however, I became restored to health in a most surprising manner and in an inceedibly short space of time, and it was this that proved a revelation to me. That was the starting point, and my prejudices faded rapidly after that I can assure you. I went to reading extensively, and analyzing more extensively, and since that time I have discovered many things of real value to humanity. Why, only a few days ago I advised a lady who was suffering from a serious femal difficulty and displacement to use the same remedy that cured me. I saw her this morning and she is nearly well; the pain and inflimation are all gone and she is around as usual. We have no right in the medical fraternity to sit back and declare there is no such thing as improvement or advancement, or that we have a monopoly of the remedies which nature has given to mankind. There are great changes going on in every department of life, and there are great developments in medicine as well. Thousands of people die every year from supposed typhoid fever, rheumatism or other complaints, when in reality it is from trichina, caused by eating poorly cooked and diseased pork. Thousands of children are dying every year from dropsy as the apparent sequel to scarlatina, when in reality it is from diseased kidneys which have become weakened by the fever they have just passed."

"Well, whether they are reasonable or not, I have demonstrated to my own satisfaction that they are true, and I propose to stand by them, no matter how much opposition I may raise by doing so. Any man be politician, preacher or physician, who is so considerate of his pocket book or of his own personal ends as to stultify himself by suppressing the manifest truth, is unworthy the name of man, and unworthy the confidence of the public whom he serves."

The above are some of the principal points in the interview referred to Now for the sequel. The following outspoke letter from the doctor himself which has just been received is published in full.

Editor Detroit Free Press:

Some time ago a reporter of your paper had an interview with me which he said he would like to publish. I consented on condition that you would not mention my name untill I gave you permission. I have now accomplished the purpose I had in mind, and wish to say to you (which you can publish or not as you see fit) that I had debated for a long time whether I would shake off some of the proffessional fetters which bound me with others for years, and tell the truth, or not. When I looked back, and thought of the tortures, like those described by Dante in his trip to the infernal regions, which I endured from dyspepsia, and recalled how much I would have given at the time for the relief which I have since obtained. I determined that I would take the step so long meditated, and thereby discharge a duty to my fellow men. If I could thereby save one poor motal one night of the terrible suffering I endured, I would be fully satisfied, be the other consequences what they might.

My dyspeptic condition was produced by a torpid liver, which did not, as a censepuence, remove the bile from the blood. This produced derangement of the stomach, inflamation of its coats, dyspepsia, constipation, headache, depression of spirits, yellow complexion, fat-covered eyes, chills and fever; in short, I was miserable to the last degree. I appealed to my books, to my skill and to my fellow physicians. The mystery of my ill-health grew deeper. I traveled everywhere—exhausted all authorized expedients—but to no purpose.

When in this frame of mind, desperately in need of help, but expecting none one of my unprofessional friends called my attention to some unusual cures wrought by a prominent remedy and urged me to try it. I emphatically declined. But secretly, and with the firm determination that I would never let anybody know what I had done, I began its use. It was only an experiment you know, but for that matter all medical treatment is experimental. Well, to make a long and [illegible]

[illegible] the remedy which has become so well understood [illegible] the great importance of attention in time to the first indications of declining health. When professional men of such high standing sink their prejudice and willingly declare their belief in that which they know to be valuable, the public may confidently follow their example.

WIDE AWAKE.

The March Wide Awake is brilliant with fine pictures, one of Charles Volkmar's famous duck-paintings heading the list as frontispiece. Mrs. Jessie Curtis Shepherd has a beautiful full-page engraving. "They who wear fine gloves," and Jessie McDermott another, with two full-length figures, to illustrate the irresistible poem by "M. E. B.," entitled "A Girl of the Period." Bodfish also has three full-page drawings in the number illustrating "Hannah's Snares," "A Sawing Match," and "The Story of Maple Sugar." The letter press is equally attractive. There is no end of poems and pictures and stories to delight, and there are some excellent articles, solid, yet as entertaining as the stories:—"To-day," in which Edward Everett Hale explains the tariff, "Short Stories from the Dictionary," by Arthur Gilman, "A Pair of Gloves," by Mrs. Dickinson, "Beautiful Mr. Baby," a Japanese sketch by Mrs. Arthur. Then follows, to crown this, the month's Reading Course for the Chatauqua Reading Union, sparkling with wit and wisdom, helpful with practical suggestions and brilliant with fine engravings, among them a very fine drawing by Lungren for the music article entitled "Mozart playing for friends." The music this month is by Mr. G. W. Chadwick, the musical director of the Greek play, Ædipus, he having set Miss Mulock's "Mill Song" especially for Wide Awake. D. Broken Banks and Lax Directors.

Mr. John Burroughs, who unites the contemplative life of a naturalist and philosopher with the duties of a Government bank-examiner, contributes to the March Century a valuable article on the short comings of national bank officers and directors, in which he says:

Yes, gentlemen directors, you are probably victims of your own credulity and ignorance. Your stock is worthless and the stockholders who elected you are betrayed; you have not done your duty; you have let your cashier snub and hoodwink you. You have not assumed and exercised the authority that was rightfully yours.—The officers are amenable to you; they are in your inploy; let them understand that every act of theirs is to be open to your inspection, and subject to your approval or disapproval. It is not their bank—but your bank; its business and funds are held in trust by you for the stockholders who elected you. Do not act as if you were interlopers when you appear in your own bank, or like passengers on a train who hesitate a long time before they dare ask the conductor a question. You are the conductor, and the train must be run as you say, and if the cashier grumbles put him off. When disaster overtakes a national bank, it wil be found, in almost every case, that the directors have left its entire management to its officers. They have used no authority. They have stood around and timidly approved of what the officers have done. Their ignorance of bank matters has been one source of their timidity, but their failure properly to appreciate their duties and responsibillties has been equally unfortunate.

Directors are apt to expect tow much of the annual visits of the bank-examiner, as if he possessed some clairvoyant insight into the condition of every bank in his district. In the first place. the insides of the bank may be entirely eaten away between his visits. Secondly he is a stranger, and can know little except by hearsay, of character and habits of the bank's officers, or the security of its loans. Half the discounted notes might be forgeries, and the titles to its real estate worthless, without his discovering it. Thirdly, the examination of national banks by the Government is not undertaken directly in the interests of the stock holders and creditors of the bank, but in the interest of requirements of law. These banks are organized under an act of Congress, and they sustain a certain relation to the general Government; and it is this relation alone that the Government is bound to concern itself about.

In the fourth place, while it is also clearly the duty of the bank-examiner to see that the funds of the bank are not embezzled or misapplied by its officers and clerks, yet in the limited time which he can afford to devote to the examination he cannot always unearth frauds of this kind, particularly in the case of collusion. They may be deeply buried in the various accounts, and carefully covered up by false entries and forged papers, and unless the examiner can take time to analyze and shift the business of the bank for the past year as shown by its books, which would be a work of weeks, he cannot be sure the bank is not being robbed by its officere. Bees cary off honey away from the hive and leave the comb all intact, and cashers have been known to exhibit as clean and straight a set of books as need be, when their accounts were little more than empty comb.

THE SUN.
NEW YORK, 1882.

THE SUN for 1882 will make its fifteenth annual revolution under the present management, shining, as always, for all, big and little, mean and gracious, contented and unhappy, Republican and Democratic, depraved and virtuous, intelligent and obtuse. The Sun's light is for mankind and womankind of every sort; but its genial warmth is for the good, while it pours hot discomfort on the blistering backs of the persistently wicked.

The Sun of 1868 was a newspaper of a new kind. It discarded many of the forms, and a multitude of the superfluous words and phrases of ancient journalism. It undertook to report in a fresh, succinct, unconventional way all the news of the world, omitting no event of human interest, and commenting upon affairs with the fearlessness of absolute independence. The success of this experiment was the success of The Sun. It effected a permanent change in the style of American newspapers. Every important journal established in this country in the dozen years past has been modelled after The Sun. Every important journal already existing has been modified and bettered by the force of the Sun's example.

The Sun of 1882 will be the same, outspoken, truthtelling, and interesting newspaper.

By a liberal use of the means which an abundant prosperity affords, we shall make it better than ever before.

We shall print all the news, putting it in readable shape, and measuring its importance, not by the traditional yardstick, but by its real interest to the people. Distance from Printing House Square is not the first consideration with The Sun. Whenever anything happens worth reporting we get the particulars whether it happens in Brooklyn or in Bokhara.

In politics we have decided opinions; and are accustomed to express them in language that can be understood. We say what we think about men and events. That habit is the only secret of success of The Sun's political course.

The Weekly Sun gathers into eight pages the best matter of the seven daily issues. An Agricultural Department of unequalled merit, full market reports and a liberal proportion of literary scientific and domestic intelligence complete The Weekly Sun, and make it the best newspaper for the farmer's household that was ever printed.

Who does not know and read and like The Sunday Sun, each number of which is a Golconda of interesting literature, with the best poetry of the day, prose every line worth reading, news, humor—matter enough to fill a good sized book, and infinitely more varied and entertaining than any book, big or little?

If our idea of what a newspaper should be pleases you, send for The Sun.

Our terms are as follows:

For the daily Sun, a four page sheet of twenty-eight columns, the price by mail, post paid, is 55 cents a month, or $6 50 a year; or, including the Sunday paper, an eight page sheet of fifty-six columns, the price is 65 cents per month, or $7 70 a year, postage paid.

The Sunday edition of The Sun is also furnished separately at $1 50 a year, postage paid.

The price of the Weekly Sun, eight pages, fifty-six columns, is $1 a year, postage paid. For clubs of ten sending $10 we will send an extra copy free.

FOR SALE—A desirable house and lot on Hannibal street, lower Oswego Falls. Good water and good garden. For particulars enquire at THE TIMES office. 42tf

Election is over.

Something dropped.

The board of supervisors is republican.

Don't forget the aesthetic festival at Nichols hall, this evening.

The town clerk's office will be in THE TIMES office for the ensuing year.

Richardson's grocery store is located first door east of THE TIMES office.

Mrs. Stanley Wiggins, of Alton, Pa., is visiting Mrs. J. T. Pratt, of this village.

Rev. A. U. Hutchins, of this village will preach in Pennellville, at 3 o'clock p. m., Sunday.

Several robins have been seen in this vicinity the past week, and also wild geese flying North.

Mrs. Amasa Williams of lower Oswego Falls who has been prostrated by a severe illness is slowly recovering.

Mrs. James Barrott and Miss Corna Kimberly who have been visiting Miss Olive Carter in lower Oswego Falls have returned home.

George Germaine, adjuster for the fire association has settled with Eugene Emory, for loss on household goods by paying him $200.

Smith Stranahan, of Granby has leased his farm for a term of years and will sell some of his stock and farm implements at auction Tuesday, March 14th.

Maple Sugar is being made from sap caught in paint pails and kegs out north east from the village. Avoid useing the sugar as there is danger of poison in it.

The railroad commissioners for the town or Volney have made their report. They have exchanged $7,000 of their 7 per cent. town bonds for now bonds at 5 per cent. interest.

Fred VanWagenen, jr., has been brought to his home in this village from Union college, in Schenectady, quite ill with typhoid fever. His condition this a. m., is reported to be more favorable.

The school entertainment at Granby Centre, Monday evening was largely attended. The exercises consisted of music, selections in reading which were all rendered in a very creditable manner. Smith's band was in attendance and pleased the audience at intervals.

Our people were happily surprised yesterday morning at the grand front which loomed up before them as they stepped into the post office for their morning mail. At 9 o'clock last evening no signs of the coming change were visible. The new office is a beauty and the people will be better and more promptly served. Postmaster Gilbert is to be congratulated on bringing about so important a change. The designer and contractor is Mr. O. L. Danforth.

The Shakespeare reading club of lower Oswego Falls met at the residence of Miss Olive Carter Monday evening. A large company assembled in her rooms and sat themselves down in comfortable groups to listen to Hamlet. The parts were fairly taken and finely rendered, each giving evidence of much thought and study. We cannot say too much in praise of their president to whose unflagging zeal and constant encouragement, the little band of readers owe the marked success which they have attained. The selections which followed were in some cases well chosen but mostly too long and altogether lacked variety. A little more system in this department would add much pleasure to the entertainment. The society adjourned to meet at the residence of Mrs. Henry Schenck next Tuesday evening.

The papers were served Friday afternoon on police justice Parker of Oswego Falls requiring him to show cause at the general term in Rochester March 21, why he should not be removed on a charge of drunkenness, official misconduct and malfeasance of office. The affidavit is signed by Ezra L. Hoagland, C. P. Dutcher, Fred Vant, John Dustin, H. Bartlett, N. N. Stranahan, John Weed, J. N. Peck, Monroe Bartlett, Horace Fancher, John Williams, S. B. Mead, M. L. Wilcox, John Dowdle, county treasurer, James Wiltsie, W. A. Darling, Peter F. Decker, M. Sheridan, Fred Stoddard, L. D. Beardsley, J. H. Halstead, James Campbell, Arthur North, E. A. Pelley, W. R. Hancock, T. M. Salmon, Daniel B. Dennison.

IN THE COUNTY

Clark Morrison, democrat, was elected mayor of Oswego yesterday by a majority of 176. Oswego elects 5 demacratic and three republican supervisors. Mexico re-elects Asal L. Sampson republican. Constantia elects C. Getman democrat. John L. Sage, republican of Williamstown is re-elected. L. R. Muzzy of Richland rep., is re-elected. T. R. Wright rep. is elected from Granby. Geo. P. Elliot rep., is re-elected from Hastings, E. P. Barrett rep. is elected from Hannibal. Geo. W. Davis rep. is elected from Sandy Creek. L. J. Green Independent is elected from Parish. Albert F. Allen democrat, is from Oswego town.

There were 1284 votes cast yesterday. The average temperance vote 110; the greenback 56.

Rev. J. S. Riggs delivered a temperance lecture in Nichols hall Sunday evening and made some very plain statements in regard to the action of certain town officers. It was rumored that he was interviewed by some interested party and had receded from the position taken. Mr. Riggs informed THE TIMES yesterday in the most positive language that he had not receded, and would not.

Mr. Sidney Dunton of lower Oswego Falls, received last week a pension amounting to something over $1,700 for the loss of a son in the late rebellion. Mr. Dunton and family will go to St. Lawrence county for a few weeks visit.

We always take pleasure in doing our patrons a favor. This week we do it by calling their attention to a chance where they can earn good wages and have all expenses paid. Read the "ad." of D. F. Attwood & Co., in another column.

School No. 1 will give a public entertainment at the close of the present term and will be assisted by Miss Ella V. Gilmour, Mr. Geo. E. Smiddy and Prof. Chas. T. Marsh of Syracuse. Announcement of time and place will be made next week.

Norris G. Dodge, a former well-known citizen of Fulton and later bank cashier in St. Johnsville with a home in Little Falls, has been visiting his brother, R. R. Dodge. He left Chicago Saturday morning, where he has extensive dredging contracts in the harbor.

The Pulaski Democrat has the following concerning Fulton parties:

Messrs. Henry Wise and Owen Carroll of Fulton, late proprietors of the Lewis house, were in town this week negotiating for the lease of [illegible] new building. They are both first class hotel men who have a [illegible] in the business. It is [illegible] that Syracuse parties are [illegible] after the position.

CARD OF THANKS.

[illegible]

[illegible] in THE TIMES [illegible]. My informant was certain this scurrilous article was aimed at my own poor head being "nearly related to" the fire department through its chief. He is mistaken. I know not who "hoseman" is; I did not write the article, was not at the fire and know nothing of the justice of the charge. It is rather humiliating to be charged with writing anything so vulnerable as the letter referred to. There is doubtless, a just feeling of indignation against the Patriot editors for its many attempts to belittle and belie our really excellent volunteer department. This community can readily understand why its chief officer should be slurred, but as chief of the fire-department and head of the post office he needs no defender. It is also easily understood why the present writer should be charged with so much that is hateful in the eyes of this chronic hater.

The Patriot owners can never forgive him for beating them in a law suit, which he was forced to bring against them to collect pay for the material and erection of their 'wonderful cable power.' They fought long and hard and perjured themselves a hundred times or less, during the trial, but in the end they borrowed the money and paid the full claim with costs; but the remembrance of their shameful treatment of one who had been their steadfast friend in time of need, continues to smoulder and burn in their wicked hearts, and proves true the adage "that whom we have injured, we continue to hate." H. N. G.

Fulton, March 4th, 1882.

Fulton's Tribute.

At a meeting of the bar in the village of Fulton held at the office of S. B. Mead, Wednesday March 1st, the following preamble and resolutions on the death of Charles T. Richardson, of Oswego were adopted;

Whereas, We have heard with deepest sorrow of the death of Charles T. Richardon, late an honored member of the Oswego county bar. Thefefore,

Resolved, That we are profoundly sensible of the great loss which our association and profession at large have just sustained.

Resolved, That while we lament such loss we still experience a mournful satisfaction and pride in recalling the purity of his character, the uniform courtesy and kindness towards all, the fidelity and honorable dealings with the bar, which ever marked his professional career, and whose course and practice have been such as to place our profession on a higher plane of confidence and usefullnes.

Resolved, That we tender to the family of the deceased our sincere condolence upon the sad bereavement which has removed from the domestic circle its generous and affectionate head.

Resolved, That the secretary transmit to the family of the deceased, a copy of the foregoing resolutions.

Isaac VanBuren, of Granby, died last Wednesday, in the 78th year of his age. Mr. VanBuren was in his usual robust and vigorous health until Sunday when be was taken with a chill and he grew seriously ill after and failed rapidly and steadily until Wednesday when he died. Mr. VanBuren was one of the original settlers of this part of the country, having lived nearly all his life in Granby and Volney.

We understand the trustees of the Presbyterian society closed a contract this morning with Mr. Allen for the purchasing of his lot upon which they will erect the new church. At Monday's meeting the finance committee reported some $13,000 had been pledged, and the building committee are authorized to employ an architect to prepare plans and specifications for a church the cost not to exceed $12,000.

Work will be commenced at once, and prosecuted with vigor to its completion.

We are requested to publish the following letter:

To THE EDITOR OF THE BROOKLYN EAGLE:

In your issue of the 20th inst., we find the following statement: "Swan & Scoville have sued S. R. and J. C. Mott in the supreme court of this county, to recover $50,000 damages for libel." The statement following that "Swan & Scoville have led the trade in that line of business," and that Mr. Swan is a leading member of the Tabernacle Baptist church," indicates a peculiar taste in advertisement of business and church connection. So far as the article relates to us we desire to say that we have no knowledge of any suit, either by service or by papers or by communication of any kind from the alleged complainants or their attorney.

The quarterly Meeting of the Oswego County council P. of H. will be held at the court house in the city of Oswego on Tuesday the 14th of March 1882, at 10 o'clock a. m. E. H. WALWORTH, Sec.

Mr. Simeon Osborn and Mrs. Mary L. Bennett of this village were united in marriage last Wednesday evening at the residence of the officiating clergyman, Rev. H. M. Danforth, at Camden, N. Y. They have returned to Fulton and will take up their residence in Mr. Osborne's new house on Cayuga street. The contracting parties are well known and highly esteemed residents of this village and THE TIMES is as sincere as their legion of friends in wishing them a full measure of this world's happiness and prosperity.

WELL INDORSED BY OUR OWN CITIZENS.

No matter how useful anything may be in itself, good indorsements seems to insure its usefulness greatly by insuring a wider field for the display of its special merits. We were thus impressed in view of the following statements received by one of our representatives from leading individuals connected with some of the largest enterprises in our midst. Among others whose testimony was freely given was W. H. Stearns, Esq., Master Mechanic of the Conn. River Railroad residing at No. 28 Boylston street who observed;—

St Jacobs Oil has had remarkable effect among the men employed here. One of them jammed his arm very badly, and by the use of St Jacobs Oil was greatly benefitted, and the arm was healed. Another used it for severe rheumatic pains in the knee, and pronounced the Oil a complete success as he was cured by its use. Mr. A. B. Taylor, of the Ray & Taylor Manufacturing Co. was pleased to say: "My aunt, Mrs. Pillsbury of Mount Clair, N. J., while visiting at our house tried St Jacobs Oil for rheumatism and neuralgia, and found immediate relief every time. She pronounced it the best thing she had ever tried for the trouble. Mr. J. B. Weston 45 Green wood street. Supt. car works Boston & Albany Railroad thus addressed our reporter: "I am one of the fortunates who have had the good luck to hear of that wonderful remedy, St Jacobs Oil. I had rheumatism in the shoulder severely and could find no relief until I used the Oil. I applied it and must confess I was surprised at the results. I am almost well and expect to be entirely so in a few days."

[Ssringfield (Mass) Union.

It was evening. Three of them were killing a cat. One of them held a lantern, another held the cat, and a third jammed a pistol into the cat's ear and fired, shooting the man in the hand who held the cat and the one with the lantern was wounded in the arm. The cat left when it saw how matters stood and that ill-feeling was being engendered.

Andrew Olsen, of Chicago, fearing an attack of small-pox, drank three quarts of whisky as a preventative. It was a great success. He is now proof against small-pox and all other diseases, but it is not likely his remedy will supercede vaccination as a preventative. Unfortunately Andrew didn't live long enough to write a recommendation of its merits. [Norristown Herald.

And a host of secrets, I will confess,
Which nobody is ever able to guess.

So dear old grandpa, with silver hair,
And "grandpa's darling," without a care,
To shadow the joy of his little heart,
Are rarely seen from the other apart.
And e'en when the twilight comes at last,
And the drowsy blue eyes are closing fast,
From grandpa's arms and from grandpa's breast
Mamma must bear her boy to rest.

THE RESULT OF NECESSITY.

What the ancients for want of knowledge in medical science can only be appreciated by contrasting the vast amount of suffering cured and pain alleviated in modern times, by the use of Swayne's Ointment for skin diseases. Its introduction was characterized by the necessary withdrawal of a score or more of illusive quack nostrums, whose evil effects have left living monuments to denounce them. Thus is exemplified the proverb, Necessity is the mother of Invention.

Vast Aggregate.

The real and personal property assessed in New York city aggregates about two billion dollars. The increase this year over last is $58,000,000, nearly all in real estate. Real estate is assessed on sixty per cent. of its value, and an immense amount of personal property escapes taxation by the failure of the assessors to discover it or by the holders swearing that their debts exceed the value of their personal effects. Many of the known millionaires pay no personal tax. Church property to the amount of $35,000,000, school college and library property valued at $50,000,000, and property of the United States worth $15,000,000, are exempted from taxation.

"Golden Medical Discovery" (words registered as a trade-mark) cures all humors from the pimple or eruption to great virulent eating ulcers.

Lazy Venetians.

The saddest thing in Venice is the absence of newspapers. I have never yet seen one in the hands of anybody but a traveler. The red-faced Venetian sits lazily under the half-drawn curtain that takes the place of door to his shop, waiting for customers, knowing nothing of the world without; the women, barefooted or in too slippers, shuffle and gossip about, but no one has a book or newspaper; the somber gondolier quarrels for an extra centesimi from his passenger, but he never heard of America, or of England, and has never read a word even of his own language. All are proud of Venice, even though she is but the dowerless bride of the Adriatic; proud that she was once conquered by Napoleon; proud of the church and square of St. Mark's; proud of the commerce she once had; proud of the palace of the Doges, with its quaint Moorish-Gothic architecture; proud, for aught I know, of the Bridge of Sighs, "a prison and a palace on each hand," and of the horrible machinery of persecution underneath, running down a hundred steps into thee gloomy earth, where the early Venice developed all that was devilish in man. But Venice is a bankrupt city, only half fed, a pauper of glass gewgaws and filagree, slowly returning, through gloomy grandeur, to the quagmire from which it sprung.

W. A. Croffut.

The Worst Snake Yet.

One of the most startling snake stories that has been told in these parts for some time was related by the engineer and fireman who came in last night on the Southern Pacific Express, and was corroborated by the passengers. It seems that just after the train had passed Dos Palms, the engineer noticed about half a mile ahead, what looked like a column of sand moving very slowly from east to west. At that time it was only a short distance from the track, and moving at such a pace that it was evident that the train and column would come together. When the two monsters were but a short distance apart it was discovered that this column was not sand, but an animal of some kind. It was moving in almost a perpendicular position, the tail dragging on the ground, and propelled by two large wings near the head. The bird, snake, or whatever it was, seemed to be about 80 feet long, and 12 inches in diameter. By this time everybody, almost, on the train, had put their heads out of the windows, and were hanging on the platform to get a look at the monster snake. The train and snake came together, but the snake's tail was not where it should have been, and a portion of his lower extremities was clipped off. This seemed to put this flying snake on his metal and he prepared for war. He wheeled around and gave chase to the flying train. The motion of the animal seemed to change in an instant, and he seemed to fly through the air two miles faster than chain lightning. In a few minutes, he, she, or it, overtook the train and gave the train a lively thrashing, roaring like a cow in distress all the time. After breaking several windows and frightening the women and children almost to death, the monster sailed off, followed by a shower of lead from the pistols of the passengers, which seemed to have no effect at all, if any of the bullets hit him. This is vouched for by every one who was on the train, and is given for what it is worth.

[illegible] centre of his [illegible] taking [illegible] will not consent to revolve around it and emit light and warmth for its enjoyment. There have been many and noble definitions of what a friend is. People of real individuality, strength and sensitiveness have fewer real friends than they are apt to think, unless they have been cherishing, unconsciously, low ideals. But whatever a friend may not be, certainly that sweet and noble term is unmerited by one who, however generous in other directions, is selfish of himself.

The Widow's Bewitched Button Box.

Mrs. DeWolf is a widow, residing with her fifteen-year-old daughter in East St. Louis, on Collinsville avenue, next to Kleinhenn's barber shop. On a recent night she and her daughter, about seven o'clock, set down by a table to do some mending and sewing. On the table was placed a large number of buttons of almost every conceivable description. All at once buttons began to fly about the room, striking on the bed, stove and other articles of furniture. Mrs. DeWolf and her daughter, of course were alarmed, and thought that some one was throwing the buttons into the room from the outside. But they noticed that their button box was being emptied of buttons. Thoroughly alarmed, Mrs. DeWolf called Mr. Kleinhenn, the barber next door. He, with his mother, an old lady, and his assistant, Pete, hurried to the woman's apartments. Buttons, sure enough were lying on the floor, on the bed, on the stove and elsewhere, and were continuing to be hurled from the box. All of them commenced picking up buttons and depositing them back in the box. But the button-throwing continued all the time, and the parties were hit upon their faces and heads by them. Again and again was the box emptied. This phenomenon continued for about two hours, when it suddenly ceased, and the buttons being the last time placed in the box remained unmolested. There was a bright light burning on the table the whole time, and no agency could be detected in the manipulation of the buttons. All this is unexplicable by the parties mentioned, all of whom related it to the Republican reporter. None of them are Spiritualists. [St. Louis Republican.

INCREASE AND DECREASE.

The census shows that the proportion of voters to the population is 1 to 5 74-100. The proportion of persons troubled with kidney and liver disorders has been alarmingly increasing, but since the almost universal use of Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure these diseases are rapidly diminishing.

Brother Gardner's Disciplino.

"Am Brudder Abraham Scott in de hall dis evenin'?" inquired the president of the Limekiln Club, as he looked down the aisles.

"Yes, sah," answered a voice from the northwest corner.

"Den please step dis way."

Brother Scott scuffed forward, head down and his countenance betraying about seventeen different emotions, and when he reached the mark the President continued:

"Brother Scott, in gwine ober to de old man Johnson's last night to borry a hunk o' butter fur breakfast, I discovered some one lying on de sidewalk. My first thought was to yell murder. My second was to smell of his bref. Dat settled de case at once. It wasn't a case ob murder, but a case ob dead drunk. I turned de subjek ober to get a look at his face, an' who d'ye s'pose it was?"

Brother Scott gazed straight at the bust of Venus and had nothing to say.

"It was Brudder Scott!" whispered the President. "Although two of his children am bar'fut, his wife needs cloze an' he hasn't a dozen taters in de house; he had taken good money from his pocket and paid it out fur bad whiskey. He wasn't a man when I foun' him. He was a hog—a great big hog! I could smell his bref six feet away, an' it would have made a dog sick. He had lost his hat, rolled in de slush, an' den fallen into a stuporish sleep. I got help an' took him home, an, to-night he comes to dis meetin' to have a word among men who work hard, respect demselves and lib sober lives."

"Ize sorry, sah."

"No doubt ob it, but dat am no defense. A fool excites pity, kase God made him dat way. A lunatic draws sympathy, kase he met wid misfortune. A drunkard arouses nuffin' but contempt. He deliberately goes at it to make a brute ob hisself. You have heard me speak of dis matter on seberal prevus occashuns, an' you know how de majority ob de club feel on dis subjeck. In de las' two months you hab been drunk fo' times."

"Yes, sah, but I'll quit."

"I hope you will, but I doubt it. You had everything to lose by gettin' drunk de fust time. You have lost character, respect, money an' standin', and dar's leetle hope dat you will see any reason to quit. We kin guard agin thieves by lockin up our money. We kin put de murderer in prison an' have him outer de way. We kin expose de liar and leave him wid contempt. But de drunkard—de hog—de beast, who kin [illegible]? Who kin believe him? An Egg Farm.

The Farallone Islands are about thirty miles from the mouth of San Francisco Bay, and they are the home of innumerable sea fowls. When San Francisco first began to be a city its constant cry was for eggs. To supply the lack of eggs the project of stealing those of the gulls, and the muhrs of the Farallone Islands was undertaken, and it proved successful and has ever since been maintained. The birds are not too plenty to count or to estimate, as may be inferred from the fact that the egg gatherers bring in often, or used to gather, 500 dozen in a day; and a great many of the nests are inaccessible, a great many others devastated by the rivalry of the birds themselves, and of course, a large part of the birds at one time are not laying. The egg season is from May to August, and, if even 400 dozen is the rule, the harvest would be pretty near 330,000 eggs. The quarreling between the gulls and the muhrs leads to the loss of a good many muhrs' eggs, which the gulls at every chance destroy. The egg business is conducted by a company, which has the right. It pays egg gatherers five cents a dozen, and sells them in San Francisco at a considerable advance.

"What is heaven's best gift to man?" she asked, sweet smiling on him. "Dr. Hall's Cough Syrup," he replied with prudence. He had just been cured by it of a bad cold.

Fashion Notes.

New trains are pear shaped.

Pearl cords are a Parisian novelty.

Faille is [illegible] fashion again.

The new blue is called bleu-de-mar.

Birds are [illegible] for looping lace drapery.

Dresden china [illegible] afford models for [illegible]

Black satin [illegible] are becoming to ladies with [illegible] hair.

"Eighteenth century embroidery" is the name given to the new [illegible].

Narrow [illegible] will be worn with new spring costumes.

Embroidered pelerines, with a large bow at the back, will be worn this spring.

Moss green bonnets, trimmed with pale yellow and gray, are the newest fancy.

Long, slender, bugle-like beads of iridescent hues are set at intervals over new faille bonnets.

A scoop, without a curtain, with a wreath of flowers set under the brim, is called the Langtry bonnet.

New costumes will be shorter than those worn during the winter; not only the instep but a glimpse of the ankle is disclosed.

Pongees and Chinese silks are imported with embroidery selvedges for trimming. The white are in especial favor although they come in other pale tints.

Rather small flowers are imported for hat trimmings, although milliners predict that the large crushed roses and other double flowers without foliage will be used.

Nuns' veiling is the choicest wool goods for summer dresses, and comes beautifully wrought near the selvedges in South Kensington work of self color, or else in gay colors, showing æsthetic lilies, sun-flowers, pansies and other dainty flowers.

The fashionable flowers this spring will be sweetwilliams, single yellow daisies, English marigolds, nasturtiums, coryopsis, a flower of the daisy family with yellow leaves and black centers. Popular fancy is running to wild flowers. Red and white clovers are more sought after for bridal bouquets than orange blossoms.

Black satin stripes alternating with white gros grain stripes in pleating and flounces will be much used for the skirts of dresses that are otherwise made of black satin duchesse. Three different widths of stripes are shown in new silks for this purpose, and the pleats are laid to show only the black satin on top, with glimpses of the white beneath each pleat like a facing.

"THROW PHYSIC TO THE DOGS, I'LL NONE OF IT."

We do not feel like blaming Macbeth for this expression of disgust. Even nowadays most of the cathartics are great repulsive pills, enough to "turn one's stomach." Had Macbeth ever taken Dr. Pierce's "Purgative Pellets" he would not have uttered those words of contempt. By druggists.

RESCUED FROM DEATH

William J. Coughlin of Somerville, Mass., says: In the fall of 1876 I was taken with bleeding of the lungs followed by a severe cough. I lost my appetite and flesh and was confined to my bed. In 1877 I was admitted to the hospital. The doctors said I had a hole in my lung as big as a half dollar. At one time a report went around that I was dead. It gave up hope, but a friend told me of DR WILLIAM HALL'S BALSAM FOR THE LUNGS. I got a bottle, when to my surprise I began to feel better, and to-day I feel better than for three years past.

"I write this hoping every one afflicted with diseased Lungs will take DR WILLIAM HALL'S BALSAM, and be convinced that CONSUMPTION CAN BE CURED. I can positively say it has done more good than all the other medicines I have taken since my sickness.

How to Secure Health.

It seems strange that any one will suffer from derangements brought on by impure blood, when Scovill's Sarsaparilla and Stillingia, or Blood and Liver Syrup will restore health to the physical organization. It has been proven to be the best blood purifier ever discovered, curing scrofula, syphilitic disorders, weakness of the kidneys, erysipelas, malaria, nervous disorders, debility, bilious complaints, and all diseases of the blood, liver, kidneys, stomach, skin etc. A single bottle will prove a health renewer, for it acts like a charm, especially when the complaint is of an exhaustive nature.

THE INDEPENDENT.

"The foremost religious newspaper of the United States."—The Rev Joseph Cook.

Established in 1848, as an advocate of anti-slavery and reform in religion and politics, the Independent has become a recognized power throughout the country. Its influence has ever since been constantly growing. As it has fought against slavery and for cheap postage, so it will fight against Mormonism, for Civil Service Reform, and for purity in politics, and general uprightness in all things. It employs the best editorial talent and speaks fearlessly on all subjects. It pays for contributed articles and for editorial services more than double the amount paid by any other weekly newspaper.

It publishes more religious discussions than the religious reviews, and more poetry and stories than popular monthlies, and gives more information than an annual cyclopedia. The long able dispatches recently published from the great Methodist Council in London are a good illustration of what the Independent is constantly doing. A list of the most prominent religious and philosophical writers, poets and story writers in the country is the list of the contributors of the Independent. Besides the space set aside for these writers and for editorials, there are twenty-two distinct departments, edited by twenty-two specialists, which include Biblical Research, Sanitary, Legal, Fine Arts, Music, Science Pebbles, Personalities, Hymn Notes, School and College, Literature, Religious Intelligence, Missions, Sunday School, News of the Week, Finance, Insurance, Stories, puzzles, and Agriculture. 32 pages in all.

The Comet.

[illegible] Hawkeye.

Mercy love us!
Far above us!
See the [illegible] shootin' round;
Fifty million
Million billion
Billion miles above the ground.

With a tail,
Like a whale,
See it scoot and whiz and rare;
With its dipper
In the "dipper,"
How it riles the Major "Bear."

Now its tryin'
For O'Ryan,
(Irish chap that killet the "Bull,")
And the moon
Pretty soon,
Give's the the comet's tail a pull.
Here and there
Everywhere,
Restless sprite of sky ideas;
Awful pert,
See it flirt
With Helen Potter's "Pleiades."

Unbeliever
Famine fever,
Plague and pestilence and war;
Fret and worry,
Trouble, hurry,
That is what a comet's for.

Lots of debt,
Too much wet,
Rain and hail and sleet and flood
Burning drouth,
Torrid South,
Sun-baked fields and seas of mud.

Blood and bones
Tears and groans,
Gnashing teeth and horrid cries;
Howls and yowls,
Frowns and scowls,
That's about the comet's size.

Everything
It will bring
That is bad beneath the sun,
How it hums!
Here it comes!
Goodness gracious, let us run!

THE DEATH TEST.

"It is a foul and bloody murder and may God punish the one that did the deed! But may there not be some life remaining? May it not be in my power to rob the grave? It is a dangerous undertaking, and if I am found here I shall most certainly be accused of the crime. Blood upon my hands and clothes, and I have not touched the corpse! Ah! I see how it came. The bushes are stained with it. The body was dragged to this lonely spot. Lonely! Who would ever think of coming here unless he had some foul purpose, save it might be a geologist like myself, whom the simple people in this part of the country would call mad. Yes, it would go hard with me especially as I am a stranger, and though poorly clad as becomes my present occupation have a considerable amount of money about my person."

He drew back a few steps from the corpse, upon which he had come suddenly and unexpectedly, and looked around. Without noticing his path, he had journeyed to the bottom of a deep ravine before his progress was arrested. High hills rose upon either side, covered with a heavy growth of trees and tangled underbrush. A little stream found its way with difficulty through the rocks at the bottom, and its waters were never gilded by a single ray of sunshine. Even in the brightest day it was gloomy twilight there; and a more dismal place would have been difficult to find—the very spot for dark deeds, for murderer's hiding! And there before him, stopping the path, lay a blood-stained human body, as if to finish the picture and give gory evidence of its [illegible] character.

His first thought was to pass on. What had he to do with the crime of another? Why should he mix himself with that in which he had not the most [illegible] business? His clear head and [illegible] mind foresaw all the difficulty that would arise should he be discovered and charged with the commission of the deed and the fearful net work of circumstantial evidence that would surround him; yet he was a man of the [illegible] firmness as well as of [illegible] and not for the sake of [illegible] danger, would [illegible]

[illegible] seemed [illegible] death; [illegible] was slow [illegible] a knife [illegible] His profession had taught him skill as well as coolness, and with calmness, [illegible] and delicacy, he made a still closer examination, and began preparations to staunch the blood [illegible]

"With this knife," he said, giving utterance to his thoughts as he drew out the weapon, "I could even thus kill all my enemies, make myself rich, and I——"

The sentence was never finished. Before it could be, a dozen men, who had been watching and creeping near, sprang out of the bushes, and pinioned him beyond the power of resistance. Taken beside the corpse, with the blood dripping knife in his hand, what could he say in his defence? The situation he had foreseen had come upon him, and he stood convicted, in their eyes at least, murderer. To appeal to their reason he saw at a glance would be useless; they were not of the class to look deeper than the surface. His defence must be made at another time and place; and, in fact, he was thinking more of the corpse of the murdered girl than of his own desperate situation, and drawing himself up proudly, he asked that she might be cared for.

"Whatever may be your purpose with me," he said, "at least see if there is not life remaining. Take your hands off and let me see if my skill can be of some avail. I am a surgeon."

Scowling brows and clenched fists were the only answer he received. They paid not the slightest attention to his words, except that it might be to grasp him even more firmly than before, and hurry him before the neighboring justice to be examined and exhibited as a monster. It was even a more unpleasant situation than he had anticipated, and the chances were desperately against him; but he retained his coolness, and prepared to make the best possible defence.

The evidence was given with the utmost bitterness—honestly given, perhaps, but without any leaning toward the side of mercy, and with the morbid desire on the part of the majority to see a man hanged, for such a thing had never happened in that neighborhood. And what could he say to rebut the sworn statements of a dozen witnesses? What were his assertions against the evidence of their own eyes and his bloody hands and clothes?

But he had the satisfaction, if, indeed, it could be called by that name, to learn who the supposed victim of the murderer's knife was—learn that her name was Edith Loring—that she was comparatively a stranger upon a visit to an old uncle who lived near the scene of the tragedy—that she was an orphan, and rich in her right—that she was known to wear costly jewelry, and carry with her a considerable sum of money (all of which was missing,) and that she had gone out to take a walk alone, and was found as described? These facts, together with his having been detected bending over the body with a knife in his hand, the out of the way place, the provocation for the deed in a pecuniary point of view, the almost certainty of remaining undiscovered, that he was poorly dressed, a stranger, had been seen lurking in out of the way places for several days, and that in his pockets was found about the sum of money, and of the same description as that known to have been in the possession of the murdered girl, were dwelt upon by the prosecuting attorney with remarkable force, and the prisoner saw that it was next to useless to attempt a defence.

To all questions he replied in a simple and truthful manner, stating that his name was Alfred Martin, his age, twenty-five; that he was by profession a surgeon, unmarried possessed of some means; that a love of geology had brought him thither; and that those who accused him of loitering in out of the way places would ~~have seen that he was~~ innocently studying the formation of the earth, if they had given proper attention to the matter. As for his being the murderer of the girl, he denied it in the most emphatic manner, and explained how he came to be bending over the body with the bloody knife in his hands.

"You will deny next," sneered the attorney, "that you threatened to kill all your enemies in the same manner."

"I believe I did use some thoughtless words to the effect that I could, with such a weapon, kill all my enemies, and make myself rich, but none such as you [illegible]"

[illegible] volunteered [illegible] who was said to [illegible] the first, if not the [illegible] murder, and had [illegible]

[illegible] "I'm guilty of it. Murder [illegible]" [illegible] of the murdered girl [illegible] of the justice, and they held a [illegible] whispered conversation, but evidently an important one. The purport was soon made known.

"Alfred Martin," continued the officer of the law, "as you choose to call yourself, though no one here is fool enough to believe that to be your correct name, you deny all participation in the foul deed that has been done?"

"I do."

"And are willing to prove it by any means within your power?"

"I am."

"Officers, guard him safely, and remove him to the next room. We will soon see his guilt clearly proven."

Without the remotest idea of what was going to take place, the prisoner permitted himself to be led into another department, and saw, to his surprise and horror, the corpse of the girl stretched out upon the table, still as bloody and ghastly as when he first discovered her in the gloomy ravine. It was a sight that would at any time cause him to shudder; but now it almost unmanned him for an instant, especially as the dress had been cut away so as to expose a wound in the fair, white flesh. His natural emotion was at once taken as an evidence of his guilt, and he heard whispered comments to that effect. The "I told you so!" of the man who had before volunteered his testimony, particularly attracted his attention: and from that instant he watched him as closely as possible without being detected, and summoning his courage he turned to the pompous justice, and demanded what was intended by such an unusual proceeding.

"It is the death test!" was the solemn response.

"You will have to explain more fully. I do not understand."

"We believe that the corpse of a murdered person has power to distinguish between the innocent and the guilty. Place one hand upon the wound, raise the other to heaven and assert your innocence—if you dare! If you are indeed without guilt, all will be well. If not the blood will flow again."

At another time, Martin would have laughed outright at the stupid superstition of which he now remembered to have often read. Yet there was something solemn in his calling upon the dead to give evidence for or against the living, and he would willingly have been spared the ordeal, for the most simple accident might cause a drop or two of blood to exude from the unclosed lips of the wound, and then his fate would be sealed indeed.

"If guiltless, why do you shrink?" asked the man of the law, "It is only the murderer need fear."

He could hesitate no longer without convicting himself in their eyes; and stepping to the side of the corpse, he laid his right hand upon the wound, and called God to witness his innocence. Then he stepped back so that all could see that no blood had followed.

"God has attested your guiltlessnes" said the uncle of the poor girl, "But see the blood is beginning to flow, and the guilty man must be near. Let each in turn do as the stranger has done."

In the opening of the wound, and the oozing of the blood, Martin saw far other things than did the afflicted old man; but he wisely held his peace, and managed to place his back against the door so that no one could get out, and watched each as they went through the death test. But there were no crimson drops bubbling forth as a sign of guilt, and as the justice declared that all had passed through the ordeal, a sigh of intense relief burst from their lips. "Not all," said Martin, "There is one yet remaining," pointing to the one who had made himself so officious. "That man has kept in the background."

"John Kirkpatrick, is that true?"

"No, it is a lie," was the response.

But, upon reflection, no one had seen him, and he was forced forward. His flushed face grew pale as ashes, and his brutish lip trembled. He looked around wildly for a chance of escape—saw there was none, and putting on the bravado, exclaimed, with an oath, "Well I can do it again."

With the words, he had raised his hand, was extending it, had nearly touched the corpse, when he shrank back with a fearful groan. His eyes had been the first to see that the blood was flowing freely again from the wounds—not one alone, but all.

A strong man at all times, he was rendered doubly so by desperation, and his efforts to get away [illegible] was torn to shreds, and the jewelry and money of which the girl had been robbed, fell to the floor, and raving and cursing, he [illegible] away to prison.

[illegible] "I could scarcely [illegible] or anticipated finding such a [illegible] specimen."

TONY PASTOR IN TROUBLE.

Tony Pastor, of New York, who is now with his inimitable variety combination, making a tour of the principal cities of the Union, is recognized as the leading character vocalist and variety performer of the United States. He owns and runs a first-class theatre on Broadway, New York City and has gathered about him the best troupe of variety artists that could be obtained. The company has just completed a brilliant engagement at the Walnut Street Theatre, Philadelphia, and after the present tour they will reappear in Tony Pastor's own theatre in New York City. Mr. Pastor is the originator of his peculiar school of character singing, and has made himself immensely popular, having realized by his talents a large fortune.

The writer of this article met Mr. Pastor recently at the Bingham House, in Philadelphia, and found him as genial in private as he is amusing before the public. During our conversation I inquired as to his physical health, and he replied that, notwithstanding the strain upon him in the discharge of his professional duties, it was excellent. He had occasionally severe pains, either the result of rheumatic attacks or colds, but any complaints of that character never troubled him long, as he had found a remedy for all such annoying affections. I asked him what the remedy was, and he replied, "St. Jacobs Oil." I then learned from Mr. Pastor that he considered the Great German Remedy an excellent preparation for the cure or relief of rheumatism, and that it was about the only thing used among professional people for that distressing complaint. He took bottles of it with him whenever he went traveling, and would not be without it, and knew that it was very popular with a number of members of his own company. A conversation held subsequently with various members of the company revealed the fact that St. Jacobs Oil had been performing most invaluable service for them in the way of curing them of rheumatism. Nearly every artist in the troupe used it, and was enthusiastic in its praise, and the writer was really forced to believe that Tony Pastor was certainly in luck in having, havihg so valuable an article known and employed by his inimitably good company of performers, for it enabled every one to be always in his place, thus insuring comfort to the management and genuine satisfaction to the public. Tony Pastor would certainly be in trouble without St. Jacobs Oil. At least, other managers whose artists have been temporarily unsupplied, have noticed the difference between St. Jacobs Oil in stock and St. Jacobs Oil out of stock—among the members of their companies. PILES! PILES!! PILES!!!

A SURE CURE FOUND AT LAST. NO ONE NEED SUFFER.

A sure cure for the Blind, Bleeding, Itching and Ulcerated Piles has been discovered by Dr Williams (an Indian remedy), called Dr William's Indian Ointment. A single box has cured the worst chronic cases of 25 and 30 years standing. No one need suffer five minutes after applying this wonderful soothing medicine. Lotions, instruments, and Electuaries do more harm than good. William's Ointment absorbs the tumors, allays the intense itching (particularly at night after getting warm in bed), acts as a poultice, gives instant and painless relief, and is prepared only for Piles, itching of the private parts, and nothing else.

Read what the Hon J. M. Coffinberry, of Cleveland, says about Dr William's Indian Pile Ointment: I have used scores of pile cures, and it affords me pleasure to say that I have never found anything which gave such immediate and permanent relief as Dr William's Indian Pile Ointment.

According to a complaining Washington writer, only one clergyman, and he a colored man, has waited on Guiteau, with a view to help him to save his soul. A man who is the agent of Divinity can get along very well with one confessor, and the color of the priest has nothing to do with the salvation of the soul. However it may be with other things, souls are all of one color.

Sergeant Mason, the soldier who fired at Guiteau in Washington jail, has been sentenced to forfeit all pay and allowance now due; to be dishonorably discharged from the army and confined in prison at Albany, N. Y. for eight years. His case provokes much sympathy and an earnest effort is being made by many prominent men to have his sentence suspended.

Parish—There was a large vote polled at our town meeting. There were only two tickets in the field: the independents, supported by the the greenbackers, and the republicans. The independents were successful with the exception of overseer of the poor and excise commissioner. The majorities ranged from from 5 to 105. Dr. T. J. Green, independent, was elected supervisor by a majority of 89. The town meeting was very spirited and strong efforts were made by each party to elect their ticket. Possibly some may report the result as a democratic triumph. This would be doing great injustice to the independents, as different political proclivities as some assert the old parties are breaking up in order to form new associations.

[illegible]

(Cleveland, O. [illegible])

A few weeks ago we copied into our columns from the Rochester, N. Y., Democart and Chronicle "A Remarkable Statement" made by J. B. Henion, M. D. a gentleman who is well known in this city. In that article Dr. Henion recounted a wonderful experience which befell him, and a few days thereafter we published from the same paper a second article giving an account of the "Excitement in Rochester," caused by Dr. Henion's statement. In the first article Dr. Henion stated for a number of yerrs, up to last June, he had been afflicted with what seemed at first a most mysterious trouble. He felt unaccountably tired at frequent intervals; he had dull and indefinite pains in various parts of his body and head, and was very hungry one day and entirely without appetite the next. However, as a physican he thought, and so did his fellow physicians that he was suffering from malaria.

But yet he grew worse, and was finally obliged to give up a large and lucrative practice. Still he was not conscious of his danger, nor that a monstrous disease was becoming fixed upon him, although all his organs had become gradually weakned. The symptons above described continued, accompanied by others of an aggravated nature, and he noticed a peculiar color and odor about the fluids he was passing; that they were abundant one day and very scanty the next, and were covered with froth or filled with brick dust sediment. But even then he did not realize his real and alarming condition. At last, however, he was brought face to face with the fact that he was the victim of a most terrible disease, and he made heroic efforts for recovery. He traveled extensively and consulted the best phosicians but they could give him only temporary relief, and that principally in the form of morphine. And so he grew steadily and constantly worse until his life became a torture. His pulse was uncontrollable. He lived wholly by injections and for six days and nights he had the hiccoughs constantly, which are considered the sure indications of coming death.

When hope and life were nearly exhausted his pastor, the Rev. Dr. Foote, rector of St. Paul's church, strongly urged him to try a means which the reverend gentleman had seen used with remarkable results. He objected at first but finally consented, and was conscious of an improved condition the first week. His pains gradually disappeared; his stomach resumed digestion; his heart became regular; his head aches disapeared: he had no more chills and fever, or acidity of the stomach; he gained twenty-sixpounds in three months, and is a well man to-day, being entirely cured of a most pronounced case of Bright's disease.

Although conscious of the consequences from his professional brethren, still as a duty to his fellow men, and a vow he made on what he thought was his dying bed, he published a card detailing his illness and remarkable cure. "Since my recovery," he says: "I have thoroughly investigated the subject of kidney difficulties and bright's disease, and I believe more than one-half the deaths which occur in America are caused by Bright's disease of the kidney's. It has no distincitive symptoms of its own (indeed, it often develops without any pain whatever in the kidneys or their vicinity,) but has the symtoms of nearly evey other known complaint. Hundreds of people die daily whose burials are authorized by a physician's certificate of "Heart Disease," "Apoplexy," "Paralysis," "Spinal Complaint," "Rheumatism," "Pneumonia," and other common complaints when in reality it was Bright's disease of the kidneys. Few physicans and fewer people, realize the extent of this disease or its dangerous and insidous nature. It steals into the system like a theif, manifests its presence by the comonests symptoms and fastens itself upon the life before the victim is aware. It is as hereditary as consumption, quite as common and fully as fatal. Entire families, inheiting it from their ancestors, have died, and yet none of the number knew or realized the mysterious power that was removing them. Instead of common symptoms it often shows none whatever but brings death suddenly and as such is usually supposed to be heart disease."

The second article entitled "Excitement in Rochester," was made up of interviews with Dr. Henion himself, who conferred all said in his card, and also with Mr. H. H. Warner. The latter gedtleman did not regard Mr. Henion's case as particularly exceptional, because he had known of many such cures by the same means in all parts of the land. Kidney diseases, he said, are carrying off tens of thousands every year, while Bright's disease is increasing 250 per cent, a decade and yet the people do not realize it or seek to check it until to late. He related how a New Orleans medical professor, lecturing on this disease, thinking to show his class what healthy fluids were, subjected some of his own to a chemical test, and although he had no suspicion of it before, discovered that he to, had the dreaded disease, which proved fatal in less than a year. There was also an interview with the celebrated chemest of of the New York State Board of Health, Dr. S. A. Lattimore, who said he had analyzed the remedy which cured Dr. Henion, and found that it was "entirely free from any poisonious or deletrious substances."

We have made these condensations in order that all the material facts may be set before our readers. Since the publication of these two articles, having been besieged with letters of inquiry, we sent a comunication to Dr. Henion and also one to H. H. Warner & Co., asking if any abditional proof could be given us as to the validity of the statements published. In answere thereto we have received the following letters, which add intrest to the entire subject and wholly verify every statement hitherto made:

Rochester N. Y. Jan. 31 1882.

Gentlenen: Your favor is received. The published statement, over my signature, to which you refer is true in every respect, and I owe my life and present health wholly to the power of Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure. It is not surprising that people should question the statement I made, for my recovery was as a great marvel to myself as to my physicians, and friends.

J. R. Henion, M. D.

Rochester, N. Y., Feb. 2, 1882.

Sirs; Acknowledging your favor duly received we would say: The best proof we can give you that the statements made by Dr. Henion are entirely true, and would not have been published unless strictly so, is the following testimonial from the best citisens of Rochester, and a card published by the Rev. Dr. Foote, which you are at liberty to use if you wish,

H. H. Warner & Co.

To whom it may concern;

In the Rochester, N. Y., Democrat and Chronicle of December 31, 1881, there appeared a statement in the form of a card from J. B. Henion, of this city, [illegible] recovery from [illegible] of the kidneys, after [illegible]

John [illegible] Morgan, (Special Co. Judge Monroe Co.)

Hiram Sibley, (Captalist and seedsman.)

W. C. Rowley, (County Judge, Monroe County.)

John Van Voorhis, (Member of Congress.)

Charles E. Fitch, (Editor Democrat and Chronicle and Regent of the University.)

To the Editor of the Living Church, Chicago, Ill.;

Will you allow the following card, personal to myself, appear in your widely circulated paper.

There was published in the Rochester Democrat and Chronicle of the 31st., of Dec., last a statement made by J. B. Henion, M. D. narrating how he had been cured of Bright's disease of the kidneys, almost in its last stages, by the use of Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure. I was referred to in that statement, as having reccomended and urged Dr. Henion, to try the remedy, which he did, and was cured.

Now the republishing of this statement in many of the leading journals of the day has been the cause of an incessant flow of letters to me making many inquires, but chiefly whether the statement is true, or a mere advertising dodge, ect., ect.

I beg, therefore to anticipate any further inquiries and save time and labor and some postage, by saying that the statement of Dr. Henion is true, so far as it concerns myself, and I believe it to be true in all other respects. He is a parishioner of mine and I visited him in his sickness. I urged him to take the medicine and would do the same again to any one who was troubled with a disease of the kidneys and liver.

Israel Foote, (D. D.,)
Rector of St., Paul's church.

THE SUN.
NEW YORK, 1882.

The Sun for 1882 will make its fifteenth annual revolution under the present management, shining, as always, for all, big and little, mean and gracious, contented and unhappy, Republican and Democratic, depraved and virtuous, intelligent and obtuse. The Sun's light is for mankind and woman-kind of every sort; but its genial warmth is for the good, while it pours hot discomfort on the blistering backs of the persistently wicked.

The Sun of 1868 was a newspaper of a new kind. It discarded many of the forms, and a multitude of the superfluous words and phrases of ancient journalism. It undertook to report in a fresh, succinct, unconventional way all the news of the world, omitting no event of human interest, and commenting upon affairs with the fearlessness of absolute independence. The success of this experiment was the success of The Sun. It effected a permanent change in the style of American newspapers. Every important journal established in this country in the dozen years past has been modelled after The Sun. Every important journal already existing has been modified and bettered by the force of the Sun's example.

The Sun of 1882 will be the same outspoken, truthtelling, and interesting newspaper.

By a liberal use of the means which an abundant prosperity affords, we shall make it better than ever before.

We shall print all the news, putting it in readable shape, and measuring its importance, not by the traditional yardstick, but by its real interest to the people. Distance from Printing House Square is not the first consideration with The Sun. Whenever anything happens worth reporting we get the particulars whether it happens in Brooklyn or in Bokhara.

In politics we have decided opinions; and are accustomed to express them in language that can be understood. We say what we think about men and events. That habit is the only secret of success of The Sun's political course.

The Weekly Sun gathers into eight pages the best matter of the seven daily issues. An Agricultural Department of unequalled merit, full market reports and a liberal proportion of literary scientific and domestic intelligence complete The Weekly Sun, and make it the best newspaper for the farmer's household that was ever printed.

Who does not know and read and like The Sunday Sun, each number of which is a Golconda of interesting literature, with the best poetry of the day, prose every line worth reading, news, humor—matter enough to fill a good sized book, and infinitely more varied and entertaining than any book, big or little?

If our idea of what a newspaper should be pleases you, send for The Sun.

Our terms are as follows:

For the daily Sun, a four page sheet of twenty-eight columns, the price by mail, post paid, is 55 cents a month, or $6 50 a year; or, including the Sunday paper, an eight page sheet of fifty-six columns, the price is 65 cents per month, or $7 70 a year, postage paid.

The Sunday edition of The Sun is also furnished separately at $1.50 a year, postage paid.

The price of the Weekly Sun, eight pages, fifty-six columns, is $1 a year, postage paid. For clubs of ten sending $10 we will send an extra copy free.

Villa [illegible], Menton, France.
February 21, 1882.

[The Times has kindly been permitted to copy the following from a private letter from Miss Sarah Warner to her parents in this village. Miss Warner is spending the winter in Menton, France.]

Monday was devoted to the finishing of the carnival at Menton. The procession was composed of representations of various things. Remember that everybody was masked, their clothing covered with a cambric dress of some description. The men all seemed to wish to appear as women. They were easily distinguished by their immense strides. Some women appeared in mens' clothes and everybody pelting some one with confetti. This is a sort of clay made in small pellets which they throw in the face of anybody who exposes a face; I had my eyes filled once. Mimic battles were fought by parties from four to ten in number. A bouquet was the sign of "cessation of hostilities." Everybody danced and yelled. In the procession one might see Mephistopheles and his imps dressed in red and black mantels on donkeys, some of the imps having immense gauze wings. There was a company of green frogs mounted on donkeys that croaked. A huge wagon representing the nations Under the American flag reclined a fat smiling Italian in the feathers and war paint of an American savage. He would have been more true to nature if he had not been so lazy. The wagon was drawn by oxen and garnished by ribbons of all colors. Behind the wagon were parties of four or six, dancing or throwing confetti. Another troop called the Ears, clothed in scarlet tights wore huge ears attached to the head and mounted on donkeys. The evening closed with fireworks, and the burning of an effigy representing carnival. In the procession was a huge ship conducted by sailors. In the evening these same sailors carried an effigy in a blanket through the streets on the way to bury him after the fashion of a burial in some parts of the country. There was a wagon representing the jolly fishers—a dozen fishermen perched on rocks fishing in the crowd with bouquets attached to the line. A wagon of tailors who forgot to sew, or use the hot goose, a perambulating pine cone, an observatory with twelve astronomers gazing from the windows, a lady with a dress made entirely of flowers and moss, a cavalier with a coat of mail made entirely of shells, were some of the sights of the carnival. The masked ball I did not presume to attend. It is impossible for you to imagine the delightful weather. Out of doors all day in the sunshine, sitting on benches and reading, studying, writing or visiting until four o'clock. It was nearly five this p. m. when we came in. We have had a fire half an hour this evening which is now 8:30. An open air concert this p. m. at the park everybody taking their ease on a bench or chair, the sea as blue as could be, the peak of the mountains and the distant sails enveloped in the haze of an Indian summer.

CHANGE OF PROPRIETORS

Editors of Fulton Times.

We desire through the columns of your excellent paper to announce to our numerous friends that we have sold our stock of Drugs, Paints, Oils &c., to Mr. M. M. Williams of New Milford Pa., a druggist of long experience who will be present in person on or about the first of April next, and who will devote his whole time to the prosecution and care of his business. Mr. Williams brings from his former home, a reputation of being an earnest, efficient and successful business man, and also the best endorsement of his uprightness, honesty and fair dealing; and as he has expressed a determination to keep up a full stock of the purest and best goods in his line that the market of the world affords, we think we can confidently reccommend him to the confidence and support of all our former friends and patrons: The genial and gentlemanly Mr. Pool, so long identified with the business of the store, will remain with Mr. Williams, and will be most happy to meet his former friends and serve them in his usually kind and courteous manner.

Juvenile Opera Company.

The rain of last Thursday evening did not deter a goodly number of Gouverneur inhabitants from visiting Union Hall for the purpose of hearing Bennett and Moulton's Juvenile Opera Company in the popular operetta "The Magic Slipper." Miss Annie Liebsch, in the difficult role of "Cinderilla," exhibited not only rare ability as an actress, but her powerful soprano voice, not less sweet than it is rich and melodious, won for her the admiration and hearty applause of the audience. Miss Mamie Bruce, as "Prince Poppetti," played the part of Salerno's gallant ruler in a modest and winning manner, displaying a marked talent for pose and expression. Masters Bennie Lodge and E. P. Smith in their mirth provoking acts proved themselves to be comedians of a high order. During the evening the company introduced several selected songs from the operas of "Billee Taylor," "Olivette," "Boccaccio," etc. These were all received with enthusiasm. "The Torpedo and the Whale" being encored. To sum up the entire entertainment, we can truly say that the music was fine, the acting good and the enjoyment unlimited. Those who were fortunate as to be present, as well as those who were not, will be delighted to learn the Union Club has engaged the company to return to Gouverneur in a few weeks.

The only litigation in which the village has been involved is the action of Mrs LaDuke brought against the village during the existence of the previous board. The interests of the village were intrusted to Wm C Stephens Esq, the attorney of the Board and H E Nichols the attorney of the Board at the time the action was brought; the case was referred to Judge Vann of Syracuse, who after trial rendered his decision in favor of the plaintiff for $500 damages; the Board after hearing the attorneys in the case, unanimously voted to appeal the case.

The approach to the lower river bridge for which the sum of $1200 was voted at the last annual meeting has been temporarily repaired so as to be safe until settled weather, when the Board expect to carry ont the plan discussed and adopted by them, viz: W S Nelson & Co to build stone piers sufficient to hold an iron structure; then for the $1200 voted for that purpose the Board will place the contract in the hands of responsible parties for the construction of an iron bridge to cover the space between the race bridge and the river bridge.

During the summer the Fire Department called the attention of the Board to the necessity of procuring new hose. After examination by a committee of the Board, who reported that the Department stood in need of new hose immediately, as what they had was in a very poor condition, and in case of fire would leave them in a helpless condition with two good steamers and no sufficient hose to work with. A special meeting of the tax payers was called to vote the sum of $500 for that purpose which was voted unanimously, and the Board purchased 600 feet of good serviceable hose and instructed the President to borrow the amount until the levy of 1882 when it could be raised without additional expense, which instructions I have carried out.

Mrs Ann S Dodgson as administratrix of the estate of John S Dodgson, has presented to the board a claim against the village for $5,000 damages: this is a case where some two years (or less) ago John Sharp Dodgson and another person were returning from Oswego with a horse and buggy and when opposite Gardner & Seymour's mill they drove into the race and Mr Dodgson lost his life. The claim has been referred to the village attorney.

Our village has been very fortunate during the past year: while other villages and cities have been visited by epidemics; ours has been very healthy; which in a measure is due to the board of health who have been watchful and and ever on the alert to prevent an introduction of any contagious disease. The sanitary condition of our village was never better than it has been for the past year.

I would submit the following estimates of amounts to be raised by tax for the ensuing year for ordinary expenses, Viz.:

Highway Repairs	$1000 00
" Permanent Imprv'm'ts	1000 00
Cross Walks	600 00
Lamps	1100 00
Incidental	1000 00
Fire	1000 00
Clerk	100 00
Printing	100 00
Assessors	100 00
Court Room	52 00
Board of Health	75 00
	$5,027 00

The pavements on First and Oneida streets have become so bad that they are dangerous, and I would recommend that the sum of $1700 be raised for the purpose of repairing the same.

Respectfully submitted
Francis M Wilson,
Fulton, March 13, 1882. President.

AMERICAN LADIES.

The first impression Sara Bernhardt recetved of the Americgn ladies manifested itself thusly:—"Oh! ze ladies, za are so beautiful, such clear complexion I neveac see before," all of which is due to the universal use of Swayne's Ointment for skin diseases, which insures a clear and clean complexion, and a healthy color. This recalls the devene precept "cleanliness is next to Godliness."

WHITEWASHING.

As the beautiful spring weather approaches, Chris Powells is getting in readiness his myriad of whitewash brushes and pails, preparatory to doing artistic and first class work for all who may find it convenient to employ him. Chris is perfect in this business and no furniture or carpets to be removed. Try him. Prices reasonable. Orders left at Dexter's meat market or Phillips' drug store will recieve prompt attention. 43w6

[illegible]

[illegible]
You'll [illegible] when I'm gone from earth
[illegible] bright and fair;
As I have leaned on you while here,
You'll lean on me up there.

I've been a burden many years—
To you a constant care;
And it will be a relief at last,
When I am called up there.

But not a selfish thought, I know,
Has dimmed your heart of love;
You've been so good and true on earth
You'll come to me above.

God grant that I may lead you aid
To bear each burden here,
Until I clasp your hand in love
Upon the other shore.

And then together we will sing
The song of angels bright,
And dwell forever with the blest,
Where love shall be the light.

But while I sleep within the grave,
And round my cherished bed
You think of one you loved on earth,
You'll miss me when I'm dead!

How the hearts of a crowd swell and throb with pitiless hatrid against the myn who coughs during the performance at a theatre, when they know he is too stingy to invest twenty-five cents in a bottle of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup.

Verbal Errors to be Guarded Against.

Accord for give; as "the information was accorded him."

Aggravate for irritate; aggravate is to make worse.

Allude to for refer or mention.

As for that; "not as I know of" for "not that I know of."

Avocation for vocation; a man's vocation is his business; avocations are things that occupy him incidentally.

Balance for rest or remainder.

Character for reputation; one may have a good reputation; but a bad character; the two words should never be confounded.

Dangerous, for in danger; a sick man is sometimes most absurdly said to be dangerous when it is only meant that the poor fellow himself is in danger—a very different thing.

Demean for debase, disgrace or humble. To demean one's self is merely to behave one's self whether well or ill.

Dirt, for earth or loam.

Donate for give.

Execute, for hang, as applied to the criminal. It is the sentence and not the man that is executed.

Healthy, for wholesome; an onion plant may be healthy; but when you pick an onion there is no more healthiness or unhealthiness to that although it may or may not be wholesome as an article of food.

Illy for ill.

Inaugurate for begin.

Kids, for kid gloves.

Learn for teach.

Liable for likely or apt.

Loan for lend.

Pants for pantaloons, or (better still) trousers.

Partake, for eat.

Real, for very; as "real nice." "real pretty."

Reside, for live; residence, for house.

Retire, to go to to bed.

Seldom, or ever, for seldom, if ever, or seldom, or never.

Some, for somewhat: she is some better to-day."

Stop, for stay; "where are you stopping?" This is one of the vilest of witticisms.

Summons (the noun), for summons (the verb).

Those kind of apples, for that kind.

Transpire, for occur.

Vulgar, for immodest or indecent.

Without, for unless.

THE RESULT OF NECESSITY.

What the ancients for want of knowledge in medical science can only be appreciated by contrasting the vast amount of suffering cured and pain alleviated in modern times, by the use of Swayne's Ointment for skin diseases. Its introduction was characterized by the necessrry withdrawal of a score or more of illusive quack nostrums, whose evil effects have left living monuments to denounce them. Thus is exemplified the proverb, Necessity is the mother of Invention.

A Street Car which Carries its Track.

The Accommodation Car campany has begun operations here with a capital stock of $1,000,000, divided between the patentee, T. T. Prosser and F. F. Cole, a real estate man. The object of the company is to build and equip a thousand cars, and put them upon the streets of Chicago. The car is the patent of Mr. Prosser, and as regards present appearance is a queer, oglesome looking craft, which carries its track along with it, and to all intents and purposes will traverse any and all lines of streets. The car which is of ordinary kind, is mounted in the middle upon a truck which sits on four wheels each about one foot in diameter. These wheels run around the inside of steel tires, each about ten feet in diameter, and which rest on the ground, and are held only to the car by a set of wheel clamps. The car is designed to hold fifty people, and the owners claim that the more it carries the easier it runs. It will be stopped in the usual way, and will require two horses to pull it. The owners say they intend putting the cars on the principal streets of the city, and placing the cash fare at 4 cents, and selling thirty rides for $1. [Chicago Times

"DO LIKEWISE."

Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.:—"Five years ago I was a dreadful sufferer from uterine troubles. Having exhausted the skill of three physicians, I was [illegible] discouraged, and so weak I could with difficulty cross the room alone. I began taking your "Fa-[illegible]

[illegible] of them in Wisconsin. They took me to the spare room—that place of desolation in any house that contains one—and gave me a tallow candle to go to bed by. And then there was one of those old feather beds six feet high, that you wonder how under the sun you'll ever climb into. When you do succeed in falling into it, you go down, down, clear out of sight, your legs and arms sticking out in four directions from the coverings, that are too short and too narrow, and you get colds and rheumatism and consumption and die in six months. And then there is the hole in the window for the air—and the cats—to come in. Both come; the air the most numerously, but the cats to stay the longest. Then they always eat breakfast in the night in these houses, and the kitchen, where they do it, is four counties away from the spare room, while the thermometer is 1940° below zero and scratching hard to get lower.

Home is more to a woman than to a man. It is her temple. She is its goddess, its priestess—but oftener its janitor. A man doesn't look so longingly back at the old home, though it never cost him a cent, bought all his clothes and sent him to college. A man likes his home when he gets acquainted in it, because there his stupidity passes for the profoundest wisdom. His jokes are all laughed at (though it needs a glossary to get at their meaning) if he only indicates the laughing place. When a man dies he is wept for at home, but the cold world moves right along as if nothing had happened; fond lovers come to his graveyard even; wear his tombstone smooth sitting on it, contract bad poetry and worse rheumatism and burden the air with labial confectionery. I've heard that there were skeletons in many homes. They never get there unless they are brought. Secrets in the family are bad things. There is one though, that's all right, and that is a handsome Christmas present for the husband, for the bill is sure to be sent to him four days before Christmas, so that everything is made lovely and harmonious."

Matrimonial Nuggets.

A young operator on the central branch at Concordia, Kan., recently got married and the Blade instead of flattering him saying the usual number of sweet things, merely remarked that "H Demaris, operator at the C. B. depot, got married Sunday eve. Hope it will make him better natured, so he can answer a civil question in a gentlemanly way." The Empire gives him the following send off: "All we hope is that his wife will break his head with a broom-stick or mop-handle, or curry him down with a milk-stool if he is not pleasanter around the house than he is around the depot."

The records of Senatobia, Miss., prove the old adge, "All's fair in love and war." A gentleman of Longtown secured a marriage licence of the Senatobia clerk on last Saturday, which he said was to unite him to one of Strayhorn's fairest daughters. On Monday morning a well known gentleman of Strayhorn drove into Senatobia, accompanied by a young lady, was licensed, married, and was well on his way with her in his buggy on a bridal tour to Holly Springs, forty-seven miles distant, before the clerk even discovered that the same lady was registered on his books to marry the knight of Longtown.

Asbury Park, N. J., is much excited over a marriage swindle case. Just before Theodore F. Appleby, a wealthy resident of the place, the owner of the Hotel Bristol, and a widower with three children, died from a disease brought on by his mental trouble and alcholism, he he stated that while on a visit to a hotel at Ol[illegible]lge, owned by Mrs. Spencer, and, in a hopeless state of intoxication he was married to her, being held up while the ceremony was performed. It is believed that the object of the disgraceful proceeding was part of a conspiracy in Mrs. Spencer's behalf, to get Appleby's property. His brother, who is President of a New York insurance company, says he will spend $100,000 to bring the conspiretors to justice.

A few years ago there lived in Oxford County, Me., an aged widow, who had fifteen children. A peculiarity in this family was what may be called "double marriages." Thus two of the daugters married brothers named Palmer, two of the sons married sisters named Barrows; two other sons married sisters, named Bonney; two granddaughters, sisters, married brothers named Bonney, and thus became sisters-in-law to their uncles' wives; two other grandaughters, sisters, married brothers named Bonney, cousins of those already named. Thus there were five double marriages in this family—three of the children and two of the grandchildren of this old lady. Another peculiarity of this family was that twelve of them, six sons and six daughters, setteled down on farms within two miles of their mother. On one road there were three owning farms next to one another, and on another road five in succession, and the farms on the first road were only divided from some of those of the second by a river that ran between them.

(D. D., Professor of Greek in the Rochester University and New Testament reviser).

Thousands of equally strong endorsements—many of them in cases where hope was abandoned—have been voluntarily given, showing the remarkable power of Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure, in all diseases of the kidneys, liver or urinary organs. If any one who reads this has any physical trouble, remember the great danger of delay.

A French Rogue's Trick.

"Colonel Gaston, U. S. A.," stopping at the "Continental Hotel," Paris, called at a jewelry shop in that city and left some articles for repair; then he came and bought a silver cigarette case, paying in both instances the amount due. Then he decided upon buying a bandeau and necklace of diamonds valued at $20,000, which he locked up in a little leathern bag that he had brought with him. After figuring on the value a few minutes—during which time a customer in a big overcoat entered and looked at, but did not buy, some sleeve buttons—the Colonel presented his check for the amount due on the diamonds. The lady in charge of the shop, refused to take the check, and he said he would go and draw the money himself, which he did, leaving the bag in charge of the lady. She took the precaution to feel of its contents, and much to her relief recognized the peculiar form of the diamond bandeau and the stones of the necklace within. She waited until nightfall, and as her customer did not return, she cut open the bag. To her consternation she found that it contained nothing but some bits of wood and wire formed in the shape of the bandeau, and a string of glass beads that did duty for the necklace. The customer in the big overcoat who came to look at the sleeve-buttons had probably managed to change the bags. The sharp thieves have not been caught.

There is More Strength restoring power in a bottle of Parker's Ginger Tonic than in a bushel of malt or a gallon of milk. This explains why invalids find it such a wonderful invigorant for mind and body. See other column. 37m1

Packing Eggs.

The question of storing eggs was discussed at a recent Iowa convention, and it was conceded by all that cold storage, temperature 40 to 42 degrees, kept uniform, with eggs packed properly or in cases, will keep them in good condition from six to nine months; but they must be used soon after being taken out of the cold storage, as they soon spoil. Eggs become musty from being packed in bad material; will become musty in cases, as a change in temperature from lower to higher causes the eggs to sweat, and paper to become moist and taint the eggs. Well dried oats about a year old are the best for packing. Eggs become injured by jarring in shipping, by mixing. Fresh eggs mix worse than those kept in cold storage. Eggs held in cold storage in the West should be shipped in refrigerator cars in the summer. Eggs will keep thirty days longer if stood on the little end than in any other position; must be kept in an even temperature and a pure atmosphere. Eggs laid on the side attach to the shell, and are badly injured. To prevent imposition as to freshness of eggs, the egg gatherers should candle them when they get them from the farmers. Eggs keep better in the dark than in the light.

EASILY PROVEN.—It is easily proven that malarial fevers, constipation, torpidity of the liver and kidneys, general debility, nervousness, and neuralgic ailments yield readily to this great disease conqueror, Hop Bitters. It repairs ravages of disease by converting the food into rich blood, and it gives new life and vigor to the aged and infirm always. 4t13

RESCUED FROM DEATH

William J. Coughlin of Somerville, Mass, says: In the fall of 1861 I was taken with bleeding of the lungs followed by a severe cough. I lost my appetite and flesh and was confined to my bed. In 1877 I was admitted to the hospital. The doctors said I had a hole in my lung as big as a half dollar. A one time a report went around that I was dead. It gave up hope, but a friend told me of DR WILLIAM HALL'S BALSAM FOR THE LUNGS. I got a bottle, when to my surprise I began to feel better, and to-day I feel better than for three years past.

"I write this hoping every one afflicted with diseased Lungs will take DR WILLIAM HALL'S BALSAM and be convinced that CONSUMPTION CAN BE CURED. I can positively say it has done more good than all the other medicines I have taken since my sickness.

How to Secure Health.

It seems strange that any one will suffer from derangements brought on by impure blood, when Scovill's Sarsaparilla and Stillingia, or Blood and Liver Syrup will restore health to the physical organization. It has been proven to be the best blood purifier ever discovered, curing scrofula, syphilitic disorders, weakness of the kidneys, erysipelas, malaria, nervous disorders, debility bilious complaints, and all diseases of the blood, liver, kidneys, stomach, skin, etc. A single bottle will prove a health renewer. for it acts like a charm, especially when the complaint is of an exhaustive nature.

THE INDEPENDENT.

"The foremost religious newspaper of the United States."—The Rev Joseph Cook.

Established in 1848, as an advocate of anti-slavery and of reforms in religion and politics, the independent at once became a recognized power throughout the country. Its influence has ever since been constantly growing. As it has fought against slavery and for cheap postage, so it will fight against Mormanism, for Civil Service Reform, and for purity in politics, and general uprightness in all things. It employs the best editorial talent and speaks fearlessly on all subjects. It pays for contributed articles and for editorial services more than double the amount paid by any other weekly newspaper.

It publishes more religious discussions than the religious reviews, and more poetry and stories popular monthlies, and gives more information than an annual cyclopedia. The long cable dispatches recently published from the great Methodist Council in London are a good illustration of what the Independent is constantly doing. A list of the most prominent religious and philosophical writers, poets and story writers in the country is the list of the contributors of the Independent. Besides the space set aside for those writers and for editorials, there are twenty-two distinct departments, edited by twenty-two specialists, which include Biblical Research, Sanitary, Legal, Fine Arts, Music, Science Pebbles, Personalities, Hymn Notes, School and College, Literature, Religious Inteiligence, Missions, Sunday School, News of the Week, Finance, Insurance, Stories, puzzles, and Agriculture. 32 pages in all.

The [illegible]

No breath from a joy long departed
Can shadow my [illegible] with tears!
Those hours, so gay and light-hearted,
Are [illegible] with the years.
Then ho! for the joys the present can bring,
Nor sigh for the past with its drooping wing.

Sweet echoes may come, like the ringing
Of curfew at close of the day,
To mock me, but joy will be singing
The gloom and the shadow away.
Then ho! for the moments that sing as they go,
And mantle the earth with their beautiful glow!

Why ponder, with tears and with sighing,
On days that are over and gone?
Guard moments, still sweet, in their dying,
And think not of night, but of dawn.
Then ho! for the brightness that lingers each hour
In sunset and starlight on bird and on flower.

The past, with its joys and sadness,
Is gone, but the present remains,
Oh, fill up the measure with gladness
While hope all her beauty retains,
Then ho! for the heart that is happy and strong,
And sings as it goes on its journey along.

Great Gull Mine.

It was as wild a day as one often sees, that Doctor Rand came into town. Old Pete, who drives the coach, had come for the last ten miles with the reins tied to the dashboard; so stiff, if you'll take my word for it, that his pocket-flask was a quarter-full of the stuff which keeps the cold out; and you may know that nothing but pure inability to bend his elbow could have produced that result.

"And that thar tenderfoot stuck to the box all the way from the Notch," he announced, in a sort of triumphant admiration, when he was in a measure thawed, both within and without. "Thar's the makin' of a good citizen in that chap. Lightnin' he is!"

Naturally, the inhabitants of Billikin's Flat were anxious to see the person who came so highly recommended. He was a dark, thin man, with hollow eyes and flashing teeth—the very picture of the sinister villain of drama or novel, and one whom the miners speedily learned to respect. He had none of the vices which almost rank as virtues among the floating classes of the West.

With his first appearance in the bar came the usual invitation of "Liquor, stranger," from a big, red-shirted fellow, who was not, in the elegant parlance of the camp, "used to chawin' his words twist."

Doctor Rand measured him with a glance. Quick as a flash, his right hand shot out, and the miner staggered and went down without knowing what hurt him. Rand put one foot on his breast and held him there, while he surveyed the thunderstruck companions of the fallen man with a complacent smile.

"I owe you an apology, gentlemen," said he. "That invitation is a custom here, I take it. I'm sure you'll excuse me, when I tell you that it is my invariable habit to knock down any man who asks me to take a drink. A few plain words and a little prompt action sometimes save any amount of bother. Business has brought me to Billikin's Flat; it may detain me here for some time, and I don't choose to meddle or be meddled with in the smallest degree while I remain. To the gentleman who has the door," he added, removing his foot, "I just wish to say that I bear him no grudge whatever, but at the same time I'm perfectly willing to give him any satisfaction he wishes."

"The gentleman who had the floor" was a knight of the pistol, and the bully of the camp. All there supposed that the insult which had been offered him could only be wiped out with blood.

"I crawfish," said that individual, frankly, as he slowly resumed the perpendicular. "I'm not such a fool as not to know when I've found my master; but if any of you fellows," glaring round, "choose to take advantage of this little happenstance, I'll give you leave to try it."

It was a diplomatic stroke which saved him with a whole skin, and still left him his supremacy over his companions, while no one cared to interfere with the doings of Dr. Rand after that.

Nobody knew what the business was exactly which brought him to Billikin's Flat. He might have been a dabster on stocks, a speculator on the lookout for points; he idled about in a busy way, made several notes of the various mines and took short jaunts into the surrounding country. But everywhere a spirit of anxious suspicion looked out of his hollow eyes. People began to regard him as one who carried an unholy secret, which would not let him rest.

"I'll swear that I seed him down, thar by Dark Canyon at three o'clock one mornin', a-pilin' up stones like for a grave," communicated one man, in awe-stricken tones. "I'll bet ye a [illegible] body, who has never been buried yet."

"Pisened a hull family, more like, and brought their [illegible] a post-mortem," [illegible] dividual. "They do say he has a hull bottle of [illegible] I wouldn't be the one to get him out [illegible], if I put any value on life."

Out of the [illegible]

[illegible] to go to work there for [illegible].

"[illegible], I hope?" said Atwater.

"[illegible]," [illegible] "Curiosity," [illegible] on the footsteps of every [illegible] that has got mixed up with it. [illegible] lowed up more money than'll ever be got out of it, if it were in tip-top running order to-day."

"You can't tell me more than I know about that," said Atwater, with [illegible]. "My father was one of the original company. He had faith in the mine, and held on when others were selling out at any price. There's been an offer made him lately—a ridiculously small one, but enough to send me out here to see if there were any new developments in the case."

Doctor Rand, who sat reading in the same room where this conversation went on, now put down his paper, and came forward.

"Have you an assay of the mine?" he asked.

"Yes. Not promising, I must admit, but a few feet of progress might change all that."

Yet these mines, so far as I can see, are a good deal like our oil wells in the East. There are a dozen dry holes to every flowing well."

"And half of them would probably reach oil if they were pushed far enough," Atwater declared.

His confidence was dampened by consultation with practical miners of the place. Not one of them would give him encouragement regarding the paying capacity or the Great Gull Mine. There was the result of the assay in black and white; there was the cost of the repairs, the necessity of working capital, and last, but by no means least, the deeply-rooted conviction that nothing but evil could result from the reopening of the work—evil to every one, from the most distant stockholder to the laborer whose only interest was the day's wages he earned.

Instances were cited, from the past experience of the mine, of how this person had been taken with fever; how that one had broken his leg in the drift; how a slip had crushed the life out of half a dozen poor fellows at once; how an agent, crazed by his responsibility in these unhappy results, had blown out his brains; in fact, how no one had touched the enterprise ever so remotely without calamity following upon the step.

John Atwater himself could have added his mite to the story had he chosen, for this mine was the dead weight which had dragged him and his into the mire of poverty, from which there seemed no escape; but he ridiculed the idea of fate having anything to do in the matter. The case of the agent was one of delirium tremens, and he had a doctor's statement to back it; men were dying and accidents happening every day outside of the Great Gull's limits, with no sinister influence ascribed to the cause, but the material difficulties could not be reasoned away.

When he went to view the opening, he found crumbling timbers and fallen masses of rock choking the passage-way, machinery ruined by disuse, damp and desolation working their inevitable effect in decay.

"I'd advise you to go back and take up with that offer," said Doctor Rand, who accompanied him in his exploration. "It's safe to say that the man who made it has never been here.

But Atwater was not satisfied. The evident freshness of much of the ruin struck him, but seeing his companion's impatience, he allowed himself to be drawn away without remonstrance.

A day or two later he came into Rand's room, with a glow of excitement in his face. The latter shot one look at him, piercing and comprehensive, then shut his lips in a tight, hard line.

"I didn't say anything to you, doctor, but I got an idea into my head the other day. It looked to me as if some one had been meddling with the mine. I went back there to-day and made sure of it. You remember that drift to the left, which seemed all closed up by fallen rubbish. Well, there was an opening left, big enough for a man to crawl through, and beyond that the passage is clean and clear. There's somebody working it on the sly, and—what do you think of that?"

He laid a glittering fragment of rock on the table as he spoke—a soft, crumbling substance, that could almost be broken apart with the fingers, with the specks of yellow metal thickly imbedded in it.

"You mean that you got it there?"

"I got it out of a crevice in the gneiss rock, which has been worked in as deep as the length of my arm. It's all hand-[illegible] for the harder rock hasn't been [illegible] at all. I actually believe that a [illegible] of this weight is pure gold. I showed a bit of it to Timmins, as I came along, and it set him nearly wild."

"Did you tell him where you got it?"

"Not I. I wanted to consult you first. Just to think, if I should have stumbled across a fortune, after all. Doc, do you know what it is to be inflated with joy? I feel light as a thistledown, and I—I'd like to kiss some one if I had the chance."

His exuberance was checked as he caught a glimpse of the other's grim face.

"Don't you see it as I do?" he demanded, quickly. "Then there's been a job put [illegible]

[illegible] Pulse quick, skin feverish, [illegible]. I prescribe twenty-four hours in bed, and a mustard-plaster at the soles of your feet. There's nothing like a mustard-plaster to draw the quirks out of a man."

"If I could only get to sleep, I'd take a nap [illegible]. I hae a 'bee in my bonnet,' as the Scotch say, and slept none last night."

"A little chloral will fix you, or a hot punch, if you prefer it."

"The punch, thank you. And you'll go?"

"I'll go. I tell you plainly, I haven't much faith in your bonanza. It won't do to gauge by a single specimen picked out of a crevice, but I'll wake you up in time to catch a fever prowling about in that damp mine."

It was through no fault of the doctor that Atwater failed to sleep well on the draught he mixed for him. He left him slowly sipping the steaming beverage, a lazy sense of satisfaction already stealing over his nerves and lulling the active stir of his thoughts to rest. And in the last glance which Doctor Rand bestowed upon him, there was a sparkle at once malignant and victorious.

An hour after midnight, he was lighting his safety-lamp within the opening of the Great Gull Mine. The light flickered and cast weird shadows; a multitude of mine sounds awoke in the place—faint crackings of the rocks, down-dropping fragments, chirrups of insects, and hollow, resounding echoes which met every movement of the man.

He was well used to them all, yet he stopped to listen more than once as he made his way into the drift.

"Pshaw!" he muttered. "It's no time for nervousness now. I must finish my work here, and be miles away before that fool comes out of his innocent slumber."

A mocking smile curled his lip, but he lost no time in setting about the work he had to do.

From an angle of the drift he brought out a large, leather valise. Then, going from point to point, he unearthed various small but evidently weighty packages, which he packed in it, pausing from time to time to test his strength with its weight.

"I could hardly take more," he muttered. "It's as well I cached the rest."

Leaving the valise, when he had strapped it securely, he went to the opening of the drift and stooped down, with his lamp in his hand.

All the noises, which had died down for a time, were exaggerated a thousand-fold in his ears. It seemed to him that all the space around was filled with the echo of footsteps.

A clammy moisture forced itself out through the pores of his skin; and then, suddenly, the supernatural terror which will sometimes takes possession of the strongest minds left him, and his nerve came back, as he faced about to meet a tangible enemy.

The light of his lamp, flashed into the darkness, revealed John Atwater, covering him with a cocked revolver.

"Halt there, Doctor Rand! Throw down your weapons!"

Taken at a disadvantage, the latter had no choice but to obey.

"Now turn and go out before me. You had better! I warn you I will have no mercy on a man who betrays me after I have trusted him as I trusted you."

"It appears to me you couldn't have been as innocent as you seemed," sneered Rand. "I'd have sworn that you didn't suspect me when you were so confidential, last evening."

"Nor did I. I'd have swallowed your drugged stuff, and waked—if I ever wakened—to find myself a victim, but for the accident of a letter from my father reaching me just in time—a letter in which he says, 'I have just wormed out of the agent that the party who wants to buy is one Doctor Rand.' It is only necessary to add that I was before you, and have been watching you here, sir."

Swerving aside, to avoid the bullet which instantly cut the air, Doctor Rand bounded forward and closed with his adversary.

The lamp went out; there was a short, sharp struggle in the darkness, which ended in the dull thud of a human body thrown backward against the rocky wall.

It was the doctor who regained his feet a moment after, and stood listening for some further sound.

None came. He felt for his match-box, but it must have slipped from his pocket during the encounter. A red point of light near the entrance brought some forgotten fact to his mind.

"Well," he said, as if confronting some new contingency, "why not blow it up all the same?"

He began to hunt around in the darkness for his valise, but without success. Twice he groped through the entire length of the drift, avoiding that inert body the first time, turning it ruthlessly over and searching around it the next—all in vain. And, meantime, the red glow was creeping further on.

With a muttered curse, he sprang forward and tramped upon the lighted fuse. He passed through the entrance into the main tunnel, intent upon securing a light, and again those mysterious noises of the night swelled in volume, changed to the grinding and rending of weakening timbers, and, with a thunderous sound, the roof of the Great Gull Mine fell in, burying Doctor Rand under hundreds of tons of the mountain's weight.

Atwater came back to consciousness, all confused, some scattered debris around him, but the drift had suffered no serious injury. There was another danger threatening, however.

The spark, which Rand had stamped out, [illegible]

[illegible] but Atwater found himself [illegible] a narrow space, with [illegible] a crushing weight [illegible]. A faint breath of air [illegible] light [illegible].

He shouted himself hoarse, and nothing but sullen echoes from the small space around him replied. He felt his brain reel and give way, as the thought grew upon him that he was as surely lost as the enemy who at least had escaped such agony as this.

Two days afterward, the miners, who had finally heard his cries, dug into his prison. When the white-faced man, with hair silver-streaked, came forth with tottering steps, not one there would believe at first that this was John Atwater.

"It's the Great Gull's luck," said somebody, solemnly, when he had told his story. "But it's well you were in the drift instead of the tunnel. All the spades in camp couldn't have dug you out of that."

Atwater, in his gratitude, divided the contents of the valise between the men who had rescued him; and he would have left the camp as poor as he entered it, had not some one recalled the grave-building experience of Doctor Rand. Buried deep in the earth, under the piled-up rocks, was found the cached wealth which he had taken from the mine. This was voted to belong to Atwater, and as all agreed that the gold-bearing rock must have existed merely in the form of a "pocket"—an idea which was borne out by the doctor's act in blowing up the mine—no attempt was ever made at finding it again.

COSTLY EXTRAVAGANCE.

A social danger threatening New York today is that the rage for showy representation will crush out unostentatious dinner hospitality. Nothing can promote real festive enjoyment and good talk more thoroughly than eight persons who suit each other and like to meet, assembled around a comfortable, modestly appointed dining-table, while perhaps nothing can promote it much less than twice that number who do not care a button about each other's society around a dining-table, however generous. But moral cowardice is prompting many to devote all they have to spend on hospitality to a very few gorgeous luncheons and dinners instead of to a constant stream of unpretentious but comfortable entertainments. The money spent in the mere outside show to the state dinner would pay the additional wages to a good cook, thus rendering outside aid needless, and would enable the master of the house to bring home a friend to dinner at any time. It is really amazing how very few people there are in New York city, even at this period of luxury, who are prepared to be taken unawares. At houses where a gorgeous show is made at lavish expense on company days the by-no-means-difficult-to-please diner would find on other occasions a very poor sort of meal. A lady some time since hired a cook who had been living with a family who drove a handsome carriage and lived in a big brown-stone house. Amazed to find how incompetent the woman was, her employer inquired as to the culinary customs of her former place. "Well, you see, m'um, the gentlemen mostly dined down town, and the ladies had a kind of lunch, and there were chops in the evening'. On Sundays there'd be a bit o' beef, or a turkey, perhaps, and when we had comp'ny it all come from Delmonico."

A singularly interesting case was lately referred to by the Brooklyn Eagle. It was told by Mr. W. A. Davenport, connected with the house of Messrs. Butler, Pitkin & Co., 476 Broadway New York, and concerned the marvelous cure of Mr. Ezra D. Clarkson. near Newark N. J of a terrible case of rheumatism, which other remedys had failed even to alleviate He was on his way to a hospital when Mr. Deavenport met him and induced him to try St. Jacobs Oil, with the result named.—Cleveland (O.) Practical Farmer.

KING KOFFEE'S AXE.

The gold axe of King Koffee of Ashantee, lately sent, for an unexplained reason, to Queen Victoria, has been deposited in the South Kensington Museum. It is a triangular blade of iron, apparently cut from a piece of boiler plate, roughly stuck into a clumsy handle of African oak. The handle is covered with leopard skin, part of which, immediately above the blade, is deeply soiled, apparently with blood. Bands of thin gold, enriched with uncouth chevrons and lunettes, are placed round the handle. The sheath of the blade, which is of tiger skin, accompanies this hideous implement, and attached to it is the sole element which has anything like artistic merit. This is a nondescript object of beaten gold, shaped like a large cockle shell, with curved horns extended from the hinge, and decorated with lines and punctures and open work of quasi-scrolls.

SHIP BUILDING ON THE CLYDE.

The year 1881 was one of remarkable activity in the ship building industry of the Clyde. No fewer than two hundred and sixty-one vessels, with an aggregate measurement of three hundred and forty-one thousand twenty-two tons, were launched. In 1880, which showed the largest total of any year except 1874, the tonnage reached two hundred and forty-eight thousand eight hundred. Notwithstanding this large output, the prospects are of the brightest description, as it is understood that shipbuilders have a larger number of contracts on hand than they had at the beginning of 1881. An unprecedentedly large number of the vessels launched during the year were built of steel.

It is often of great benefit to one to be dammed. Little [illegible] never become great lakes unless they are dammed.

THE SUN.
NEW YORK, 1882.
The Sun for 1882 will make its fourteenth annual revolution under the present management, shining, as always, for all, big and little, mean and gracious, contented and unhappy, Republican and Democratic, depraved and virtuous, intelligent and obtuse. The Sun's light is for mankind and womankind of every sort; but its genial warmth is for the good, while it pours hot discomfort on the blistering backs of the persistently wicked.
The Sun of 1868 was a newspaper of a new kind. It discarded many of the forms, and a multitude of the superfluous words and phrases of ancient journalism. It undertook to report in a fresh, succinct, unconventional way all the news of the world, omitting no event of human interest, and commenting upon affairs with the fearlessness of absolute independence. The success of this experiment was the success of The Sun. It effected a permanent change in the style of American newspapers. Every important journal established in this country in the dozen years past has been modelled after The Sun. Every important journal already existing has been modified and bettered by the force of the Sun's example.
The Sun of 1882 will be the same outspoken, truthtelling, and interesting newspaper.
By a liberal use of the means which an abundant prosperity affords, we shall make it better than ever before.
We shall print all the news, putting it in readable shape, and measuring its importance, not by the traditional yardstick, but by its real interest to the people. Distance from Printing House Square is not the first consideration with The Sun. Whenever anything happens worth reporting we get the particulars whether it happens in Brooklyn or in Bokhara.
In politics we have decided opinions; and are accustomed to express them in language that can be understood. We say what we think about men and events. That habit is the only secret of success of The Sun's political course.
The Weekly Sun gathers into eight pages the best matter of the seven daily issues. An Agricultural Department of unequalled merit, full market reports and a liberal proportion of literary scientific and domestic intelligence complete The Weekly Sun, and make it the best newspaper for the farmer's house old that was ever printed.
Who does not know and read and like The Sunday Sun, each number of which is a Golconda of interesting literature, with the best poetry of the day, prose every line worth reading, news, humor—matter enough to fill a good-sized book, and infinitely more varied and entertaining than any book, big or little?
If our idea of what a newspaper should be pleases you, send for The Sun.
Our terms are as follows:
For the daily Sun, a four page sheet of twenty-eight columns, the price by mail, post paid, is 55 cents a month, or $6 50 a year; or, including the Sunday paper, an eight page sheet of fifty-six columns, the price is 65 cents per month, or $7 70 a year, postage paid.
The Sunday edition of The Sun is also furnished separately at $1 20 a year, postage paid
The price of the Weekly Sun, eight pages, fifty-six columns, is $1 a year, postage paid. For clubs of ten sending $10 we will send an extra copy free.

The Century Magazine
(SCRIBNER'S MONTHLY,)
FOR THE COMING YEAR.
With the November number began the new series under the title of the Century Magazine, which will be, in fact, a new, enlarged and improved "Scribner." The page is somewhat larger and wider, admitting pictures of a larger size, and increasing the reading matter about Fourteen Additional Pages.
The following is a summary of the leading features of the new series for the year:
A New Novel by Mrs Burnett (author of "That Lass o' Lowries," etc.), "Through one Administration," a story of Washington life.
Studies of the Louisiana Creoles, By Geo. W. Cable, author of "the Grandissimes" etc. A series of illustrated papers, on the traditions and romance of Creole life in Louisiana.
A Novel by W. D. Howells (author of "A Chance Acquaintance," etc.) dealing with characteristic features of American life.
Ancient and Modern Sculpture. A History of Ancient Sculpture by Mrs. Lucy M. Mitchell, [illegible] ed of the masterpieces of sculpture. There will also be papers on "Living English Sculptors," and on the "Younger Sculptors of America," fully illustrated.
The Opera in New York, by Richard Grant White. A popular and valuable series, to be illustrated with wonderful completeness and beauty.
Architecture and decoration in America will be treated in a way to interest both householder and housewife; with many practical as well as beautiful illustrations from recent designs.
Representative Men and Women of the 19th Century. Biographical sketches accompanied by portraits of George Eliot, Robert Browning, Rev Frederick W. Robertson (by the late Dean Stanley,) Matthew Arnold, Christina Rossetti, and Cardinal Newman, and of the younger American authors, Wm. D. Howells Henry James Jr., and Geo. W. Cable.
Scenes of Thackeray's Hawthornes, and George Eliot's Novels. Succeeding the illustrated series on the scenes of Dickens's novels.
The reform of the Civil service. Arrangements have been made for a series of able papers on this pressing political question.
Poetry and Poets in America. There will be studies of Longfellow, Whittier Emerson, Lowell, and others, by E. C. Stedman.
Stories, Sketches and Essays may be expected from Charles Dudley warner, W. D. Howells "Mark Twain," Edward Eggleston, Harry James, Jr, John Muir, Miss Gordon Cuming, "H. H." Geo. W. Cable, Joel Chandler, Harris A. Redwood, F. D. Millet, Noah Brooks, Frank R. Stockton, Constance F. Woolson H. H. Boyesen, Albert Stickney, Washington Gladden, John Burroughs, Parke Godwin, Tommaso Salvini, Henry King, Robert Ingersoll, E. L. Godkin, E. B. Washburne, and many others.
One or two papers no "The Adventures of the Tile Club," and an original Life of Bewick, the engraver by Austin Dobson, are other features to be later announced
The Editorial Department, and "The World's Work" will be considerably enlarged.
The price of the Century Magazine will remain at $4 per year (35 cents a number.) The portrait (size 21 x 27) of the late Dr Holland, issued just before his death, photographed from a life-size drawing by Wyatt Eaton, will possess a new interest to the readers of this magazine. It is offered at $5 retail, or together with the Century Magazine for $6.50. Subscriptions are taken by the publishers, and by book sellers and news-dealers everywhere.

Another bill recently introduced provides that no person shall be eligible to the office of school commissioner, who does not hold a diploma from a state normal school, or a college, or from a superintendent of public instruction. He must also have had three years experience as a teacher.

A strike of the spinners in the Pacific mills, Lawrence, Mass., has caused an entire suspension of work, throwing some 5000 operators out of employment. The whole force has been restless for a year or so and has been waiting for an opportunity to strike for an advance. The mill-owners are jubilant over the strike saying an overburdened market will warrant a suspension for three months and the mills will not be put in operation again unless the hands are willing to accept a still further reduction. Strikes are always impolitic.

The anti-polygamy bill has passed both the House and Senate and now awaits president Arthur's signature. This is the measure framed by Senator Edmunds, and it is the most radical effort yet made to extripate polygamy from the Mormon trerritory. It wipes out of existnece the whole form of territorial government now in operation there, and entrusts the organization of the new government to three commissioners, to be named by the president. The commissioners are to be the Judges of elections, and no polygamist can participate in the election or serve as a member of the new legislature. The practical effect of the measure therefore is to disfranchise the bulk of the citizens of the territory and to keep them disfanchised, as long as they choose to continue the polygamous relation.

The overflow of the Mississippi river is rendering desolate a vast area of country. Thousands of people have been made homeless and the water continues to rise and embankments to give way. In a communication sent to congress Monday, the secretary of war estimates the number of persons rendered destitute by the floods at 85,000, divided as follows: In Missouri two thousand two hundred, Illinois two thousand, Kentucky eight hundred, Tennessee five thousand, Mississippi thirty thousand, Arkansas twenty thousand, and Louisiana twenty five thousand. Seven hundred and thirteen thousand rations have been distributed. As the appropriation already made is only sufficient to purchase eight hundred thousand rations, the supply will exhausted in Aakansas Missisippi and Louissana about the twenty eighth of March. No estimate can be made of the time during which the necessity for congressional aid will continue.

We must not forget that simply at [illegible] would precipitate a panic and the double entrance doors, both opening in, would stand more than an even chance of being closed and held so by the struggling crowd. Permit me to suggest a cheap manner of partially avoiding this danger, viz.: place a partition across each one of the halls and hang a large door therein on double spring hinges permitting it to swing both ways. I would also hang the entrance doors in the same manner.

Further than this I would place effective fire escapes on the outside of the building.

We cannot close our eyes to the great danger here suggested and cooly say there is no danger, for recent occurrences, particularly the burning of the "Morse" building in New York, which burned so quickly that the 2d story occupants had barely time to escape, proves the error of such an assumption. On the Board of Education rests the responsibility and the people will be only too happy to sustain them.

Respectfully Yours

At Miss Saunderson's, on First street, can be found a beautiful line of Filling Silks, Embroidery Silks, and a [illegible] line of Ladies' [illegible] Goods. Also a first-class stock of [illegible]

[illegible] in this section of [illegible] county as a newspaper publisher, [illegible] from the West and settled in business at Parish.

W. H. Slocum of the Slocum House, Central Square, is reported to have suddenly left that town accompanied by a young woman named Archer of Constantia.

M. L. Hunt & Son, of Oswego, have just purchased from A. M. Thompson, of Granby Centre, the thoroughbred Holstein bull "Oswego," bred by A. P. Wright, of Buffalo.

Last Thursday, Dr. John P. Gray, superintendent of the state insane asylum at Utica was shot in the cheek by a crank named Remshaw. The doctor was sitting in his office in the evening and without warning an attempt was made to take his life. He is rapidly convalescing.

Remshaw was arrested. He proves to be a worthless vagabond of the Guiteau stripe with as an unsavory reputation. It is hoped this Remshaw will be sternly dealt with. The safety of the community demands the forcible suppression of "cranks" of the Guiteau and Remshaw order.

A fire was discovered in McCarthy's china hall, Oswego, Saturday night about 11:30. The fire originated in the cellar. The fire was subdued without serious loss to the building. Crockery and other stock to the amount of about $30,000 was destroyed. Gordon's dry goods store, adjacent to McCarthy's suffered a loss on stock by water and smoke of about $5000.

Mr. McCarthy sent a buyer to New York Monday night for a new stock and will be ready for business as soon as the apjustors view the premises and the repairs are made to the building. He will probably be interrupted but a few days.

Last evening's Oswego Palladium says Surrogate Cook of Onondaga county has decided that probate of the will of John Halstead, deceased, should be refused on the ground that the testator was not competent to make a will when he made and executed the same, and has entered an order accordingly. John Halstead, of Lysander, an old bachelor, left an estate of $90,000 at his death in June, 1880 $4,800 of which he gave to relatives and the balance to the town of Lysander for a perpetual school fund. His relatives several of whom live in Volney and Granby, this county, made a vigorous contest of the will, and with success as it turns out, for the property will now be divided between them.

The Syracuse Herald of Monday published an account exposing George Adcook, section superintendent of the Erie canal, charging him with malfeasance in office; in applying funds of the state to his own private use, by employing Isaac Van Antwerp to work on the state scow and drawing his pay regularly, while in reality Van Antwerp did more or less work on Adcook's farm, but drew his pay from the state treasury by vouchers and in regular form. State detective Kelley, of Albany, has been in Syracuse for some days working up the case, and learned enough so that the case was taken before the grand jury, which is now in session.

The grand jury failed to indict Adcook. A state official who is looking after the matter says an attempt will be made to indict him in another portion of the state.

THE "GOLDEN BLOOM OF YOUTH" may be retained by using Dr Pierce's "Favorite Prescription" a specific for "female complaints." By druggists.

THE WORLD'S EPILEPTIC INSTITUTE.

While passing through St Joseph, and having heard a great deal about the World's Epileptic institute located here, I concluded to pay it a short visit. We were met by Dr. Richmond, the proprietor, who has gained a reputation as broad as the land. He is a rather small, yet pre-possessing man, of very affable and gentlemauly manners. He gave us a hearty welcome, and took great pains in showing us through his palatial and mammoth institution. It is a five-story building, 200x180 feet, with basement, and contains over 800 rooms, and can accomodate five hundred patients, and every room is furnished in the most elegant and lavish manner. But we will begin at the office, which is a large room furnished with rosewood furniture throughout. In the office are thousands of photographs of those who have been benefited by the Nervine. The walls are elegantly papered, and are profusely decorated with rich and costly pictures, relieved here and there by busts in stone and bronze of eminent men of this and other countries. In connection with the Institute is a mammoth printing house and bindry, occupying six or seven large rooms, and a score of presses are kept running night and day turning out work for the doctor. The office is one of the finest and most complete in the west, and he has the rooms decorated, carpeted and trimmed with as much care and luxury as his own private office. On the first floor of this mammoth building is the doctor's private office, the printing department, bindry, tank room, packing, bottling and consultation rooms, barber shop, drug store, etc., all of which are fitted up regardless of expense. The second floor has the hotel office, dining, billiard, and cooking rooms, many guest chambers and several parlors. The third and fourth floors are all rooms, all of which are furnished with Brussells carpets and the finest furniture. The billiard room has six tables, all of which are free to the guests of the house and their friends. The bath room is large and neat and is also free to the guests. The entire building is surrounded on the east and south by an elegant five-acre park, in which are lovely trees, beds of rich and rare plants, gravel walks and drives, delicious arbors, and a most beautiful summer house. There are also a number of fountains that add wonderfully to the beauty of the park, which is truly one of the most lovely and attractive in the western country, and the Institute has no equal for luxury and comfort in the world. Everything is perfection, and the visitor is at once charmed with the entire place and its surroundings. An idea of the immensity of the doctor's business may be given when we say that on the day we visited the Institute he showed us to his [illegible]

[illegible]
"[illegible]"
She was not to be [illegible].
"[illegible]," said [illegible];
I'll wear that hat"—and she clenched her hand—
"Till the crack of the Judgment—day,
I'll fasten it tight around my throat,
And pin it fast to my hair.
Let there come the doubtfullest hurricane,
The world shall find it there."

There came a breeze from heaven
Of a rather malevolent kind.
It caught that hat, and took it up,
And the lady went behind.
Now, this was several years ago,
And all of them full of pain;
For with nothing to ride she still sails on,
And will never come down again.

PILES! PILES!! PILES!!!

A SURE CURE FOUND AT LAST. NO ONE NEED SUFFER

A sure cure for the Blind, Bleeding, Itching and Ulcerated Piles has been discovered by Dr Williams (an Indian remedy), called Dr William's Indian Ointment. A single box has cured the worst chronic cases of 25 and 30 years standing. No one need suffer five minutes after applying this wonderful soothing medicine. Lotions, instruments, and Electuaries do more harm than good. William's Ointment absorbs the tumors, allays the intense itching (particularly at night after getting warm in bed), acts as a poultice; gives instant and painless relief, and is prepared only for Piles, itching of the private parts, and nothing else.

Read what the Hon J. M. Coffinberry, of Cleveland, says about Dr William's Indian Pile Ointment: I have used scores of pile cures, and it affords me pleasure to say that I have never found anything which gave such immediate and permanent relief as Dr William's Indian Ointment.

For sale by all druggists, or mailed on receipt of price $1.00.

The American Express Company have established a money order department. They will sell money orders from their four thousand offices to all principal points ; $5 or less, for five cents ; $10 or less for eight cents. Call upon Mr. Johnson Manager of the Fulton Midland station.

Among the list of patents granted by the United States for the week ending March 14, was one awarded to E. W. Ross on an "extensible universal joint for shafts." It is said to be a valuable invention and destined to universal use. During the past week Mr. Ross has received several applications from parties anxious to purchase his invention.

The Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., of New York City have opened an office in Fulton with Mr. J. R. Forsyth as manager. The Metropolitan is the leading industrial insurance company in America, and has issued more policies and has a larger present membership than all the other companies doing industrial business in the U. S. combined. Mr. J. Lewis assistant superintendent has offices in the City Savings Bank building in Oswego.

We find the following in the Evening Express, of East Saginaw, Mich., of a recent date concerning a Fulton gentleman:

VILLA CARCI, MENTONE, FRANCE.
FEBRUARY 26, 1882.

I have forgotten whether I ever told you anything of the people here. They live so differently and I sometimes have to shut my eyes to think, and really believe you and I live on the same globe. Mentone is Italian. It has only been in possession of the French since 1860, and the Italians do not change their habits in twenty years. After people began to realize the value of Mentone as a winter resort, a number of energetic Frenchmen moved in, put up hotels and boarding houses, occupying them from the first of Oct. to the end of May, and closing them then, for the warm months, leaving the Mentonaise to themselves and their fishing as of old. French people work for money willingly ; Italians only work when compelled to and of course unwillingly.

The people along the different small bays, fish, and the inhabitants a little further up the mountain sides tend flocks of sheep and goats. The shepherds bring the flocks down to the sea often to drink the salt water and it is wonderful to see the order with which they file in couples up and down the long flight of stone steps, never crowding each other off, (after the manner of mankind) and heeding the slightest command of the shepherd.

The Italian women assist in all the out of door work; and the indoor work is something wonderful to behold, consisting more in planning how to exist in the smallest possible place, and doing the least of what an American woman would call house cleaning, or anything else connected with a well ordered or well conducted home. They help draw in the boats and nets loaded with fish, which they weigh and sell upon the beach, or gather in groups by the sides of the mountain streams to do the general washing or laundry work of the invalid strangers. To us who suppose it necessary to use bleaching preparations, scalding water etc., it is quite a novelty, to see them bring a basket of clothes, a bar of soap and a clothes line in the morning, and after emptying the clothes into the water, place the basket as close as possible to the stream, then get into it themselves (each kneeling in her own basket) and commence work. No wash boards or machines are used as with us, but each woman is armed with something like an old fashioned pudding stick, with which she beats the clothes quite thoroughly. For drying, they place as many articles upon the banks of the stream as possible and lay flat stones upon them. When the banks are filled, they place the end of the lines upon the ground and fasten them with a large pile of stones. Between the piles of stones, at convenient distances the lines are raised upon the poles, and the clothes fastened with pins as we do at home. At sunset, when the clothes are placed in the basket again, each woman takes her load upon her head and starts for home, with a gay manner, and as little appearance of fatigue, as she commenced in the morning.

Since my letter was commenced we have taken a trip up the mountain to the Anunciate, a Capucine convent. I enclose a sprig of cypress and some orange buds that I gathered near the convent. In returning to the hotel we lost our way among the grape terraces and wandered some time from one path to another, and began to fear we might be obliged to spend the night in some of the little chanimeres that we saw around us. At last we spied a belated vine dresser in the distance, who came to our aid, and directed us to the nearest path leading to the valley. Miss W. thinks we wandered around nearly three hours. I think one would be quite exact.

I think I told you it was the custom for invalids to remain out the most of the time, from nine o'clock in the morning until four o'clock in the afternoon. It is quite interesting to observe the different manner in which people amuse themselves. The quay near the sea is always filled with people strolling up and down, sunning themselves, chatting and laughing with the acquaintances they may chance to meet, watching the different sails in the distance, or the nearer boats of the fishermen. Others gathered in groups under the palm trees near by and read. Some seat themselves upon the beach accompanied with the indispensible gay cotton umbrella and sketch the different points of interest along the bay, or the Italian frontier. At half past eleven the bells ring for the mid-day breakfast, and the crowds of strangers disperse to villas or hotels that they call home. After the breakfast the quay is again crowded with loiterers. But little reading is done then; instead, many take flower presses and a donkey, and visit the valleys in search of flowers. Others in carriages drive along the Rivier as far as Monte Carlo or Rocca Bruna.

We have been here nine weeks, and have only had one rainy day. Week after week there is the same blue sky, smooth sea and soft amethyst light on the mountains. The morning is warm, almost too warm at times. Between three and four in the afternoon a light breeze comes in from the sea, and the possessors of delicate lungs go to their homes for the remainder of the day.

Last week there was a regatta, English, American, French and Italian boats contesting for the different prizes. The English won. At the beginning the French were so sure of carrying away all prizes they made no effort. [illegible]

[illegible] till Ash [illegible] my mind [illegible] during the [illegible] It is an imperative [illegible] If one goes on the street, [illegible] of both eyes and clothing, as the confetti is ruinous to either. Miss Warner has decided to figure as a peasant woman "Sundaying."

Just now there is an additional stir in the town. The Queen of England is coming to spend a few days with her suite. She is quite out of health and is supposed to come as a private individual. Three beautiful villas are being prepared for herself and household. An olive grove adjoining is to serve as a private park. The old French Imperial Guard is to be sent down to insure her safety while here. The authorities are improving the roads leading out of town that the drives may be as charming as possible. By the way, we are seeing a good deal of nobility this winter. A cousin of the Queen of Italy is in the chateau just above us, a marquis and Marchioness across the street, the Italiian Count and Countess of Bruno in the same villa with us. The Count has the choicest collection of living birds I ever saw, besides two parovuets, a dirty large dog with myriads of fleas, a small dog ditto as to fleas, two monkeys as malicious as they ever grow, a parrot as villainous as the most inventive imagination can picture etc. Really we are delighted to belong to the humbler walks of live and thereby saved the trouble of extensive possessions.

VICTORIA AT MENTONE.

PARIS, March 18.—The Queen of England who arrived at Mentone on Thursday, drove through the town yesterday in an open carriage. There was an immense number of visitors at the place, and much enthusiasm is manifested. The weather is July like.

A Patient People.

Fulton people are proverbial for their good nature and leniency in tamely submitting to indignities and nuisances.

We refer now more especially to the condition the Midland railroad have placad Second street in. The driveways and bridges leading to the yards upon that street are in many instances dilapidated and unsafe for a horse to traverse, or a load to cross ; and the drainage is wretched and insufficient. The roadway along the whole line of the street is uneven and unkempt. The crosswalks are, in many places covered with dirt and in others nearly worn out and misplaced. The Midland authorities have been repeatedly notified to remedy this evil but give it no attention whatever. The railroad company assumes a defiant attitude and looks on with the air of a party who asks? "Well, what are you going to do about it?"

Juvenile Opera Company.

Bennett & Moulton's Juvenile Opera Company gave two very enjoyable entertainments in Utica under the auspices of the attaches of the Opera House. in the afternoon singing The Magic Slipper, and in the evening the Chimes of Normandy. The matinee audience was probably the largest ever seen in Utica at a similar entertainment, including some 300 orphans present on invitation of the attaches, and all were delighted. The Magic Slipper was capitally rendered. Another good audience was present in the evening. While the Chimes of Normandy is a little above the reach of juvenile voices generally, Bennett & Moulton's Company handled the opera wonderfully well considering the ages of the members and the number of the troupe. Both in the afternoon and evening an olio of specialties was given, in which Miss Annie Liebsch charmed her audience by singing "Cows in the Corn," with voice and expression far beyond her years. She fully merited the hearty encores given her. Miss Florence Story, with her violin, was also accorded a deserved recall. Master E. P. Smith as Gaspard and Frank Strout as the Notary displayed much dramatic ability. The latter especially, in both operas, showed himself to be a born comedian. A mere boy as yet, he is perfectly at home on the stage. Of course Annie Leibsch was the star of the evening as Serpolette, a character that she has already assumed over 300 times. She has been four years with the company. The other principals of the troupe also did well, and Bennett & Moulton are to be credited with bringing to Utica the best Juvenile Opera Company, considering its numbers, ever seen in this city. It is also a pleasure to add that the attaches' benefit was a success financially.

The Singer manufacturing company desires to leave Elizabeth, N. J., and Syracuse will make a desperate effort to get it to locate there. The city offers the most flattering inducements. These works give employment to fifteen hundred men. Canastota, Oneida and Rome are each working to induce the company to locate in their midst. Fulton, with better facilities for manufacturing than any of the above named places, has made no offers as yet, and it is safe to say will not.

There was a four hour go as you please walking tourney at Plainville, last Friday night. The contestants were Frank McCann, of Oswego Falls, Simon Frawley of Lysander, Geo. Birch, of Seneca Falls and Wm. Gaylord of Victory. Soon after the start Frawley and Gaylord dropped out. McCann made the big score of eighteen miles in two hours. In the following two hours McCann made but ten miles having an easy victory—making a total of 28 miles in four hours. McCann received $20 for his activity.

In another column will be found a communication from Mr. M. B. Schenck to the Board of Education calling attention to the meagre means of exit No. 2 school contains in case of fire. The suggestions he offers in partially meeting a possible danger are worthy of consideration and certainly practicable. A panic in a school room is uncontrollable. The burning of the old school house occurred during school hours and was first discovered under the front stairs, which were quickly consumed, and but for an exit at the back of the building dire consequences would have resulted.

[illegible] Wood, [illegible] died in St. Charles, Mich., [illegible] of spinal fever, [illegible]

Noah H. Wood, formerly of Fulton, died at his home in St. Charles, Mich., March 12, 1882, after a short illness of lung fever, aged about forty years. Mr. Wood was a son-in-law of Mr. R. K. Jefferds of Lower Oswego Falls.

Mrs. Eliza Ann Ellis died at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. J. B. Miller on Cayuga street last Wednesday evening aged 77 years. Mrs. Ellis was one of the pioneers of this locality and a venerated old lady. Funeral was held from Mrs. Miller's Sunday at 10:30 a. m. Rev. A. M. Roe officiating. The remains were taken to Jacksonville, Onondaga county, for interment.

Mrs. Harris, wife of Rev. L. H. Harris, who has been a sufferer for the past eighteen months, departed this life on the 15th instant, at four o'clock in the afternoon, at Hannibal Center. Her funeral was held at the M. E. church at Hannibal Center on the 18th inst., at 11 o'clock a. m. Presiding Elder Skeel officiated, assisted by Revs. McMullen, Darling and Fulmer. The remains were taken for interment to Mt. Pleasant about four miles northeast of Fulton.

There died in this village Monday evening a man whose entire life has been spent in doing good to his fellow man.

James H. Branch died Monday evening at his residence, on Second street, aged 69 years. He had been in ill health for a number of years but during the past few weeks his life has hung by a single thread.

Mr. Branch was born in Benson, Vt., in 1813, and came to this village about the year 1852. He was for many years closely allied with the mercantile interests of Fulton. His gentle and confiding nature made him an easy prey to unscrupulous people, and in assisting them he impoverished himself. He was a consistent and practical christian, an honored member of the M. E. church, and when able a liberal supporter and promoter of all that tended to its growth. He was also a tireless worker in the temperance cause.

Funeral will be held to-morrow at 2:30 p. m. from the M. E. church. The remains will be interred in Mt. Adnah.

The news of the death of Martin Osborn was surprising and painful to this community. He died Saturday evening at 7:30 after a short illness of typhoid pneumonia, aged 75 years.

Mr. Osborn was born in Northumberland, Saratoga county, New York, and came to this locality about 39 years ago. He was a painter by trade and followed that calling for many years after arriving here. About twenty-five years ago he entered quite extensively into the culture of flowers which he has since followed with success.

Latterly he has manufactured wine and bitters and was widely known as Dr. Martin Osborn. He had an office Syracuse, where he did an extensive business with his wine and bitters.

Pleasant and companionable, his beautiful home on the riverside was a favorite resort of many people at home and from abroad.

He was a member of the Baptist church from which place his funeral was held yesterday at 2 p. m., Rev. L. Golden officiating. The following gentlemen acted as bearers: Wm. McCulloch, J. P. Streeter, Clark Smith, J. H. Langdon, John C. Wells and L. E. Hewitt.

Mr. C. D. Hubbard, of Oneida, will open a variety store in the Kenyon block, about April 1st.

SAMARITAN

NERVINE

SAMARITAN NERVINE

Cures Epileptic Fits, Spasms, [illegible] Dance, Vertigo, Insanity, [illegible] Rheumatism, Neuralgia, and all Nervous [illegible] This infallible remedy will [illegible] every species of Nervous [illegible] and drive them away from whence they came, never to return again. It utterly destroys the germs of disease by neutralizing the hereditary taint or poison in the system, and thoroughly eradicate the disease, and utterly destroys the same.

SAMARITAN NERVINE

Cures Female Weakness, General Debility, Leucorrhœa or Whites, Painful Menstruation, Ulceration of the Uterus, Internal Heat, Gravel, Inflammation of the Bladder, Irritability of the Bladder. For Wakefulness at Night, there is no better remedy. During the change of life no Female should be without it. It quiets the Nervous System and gives rest comfort and nature's sweet sleep.

SAMARITAN NERVINE

Cures Alcoholism, Drunkenness and the habit of Opium Eating. These degrading habits are by far the worst evils that have ever befallen suffering humanity. Thousands die annually from these noxious drugs. The drunkard drinks liquor not because he likes it but for the pleasure of drinking and treating his friends, little thinking that he is on his road to ruin. Like the Opium Eater, he first uses the drug in small quantities as a harmless antidote. The soothing influence of the drug takes strong hold upon its victim, leading him on to his own destruction. The habits of Opium Eating and Liquor Drinking are precisely what eating is to a [illegible] which redoubles its cravings until it paralyzes both the stomach and appetite. So every drink of liquor or dose of opium, instead of satisfying, only adds to its fierce fires, until it consumes the vital force and then itself. Like the [illegible] tape-worm, it cries "Give, give, give!" but never enough until its own rapacity devours itself. Samariton Nervine gives instant relief in all such cases. It produces sleep, quiets the nerves, builds up the nervous system, and restores body and mind to a healthy condition.

SAMARITAN NERVINE

Cures Nervous Dyspepsia, Palpitation of the Heart, Asthma, Bronchitis, Scrofula, Syphilis, diseases of the Kidneys and all diseases of the urinary organs. Nervous debility, caused by the indiscretions of youth, permanently cured by the use of this valuable remedy. To you, young middle-aged and old men, who are covering your sufferings as with a mantle by silence, look up, you can be saved by timely efforts, and make ornaments to society, and jewels in the crown of your Maker, if you will. Do not keep this a secret longer, until it saps your vitals, and destroys both body and soul. If you are thus afflicted, take DR. RICHMOND'S Samaritan Nervine. It will restore your shattered nerves, arrest premature decay, impart tone and energy to the whole system.

SAMARITAN NERVINE.

Is for sale by druggists everywhere, or may be had direct from us. Those who wish to obtain further evidence of the curative properties of Samaritan Nervine will please enclose a 3 cent postage stamp for a copy of our Illustrated Journal of Health, giving hundreds of testimonials of cure from persons who have used the medicine, and also their pictures photographed after their restoration to perfect health. [illegible] ture showed a picture attacked by Boers, one of them firing at our [illegible] a revolver at any ordinary [illegible] had he such a weapon [illegible] would not fire it [illegible]. Another illustration of the Boer method of fighting showed a dozen of them lying down under the crest of a hill firing at the soldiers below, each Boer holding his horse by the bridle, the animals forming excellent targets for the soldiers below. Now, a Boer thinks more of his horse than himself, and would never dream of bringing him up into the fire. The horses have been taught to stand without any one holding them, and are left under cover well in rear. Another introduced us to a Boer family sitting down to a meal, the Kaffirs of the establishment seated at the table with the rest—an incident that happened only in the artist's imagination, as no Boer would sit down with his Kaffir to a meal on any consideration, not to mention the misery which a table and a knife and fork would entail upon the misplaced native. Your Boer might pass any day for a small English farmer; perhaps a bit more untidy about the beard, not unlikely evincing a stronger dislike to the wash-tub in more senses than one. The superior class are just substantial gentlemen farmers, while many of them are strikingly handsome. They are a tall race, six feet four inches being a common stature, and differ from Englishmen of the same class only in dress—corduroy suits of hideous shades of brown and yellow being worn almost without exception. Pretorius, who commanded the investing force round Pretoria is a very handsome man. Joubert has a hard-lined, clever face, not altogether unpleasant. Kruger seems a cross between a butcher and a Methodist parson.—Blackwood's Magazine.

A FLIGHT OF FANCY.

A singular accident befell a Scotch clergyman while preaching in a Nonconformist chapel, at Shepherd's Bush, recently. He had a vigorous style, and showed himself zealously fervent in driving home to his interested hearers the solemn words and moral of his text. Hands and eyes were both brought into play in enforcing the "winged words" of the portly preacher; and now and again he would lean his whole weight on the reading-stand, gazing intently into the faces of his auditors, to deepen the impression of his counsels. While he was once thus gazing, the audience were startled by seeing the reading-stand topple over the platform, followed headlong by the energetic preacher himself. Many rushed to his assistance; but, although the fall was one of about seven feet, the minister quickly regained his footing, and at once returned to his place at the restored reading-stand. Before resuming the awkwardly-interrupted discourse, however, the preacher remarked, with a quaint "pawkiness" which the congregation seemed to appreciate, that "those who leaned upon the Master would be better sustained than he had been while leaning upon the reading-stand of His servant."

THE NINETEENTH CENTURY.

It is a good thing to live in the nineteenth century, and feel, however lazy you may be yourself, there are lots of people who are constantly busy trying to improve the arts and sciences, and who will probably succeed in the course of time, say two or three hundred years hence, in making this world a very comfortable abiding-place. True, we will not be here, but possibly we may look down from cerulean heights, and nod approvingly, and think these mortals are not such fools after all. You have really no idea how many improved motors there are. If they go on at the present rate of improving, nothing will be able to stand still in the near future. Then there is luminous paint, which shines bright at night, and may be used for railroad signals, which like children should be seen and not heard from. Then there is sun engraving that reproduces pictures and drawings with the utmost exactitude, and there are isinglass masks to be worn by workmen, at hazardous trades and protect them from all dangers short of blowing up.

GEOLOGICAL TIME.

The most ancient human monuments that now exist cannot, I suppose, be more than a few thousand years old. Five thousand years nearly exhausts all historical time. Ten thousand years certainly does. Though we have no earlier historical records, yet other records are not wanting. Geology tells us that 10,000 years is but a mere moment in the span of the earth's history. We learn from geology that even the career of man himself has lasted far more than 10,000 years. Yet man is but the latest addition to the succession of life on the earth. For the chronology of the earlier epochs of the earth's history we require majestic units to give adequate expression for our dates. Thousands of years are not sufficient, nor tens of thousands, nor hundreds of thousands. The course of geological time is to be reckoned in millions of years.

KEEPING PROVEN.—It is easily proven [illegible]

[illegible] changed into manure containing any more of these valuable elements than were in the stock originally. If we leave this pile down it will only be a pile of wet straw, and if we rot it ever so thoroughly it will only be a smaller pile of thoroughly rotted straw, and at best little better than an unsatisfactory muck. It is only by the use of straw as an absorbent, and as a coarse food for fattening animals, and by using with it much rich food, such as corn, bran, oil, or cotton seed meal, etc., that we can change it into a manure that shall really be very valuable to use, and that will largely increase the crops where used. We must not expect that we can raise large crops of grain year after year, and sell the most valuable part, and by any method turn the straw into a manure that shall keep up the fertility of the soil, if we manure only with straw we must expect to grow only straw upon the land. It is unfortunate for any man to be so situated that he cannot afford to raise stock to eat up and tread down the straw, and to be fed richer foods, so as to make a full supply of rich manure. With any system of farming we now have, the land must, sooner or later, become exhausted and cease to yield profitable crops, if we fail to return to the soil the essential elements of plant food removed in such crops.—J. S. Woodward, in N. Y. Tribune.

A TOUCHING INCIDENT.

A mother's love is deep, abiding and peculiar. The child, as soon as born, is taken up into her tenderest and most generous sympathies, and lives as it were a part of itself. This peculiar affection is as extensive as the race, for it is found among savage as well as civilized people. This affection was strikingly illustrated by an Indian woman who had lost her child. Unable to find her own child, she entered the home of a whole family, and taking in her arms the pretty baby lavished upon it her wealth of treasured sympathies. The mother was surprised at the peculiar exhibition, and sprang forward to rescue her child, when the poor Indian gathered up her blanket as one would a sick child, and after clasping it in her arms, uttered a low, mournful cry. Tears ran down her cheeks, as the white mother put her babe back into the Indian's arms. She passed her hands over it very gratefully and tenderly, and departed. In a week she came again, bringing a peck of ripe, wild plums, and the next two buffalo tongues. She asked permission, by signs, to kiss the baby, and it was granted. Then she departed, and never came again.

HOW SOME PEOPLE TALK.

Most people talk nonsense when they are idle. The human brain is naturally vivacious and elastic, hence that versatility which is always to be found in men of sense. Sensible people talk about the weather when there is no sense in talking about it, just as naturally as they do anything that suggests itself to them when they are unengaged. For instance, we heard a gentleman say recently, "We need snow badly." Of course, he did not know why we needed snow, but such was the circumstances under which this profound declaration was delivered that the words seemed to come naturally, and with an honestness which proved that their conception and pronunciation was irresistible to the man. This is a world of ups and downs, turbulences and mutabilities; and one of the oldest yet most reasonable peculiarities of its inhabitants is the soul-harrowing, innocent inclination of all mankind to talk about the weather, And—do you think it will rain?—Williamsport Breakfast Table.

WHAT "WIFE" MEANS.

Says Ruskin: "What do you think the beautiful word 'wife' comes from? It is the great word in which the English and Latin languages conquered the French and Greek. I hope the French will some day get a word for it instead of that femme. But what do you think it comes from? The great value of the Saxon words is that they mean something. Wife means 'weaver.' You must either be house-wives or house-moths, remember that. In the deep sense, you must either weave men's fortunes and embroider them, or feed upon and bring them to decay. Wherever a true wife comes, home is always around her. The stars may be over her head, the glow worm in the night's cold grass may be the fire at her feet, but home is where she is, and for a noble woman it stretches far around her, better than houses ceiled with cedar or painted with vermilion—shedding its quiet light for those who else are homeless. This, I believe, is the woman's true place and power.

It is not for a wise man to be much affected with the censures of the rude and unskilful vulgar, but to hold fast unto his own well-chosen and well-fixed resolution; every fool knows what is want to be done, but what is best to be done is known only to the wise.

All praise without adverse criticism is like all bread without butter.

HARRIET MELLON, THE ACTRESS.

Like many members of her profession, Harriet Mellon was superstitious. Numerous instances of this are on record, several of which were frequently mentioned, in her prosperous days.

She had faith in dreams. Once, while yet an actress, she told Anderson, the hair-dresser of the theatre, that she had repeatedly dreamed that she had been tried for her life, sentenced to death, and actually executed.

The man, who had the reputation of being a true interpreter, assured her that it was "a fine dream, indicating that she was to be a grand lady, and to hold her head high, perhaps to be received at court."

At that time, her salary was only three or four pounds a week. Good-humoredly, she assured Anderson that whenever his prediction was fulfilled, he alone should dress her hair for court.

Years passed on. Miss Mellon advanced in her profession, became a grand and rich lady by marriage, and was to be presented at court. Inquiry being made, Anderson was found in a little shop in Worthing, then an obscure watering-place on the Sussex coast.

She sent for him, and he did dress her hair, not only then but for each successive reception at court, until 1836, the year before her death. Each time he was paid thirty pounds for his attendance. Neither of them had forgotten the dream.

In another instance, one of her dreams was narrated to a coachmaker, a professional interpreter, who assured her of her triumph over difficulties, concluding with a promise that she would one day ride in her own coach. "Then," said the sanguine lady, "if I do, you shall build it." Years after, when the man had forgotten the incident, Miss Mellon, keeping her promise, gave him an order to build the first carriage she ever possessed, and she employed him, in a like manner, to her death.

She was very fond of ghost stories, and had a passion for reading such tales of terror as the newspaper narratives of murders and robberies. Ever joyous and elastic as her temperament had been, she was haunted by one special dread—she was fearfully afraid that house-breakers would make good their predatory entrance, attempt to take her life, and leave her mortally wounded. The sound of footsteps at night, the turning of keys in doors, the slightest unfamiliar noise, would affright her, and sometimes, under a paroxysm of dread, she would have a Bow street police-officer walk before her dwelling, at night, for weeks.

She had an idea that some fatality would work against her on Twelfth Day; that it was judicious, as well as lucky, to taste mince pies on New Year's Day, tansy pudding at Easter, goose at Michaelmas, and plum pudding and roast beef at Christmas, and that on no account should thirteen sit down to table, as one of them must surely die within a year. She would not walk under a ladder without crossing her fore-fingers "for luck."

The first time she was going to court, as Duchess of St. Albans, her foot was on the step of the state-coach when she abruptly withdrew it, silently re-entered her house, and had her gorgeous drawing-room dress and rich diamonds taken off.

The fact was, as related by herself, that just as she was entering the coach she remembered that she had forgotten to say her prayers, as usual, before leaving her bed-chamber, that morning, and was afraid [illegible]

[illegible] was breathing upon her, and had taken the shape of a little bird, singing at her window.

In fact, the garden attached to her house in London was crowded with birds, which she fed every day. They used to enter her boudoir through a window left open for them.—Dr. R. Shelton Mackenzie.

RESCUED FROM DEATH

William J. Coughlin of Somerville, Mass., says: In the fall of 1876 I was taken with bleeding of the lungs followed by a severe cough. I lost my appetite and flesh and was confined to my bed. In 1877 I was admitted to the hospital. The doctors said I had a hole in my lung as big as a half dollar. At one time a report went around that I was dead. I gave up hope, but a friend told me of DR. WILLIAM HALL'S BALSAM FOR THE LUNGS. I got a bottle, when to my surprise I began to feel better, and to-day I feel better than for three years past.

"I write this hoping every one afflicted with diseased Lungs will take DR. WILLIAM HALL'S BALSAM, and be convinced that CONSUMPTION CAN BE CURED. I can positively say it has done more good than all the other medicines I have taken since my sickness.

How to Secure Health.

It seems strange that any one will suffer from derangements brought on by impure blood, when Scovill's Sarsaparilla and Stillingia, or Blood and Liver Syrup will restore health to the physical organization. It has been proven to be the best blood purifier ever discovered, curing scrofula, syphilitic disorders, weakness of the kidneys, erysipelas, malaria, nervous disorders, debility, bilious complaints, and all diseases of the blood, liver, kidneys, stomach, skin etc. A single bottle will prove a health renewer, for it acts like a charm, especially when the complaint is of an exhaustive nature.

THE INDEPENDENT.

"The foremost religious newspaper of the United States."—The Rev Joseph Cook.

Established in 1848, as an advocate of anti-slavery and of reforms in religion and politics, the Independent at once became a recognized power throughout the country. Its influence has ever since been constantly growing. As it has fought against slavery and for cheap postage, so it will fight against Mormonism, for Civil Service Reform, and for purity in politics, and general uprightness in all things. It employs the best editorial talent and speaks fearlessly on all subjects. It pays for contributed articles and for editorial services more than double the amount paid by any other weekly newspaper.

It publishes more religious discussions than the religious reviews, and more poetry and stories than the popular monthlies, and gives more information than an annual cyclopedia. The long cable dispatches recently published from the great Methodist Council in London are a good illustration of what the Independent is constantly doing. A list of the most prominent religious and philosophical writers, poets and story writers in the country is the list of the contributors of the Independent. Besides the space set aside for these writers and for editorials, there are twenty-two distinct departments, edited by twenty-two specialists, which include Biblical Research, Sanitary, Legal, Fine Arts, Music, Science Pebbles, Personalities, Hymn Notes, School and College, Literature, Religious Intelligence, Missions, Sunday School, News of the Week, Finance, Insurance, Stories, puzzles, and Agriculture. 32 pages in all.

Next Term begins Monday March 27th. The school is designed for those wishing to make rapid progress in their lessons. To this end the classes are small, so that each pupil may have individual attention. No student is required to wait on another but passes from one class to another as soon as qualified. Small schools, select in their character, are a great advantage to the timid and backward pupil. The charges are very low for the advantages offered. Boarders are received in the family of the Principal at very low rates. Apply to the Rev. JAMES GILMOUR.

Weaving the Web.

By Julia C. R. Dorr.

"This morn I will weave my web," she said,
As she stood by her loom in the rosy light,
And her young eyes hopefully glad and clear,
Followed afar the swallow's flight.
"As soon as the day's first task are done, While yet I am fresh and strong," said she,
"I will hasten to weave the beautiful web Whose pattern is known to none but me!"

"I will weave it fine, I will weave it fair.
And ah! how the colors will glow!" she said;
"So fadeless and strong will I weave my web
That perhaps it will live after I am dead."
But the morning hours sped on apace,
The air grew sweet with the breath of June;
And young love hid by the waiting loom,
Tangling the threads as he hummed a tune.

Ah! life is so rich and full," she cried,
And morn is short, though the days are long!
This noon I will weave my beautiful web,
I will weave it carefully, fine and strong."
But the sun rode high in the cloudless sky;
The burden and heat of the day she bore;
And hither and thither she came and went,
While the loom stood still as it stood before.

"Ah! life is too busy at noon, she said;
"My web must wait till the eventide,
Till the common work of the day is done,
And my heart grows calm in the silence wide!"
So, one by one, the hours passed on,
Till the creeping shadows had longer grown;
Till the house was still and the breezes slept,
And the singing birds to their nests had flown.

"And now I will weave my web," she said,
As she turned to her loom ere set of sun,
And laid her hand on the shining threads
To set them in order, one by one.
But hand was tired, and heart was weak;
"I am not as strong as I was," sighed she,
"And the pattern is blurred and the colors rare
Are not so bright, or so fair to see!

"I must wait I think, till another morn;
I must go to my rest with my work undone.
It is growing to dark to weave!" she cried,
As lower and lower sank the sun.
She dropped the shuttle: the loom stood still;
The weaver slept in the twilight gray.
Dear heart! Will she weave her beautiful web
In the golden light of a longer day?

ALMOST ENTOMBED ALIVE.

The Horrible Experience of an Indiana Girl who was in a Trance. A Narrow Escape from a Terrible Death.

Josephine Ryman, a fair haired, blue-eyed young woman, is just recovering from a remarkable illness at the home of her sister, Mrs. Brown, in Evansville, Indiana. Her parents died some years ago, and Josephine went to work in St. James, a little village near by. One Saturday night last winter she went to singing school. She had not been in her seat long when she felt a very strange sensation about the head accompanied by pains in the back. She arose to her feet, as if to start out of church, when she fell in a dead faint, and was carried home. Her friends thought the attack was a mere fainting spell, and the usual restoratives were applied, but the girl continued to lie as if dead. Sunday came and went, but still there was no change. The body became colder and colder, the eyes were open and staring, the lips were apart, there was no perceptible pulse, and every indication pointing to death. Physicians pronounced life extinct. The priest was sent for to administer the last rites, and the weeping sisters and friends of the family prepared to bid Josephine the last farewell. The coffin was ordered, busy fingers began to prepare the white clothes in which to bury the corpse, and in fact every preparation was made for the final scene.

Thus passed Monday. On the evening of that day there was a slight change in the appearance of the body, which gave the startled watchers a faint hope that the girl lay in a trance, and that this was but death's counterfeit. The body lay on its back with arms folded, just as the attendants had placed it. There was not the least perceptible breathing; the eyes still had that stony unmeaning gaze; the face was pallid as white marble; but the iciness of real death was wanting. The feet and limbs were not warm but they did not have that chilly touch that is a sure accompaniment of actual dissolution. There was sufficient doubt in the minds of the attendants to warrant caution, and so another day and night passed. On Wednesday, or the fourth day after the girl was first stricken down, the priest was again sent for. After critically examining the case and consulting with the physician he said: "It [illegible]

[illegible] a little, to let them know [illegible] alive, but it was impossible. I saw my sisters come in one by one and look into my face. 'Poor Josie, she's gone.' Their tears dropped [illegible], and their kisses felt warm [illegible]. As they turned to leave [illegible] I must make an effort to attract their attention, if only by moving my eyelids. But I couldn't do it. I felt like screaming. I tried to, but I couldn't move a muscle. The priest came in and felt my arms and wrists. He shook his head. Then he placed his ear near my heart. It was no use. He could not hear it beat. After saying a short prayer for the repose of my soul, he, too, turned and left me, and my agony and horror were redoubled. 'Will no one find out that I live?' I said to myself. 'Must I be buried only to wake when it is too late?' Must I come back to life when they put me in the vault, and all of the people have gone away, only to die of fright and horror and suffocation?' The thought was madness! 'Why doesn't the doctor do something and bring me to myself? I am not dead! It was no use.' There I lay thinking and listening to every word that was said. I could hear a woman giving directions about making my shroud. I heard the time set for my funeral and all. I could see every one who came to look at me. I tried to look conscious and let them know that I understood it all, but it was impossible. It is a wonder I did not die of fright and agony. I often think that I would sooner die, a thousand times sooner, than go through that same experience again.

"Finally, when all was ready, when the shroud was finished and all had left the room but two or three, some one said: "Ain't you going to cut her hair off?" My hair was done up in long braids, and fell down my back. 'Yes,' said my sister, 'we'll cut it off now.' Then they got the scissors and came up to me. While one of them took hold of my head and turned it on one side, the one with the scissors began cutting. I could feel the cold steel on my neck. I realized that this was about the last thing they'd do before putting me in the coffin. The two women began clipping, and in a second or two one long braid of hair was taken off and laid aside. My head was then turned the other way to let them get at the other braid, but this was not touched. Thank God! Something in my condition or some movement, I don't know what it was, caused my sister to scream, and I was saved. The scissors dropped on the floor with a loud noise, the woman jumped back nearly scared to death, and I sat up. You should have seen that house a little while after that. I thought everybody had gone crazy. 'Venie's alive! Venie's alive!' The whole neighborhood came rushing in as soon as they heard it, and for several days there was nothing talked of but me. My folks thought I didn't know what was going on. Little they thought that every word spoken in that room was heard and understood by me. They tried to keep everybody from referring to the fact that my shroud was bought, the coffin ordered and the funeral arranged. They made an excuse, too, for part of my hair being cut off. They told me the reason of it was that a plaster had been put on my neck, and my hair got so tangled in it that it had been cut away. I didn't say anything. One day my little brother said to me, 'Venie, you was goin' to be buried last Thursday, and they cut your hair off.' He never imagined that I knew more about it than he did. The recollection of those terrible days and nights will never leave me. I pray to God that I never may be called upon again to pass through it. I would rather die."

Facts about the Bible.

A prisoner condemned to solitary confinement obtained a copy of the Bible, and, by three years' careful study obtained the following facts:

The Bible contains 3,586,489 letters, 773,692 words, 31,173 verses, 1,189 chapters and 66 books. The word 'and' occurs 46,277 times; the word 'Lord' occurs 1855 times; the word 'reverend' occurs but once, which is in the 9th verse of the 11th psalm. The 21 verse of the seventh chapter of Ezra contains all the letters in the alphabet except the letter J. The finest chapter to read is the 26th chapter of the Acts of the Apostles. The 19th chapter of 2 Kings and the 37th chapter of Isaiah are alike. The longest verse is the 9th verse of the 8th chapter of Esther. The shortest verse is the 35th verse of the 11th chapter of St. John. The 8th, 15th, 21st, and 31st verses of the 107th Psalm are alike. Each verse of the 136th Psalm ends alike. There are no words or names of more than six syllables.

Subterranean Fires.

The failure of all the attempts to extinguish the fire which has been raging in the Keely Run colliery for some time past, it is feared, will add another to the perpetually burning mines that now exist in Pennsylvania anthracite regions. The greatest of these probably that in the jugular vein near Coal Castle, Pa. This has been burning since 1835. Lewis F. Dougherty opened this vein in 1832. The upper drift of the mine was above water level, and a huge fire was kept in a grate at the mouth of the mine in winter to keep the water from freezing in the gutters. One night in the above year the timbers of the drift caught fire from the grate. When it was discovered the fire had been carried down the air hole to the lower drifts, and was beyond control, two men went into the mine hoping to recover the tools. They never came out. The mine was abandoned. No effort was made to mine any of the coal near the burning vein, although it was considered the best coal in the region, until 1856.—Then John McGinnis put in a slope on the east side of it, below water level. He struck the vain at a place where the coal was so thick that two miners could keep a large breaker supplied. When four hundred yards of gangway had been excavated the heat from the burning Dougherty mine began to bother the miners. McGinnis attempted to open an air hole. The heat became so great that the men were paid double wages to induce them to work. They worked entirely naked, and were relieved every ten minutes. Finally the heat became so intense that work was abandoned. The mine was flooded. After being pumped out, men could again work for a few days. The mine was flooded nine times. McGinnis finally failed and the mine was then abandoned. The fire has been raging in the vein ever since. An area of half a mile in every direction has been burned. No vegetation grows on the surface. In places the ground has caved in, forming chasms a hundred feet deep. There is but a thin shell of earth over the pit of fire. At night blue, sulphurous flames issue from the crevices in the ground. It is dangerous to walk across the spot. Several persons have mysteriously disappeared in the vicinity during the past twenty years. It is believed that in a majority of the cases they have fallen into the burning mine. Dougherty, the original proprietor of the mine, attempted to go across once. He sank to his armpits through the crust, and was only saved by his courageous friends who ventured to his assistance. The stones on the ground are hot, and snow never rests there. Rain turns to vapor as fast as it falls on the roof of the burning mine. Millions of dollars worth of the best quality have been consumed by the fire.

The Summit hill mine, near Mauch Chunck, has been burning for twenty-five years. It is believed that this mine was set on fire by discontented miners. Thousands of dollars have been expended in fruitless endeavors to extinguish the flames.

The Butler mines, near Pittston has been burning four years. It was set on fire by a party of tramps, who built a a fire in the mine in 1877. The fire is in the upper drifts. It is confined to an area of fifty acres by an immense ditch forty feet wide, which was excavated between the burning drift, and the connecting ones. The digging of the canal cost fifty thousand dollars. But for that obstacle the fire would have communicated to some of the most extensive mines in the Lackawanna valley and a subterranean conflagration would have swept under the whole of West Pittston. Miners have worked in the lower drift of the Butler mine since the fire broke out, but there are forty feet of rock between them and the field of fire above. The water that trickles through the roof is scalding hot, The temperature is so high that the men can wear but little clothing. [N. Y. World.

Stories About Animals.

A rattlesnake confined in a cage for eleven months shed its skin four times, ate sixty rats and, although it had access to a tank of water an appratus prepared for the purpose proved it had never drank a drop.

Some days ago a turkey was found in a cellar beneath a store in Clark Va. in a sorry plight owing to the long fast he had undergone. This bird with others of its kind had been purchased above five weeks previous for shipment to a Northern market but was overlooked and remained in its dark confinement up to the time it was found, without food or drink. Dr. Tanner was supplied with water, if not with bread pills during his long fast, but this poor bird was without so much as a drink of water. When rescued it could barely stand upon its feet, but it was fed, and now gives promise of rapid recovery from its long fast of five weeks.

At Santa Rosa, Mexico, recently, a circus company having four elephants arrived, and they were placed in a quardrangle, the walls on three sides being of stone and the other of wood. During the morning after their arrival the elephants, from some cause, became angered and began smashing the wagons and sleds, etc, that were being arranged for show purposes. At the time of the outbreak there were a number of the troupe of both sexes, present, but so sudden and simultaneous was the dash of the infuriated animals that before they could get out of the way a number of of persons were crushed beneath falling timber and the feet of the beasts. The keeper struggled manfully to subdue the elephants, but in vain, amid the wild shrieks of the animals, the yells of terror of the frightened company, and the groans of the wounded. The huge monsters broke down the wooden wall and dashed into the street, striking consternation into the whole town. The elephants escaped to the woods and were not captured until the third day after their escape. Some twelve of the company were severely wounded, two of them dying from the effects of their injuries.

THE SUN.
NEW YORK, 1882.

THE SUN for 1882 will make its fifteenth annual revolution under the present management, shining, as always, for all, big and little, mean and gracious, contented and unhappy, Republican and Democratic, depraved and virtuous, intelligent and obtuse. The Sun's light is for mankind and womankind of every sort; but its genial warmth is for the good, while it pours hot discomfort on the blistering backs of the persistently wicked.

The Sun of 1868 was a newspaper of a new kind. It discarded many of the forms, and a multitude of the superfluous words and phrases of ancient journalism. It undertook to report in a fresh, succinct, unconventional way all the news of the world, omitting no event of human interest, and commenting upon affairs with the fearlessness of absolute independence. The success of this experiment was the success of The Sun. It effected a permanent change in the style of American newspapers. Every important journal established in this country in the dozen years past has been modelled after The Sun. Every important journal already existing has been modified and bettered by the force of the Sun's example.

The Sun of 1882 will be the same outspoken, truthtelling, and interesting newspaper.

By a liberal use of the means which an abundant prosperity affords, we shall make it better than ever before.

We shall print all the news, putting it in readable shape, and measuring its importance, not by the traditional yardstick, but by its real interest to the people. Distance from Printing House Square is not the first consideration with The Sun. Whenever anything happens worth reporting we get the particulars whether it happens in Brooklyn or in Bokhara.

In politics we have decided opinions; and are accustomed to express them in language that can be understood. We say what we think about men and events. That habit is the only secret of success of The Sun's political course.

The Weekly Sun gathers into eight pages the best matter of the seven daily issues. An Agricultural Department of unequalled merit, full market reports and a liberal proportion of literary scientific and domestic intelligence complete The Weekly Sun, and make it the best newspaper for the farmer's household that was ever printed.

Who does not know and read and like The Sunday Sun, each number of which is a Golconda of interesting literature, with the best poetry of the day, prose every line worth reading, news, humor—matter enough to fill a good sized book, and infinitely more varied and entertaining than any book, big or little?

If our idea of what a newspaper should be pleases you, send for The Sun.

Our terms are as follows:

For the daily Sun, a four page sheet of twenty-eight columns, the price by mail, post paid, is 55 cents a month, or $6.50 a year; or, including the Sunday paper, an eight page sheet of fifty-six columns, the price is 65 cents per month, or $7 70 a year, postage paid.

The Sunday edition of The Sun is also furnished separately at $1.50 a year, postage paid.

The price of the Weekly Sun, eight pages, fifty-six columns, is $1 a year, postage paid. For clubs of ten sending $10 we will send an extra copy free.

[illegible] could then have been [illegible] to only eight years imprisonment. [illegible] received that and [illegible] fine, and the loss of [illegible] army.

[illegible] Whittaker the finding of the court that he mutilated his own [illegible], has been set aside. The recommendation that he be dismissed from West Point Academy on account of deficient attainments in his studies is concurred in. It has cost the country [illegible] $260,000 to arrive at this conclusion. Whittaker is in New York learning phonography. A subscription is now in order for the vindicated colored boy.

We find the following going the rounds of the papers and causing a great amount of comment. Mr Hull is well known in Fulton:

Hon Amos G. Hull, who practiced law for many years in Fulton, was one of the speakers at a meeting called to consider "Anæsthetics, medico-legally." He argued that physicians had a right to shorten life in case of persons suffering from hydrophobia or cancer. In such a case, the higher law he had to suggest was, "All things whatsoever that man should do unto you, do ye also unto them." Being answered by the Hon Delano C Calvin that any physician who should do so would be guilty of murder, Mr Hull said that his proposition was that when a person was in moribund condition and suffering unspeakable agonies it might be advisable to shorten his sufferings.

ASHBURNHAM, Mass., Jan. 14, 1880.

I have been very sick over two years. They all gave me up as past cure, I tried the most skillful physicians, but they did not reach the worst part. The lungs and heart would fill up every night and distress me, and my throat was very bad. I told my children I never should die in peace until I had tried Hop Bitters. I have taken two bottles. They have helped me very much indeed. I am now well. There was a lot of sick folks here who have seen how they helped me, and they used them and are cured, and feel as thankful as I do that there is so valuable a medicine made.

45w2 MRS. JULIA C. CUSHING.

An Oneida county man, who suspected he was watched by a game constable, went hunting on Sunday with a wooden gun. A suit resulted, and the sportsman has now had the constable arrested for perjury.

Monday afternoon an employe in the Oswego Falls factory dye house named Joseph Shackleton fell into a kettle of boiling water. He fell in an upright condition and was badly scalded from his knees down, the skin dropping off. He will be only temporarily disabled.

John Meagher, of Fulton, through his attorney, G S Piper, has commenced an action against John Morway for $1,000 damages. In December last, Morway and Meagher were digging a well for Fred Spafford, and while Meagher was in the bottom of the well, Morway, it is alleged, by gross negligence and careless ness, let fall a hammer into the well, striking Meagher on the shoulder and breaking his shoulder bone.

FARMERS' WIVES.

It is an evident fact that farmers' wives are afflicted with many diseases which are the result of overwork. They are constantly on one endless routine of toil from daylight at morning until late at night. No change, no relaxation, no rest! Farmers should note this fact, and be forewarned before it is too late. It is astonishing what an amount of labor the wives of farmers perform. Many of them get up and have breakfast ready before their husbands are out of bed. Then it is work, work until near midnight, their minds during that time being constantly occupied by their duties, and with thinking how the food is to be supplied, when the washing and [illegible] is to be done, when time can be [illegible] to scrub the floor, how the children are to be clothed and kept tidy, and [illegible] other things not necessary to mention, all of which combine to overwork and break down the [illegible] woman in the land. In no [illegible] is it safe to be thinking of any one [illegible], and in cases where the brain has been weakened by too great strain upon [illegible] thereby producing insanity, epilepsy, [illegible] hysterics, female weakness, [illegible] debility, and a multitude of [illegible], the remedy is rest and a [illegible] Dr S A Richmond & Co's [illegible] Nervine. It acts directly upon the nervous centres and invigorates [illegible] the whole system. Following are deeds recorded at the county clerk's office during the past week of local import:

Maria A. Emery to Amos B. Maynard, March 20, 1882; land in Oswego Falls, $125.

John I. Quackenbush to Mary F. Jacobs, March 6, 1882; land in Volney, $2,500.

Winfield S. Wallace to David Andrews, February 20, 1881; land in the town of Palermo, $1,000.

Newell H. Gilbert to Rebecca Race, March 1, 1882; land in Fulton, $3,885.

Joseph LaLonde to Edmond Laporte March 16, 1882; land in Fulton, $700.

Martha B. Hannis to Joseph P. Kelly, March 11, 1882; land in Fulton, $550.

Life, like the waters of the sea—freshens only when it ascends towards heaven.

Religion is reproached with not being progressive; it makes amends by being imperishable.

There is no process of evolution or development that can never span the chasm between the living and the lifeless, between animal instinct and reflective consciousness.

There is More Strength restoring power in a bottle of Parker's Ginger Tonic than in a bushel of malt or a gallon of milk. This explains why invalids find it such a wonderful invigorant for mind and body. See other column. 45m1

A member of a fashionable congregation called at a music store and inquired: "Have you the notes of the piece called the "Song of Solomon?" adding, "Our pastor referred to it yesterday as an exquisite gem, and my wife would like to learn to play it."

In the Moravian settlement near Salem N. C., the old custom of announcing the death of a church member by the music of a band in the church tower is still adhered to. Those versed in music, it is said, can tell from the air played whether the dead person was married or single, young or old, male or female.

Many Miserable People drag themselves about with failing strength, feeling that they are sinking into their graves when Parker's Ginger Tonic would begin with the first dose, to bring vitality and strength back to them. 45m1

Gratitude is the dew that moistens and nourishes all the plants in the garden of piety. The moment that the earth refuses to send forth its hidden moisture, which returns in dew and rain, that moment the trees and fruits begin to lose their stores of refreshment, and must soon wither. In like manner, ingratitude will make our very blessings begin to parch and soon become dry and unfaithful. [Watson.

We will send Dr Dyes Celebrated Electro Voltaic Belts and other Electro appliances on trial for thirty days to young men and older persons who are afflicted with nervous debility, lost vitality, etc, guaranteeing speedy relief and complete restoration of vigor and manhood. The clouds and storms of life are lightened by our love to God. The closer we are living with Him the less heavy are the storms of our earthly pilgrimage, and the less will we fear as we enter into the clouds and darkness and sorrow and affliction. And when all the pathway, toilsome and steep, or smooth and pleasant, has been trodden, those who have learned to live in the sunlight will enter with gladness into His unveiled presence, and walk in the light of His countenance forever. WHITEWASHING.

As the beautiful spring weather approaches, Chris Powells is getting in readiness his myriad of whitewash brush[es and] pails, preparatory to doing artist[ic] [illegible] work, for all who may [illegible] to employ him. Chris is perfect in [illegible]

Miss Hattie Bradford, daughter of Alex Bradford, was united in marriage at the residence of her parents, at Ingell's Crossing, the 15th inst., to Mr. Franklin R. Winters, of Palermo. Rev. Z. F. Griffin, of Gilbert's Mills, performed the ceremony.

On the 21st of March the Mexico Independent attained its majority, having been a faithful conservator of Mexico's interests for twenty-one years. A brief resume of its career from birth to date is chronicled in its last issue. The Independent richly merits the solid foundation it stands upon and we trust the ensuing twenty one years will indicate a corresponding increase.

Last Friday night John C. Cooper of Sterling put up at Lake Shore hotel. An hour or two after, Col. Randall, passing through one of the halls, smelled gas, and located the escape in the room occupied by Cooper. He reported the fact at the office, and the room was immediately opened. Mr. Cooper was partly unconscious, and would have been killed before morning. He blew out the gas when he went to bed.

[Oswego Palladium.

It will be recollected that a building fell in Syracuse during the winter by which several lives were lost. Martin Cain, father of Patrick Cain, one of the killed, brought suit against the city to to recover damages for the loss of his son. A non-suit was entered by the court after the question of the liability of the city had been argued by the opposite counsel at great length. At the conclusion of the argument Judge Merwin said that in order to maintain this action it would be necessary to hold that the city must as a matter of duty enter on private property to see if there are any nuisances, and that a failure to do so would involve a liability for damages. He could not make such a ruling and therefore non-suited the plaintiff.

PARISH—C. F. Trowbridge post master of this place is appointed mail agent on the railroad between Syracuse and New York. It is supposed he will at present have charge of the Michigan mail that runs on that route. Mr. Trowbridge will make an efficient mail agent. This appointment causes a vacancy of postmaster here, and there is much strife here over who will be his successor. L. D. Rulison is spoken of very highly for that position. He is a competent man, a day laborer, was the first man in the town who enlisted in the Union army was in all the battles of both the 24th infantry and 24th cavalry in which those regiments were engaged.

Editor White has purchased the office he now occupies and will convert it into both a printing office and a dwelling house.

The severe weather last week hastened the death of a number of old people in this vicinity. John DeLine, aged about 64, who has been in poor health for some time died the 24th inst. John Turner, aged 65, died the same day of gastric ulcer. Hiram Blue aged 63, who has enjoyed good health up to the time of his death, died the 23d inst. very suddenly with heart disease.

SAMARITAN

NERVINE!

SAMARITAN NERVINE

Cures Epileptic Fits, Spasms, Convulsions, St Vitus Dance, Vertigo, Insanity, Apoplexy, Paralysis, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, and all Nervous Diseases. This infallible remedy will positively eradicate every species of Nervous Derangement, and drive them away from whence they came, never to return again. It utterly destroys the germs of disease by neutralizing the hereditary taint or poison in the system, and thoroughly eradicate the disease, and utterly destroys the cause.

SAMARITAN NERVINE

Cures Female Weakness, General Debility, Leucorrhœa or Whites, Painful Menstruation, Ulceration of the Uterus, Internal Heat, Gravel, Inflamation of the Bladder, Irritability of the Bladder. For Wakefulness at Night, there is no better remedy. During the change of life no Female should be without it. It quiets the Nervous System and gives rest comfort and nature's sweet sleep.

SVMARITAN NERVINE

Cures Alcholism, Drunkenness and the habit of Opium Eating. These degrading habits are by far the worst evils that have ever befallen suffering humanity. Thousands die annually from these noxious drugs. The drunkard drinks liquor not because he likes it but for the pleasure of drinking and treating his friends, little thinking that he is on his road to ruin. Like the Opium Eater, he first uses the drug in small quantities as a harmless antidote. The soothing influence of the drug takes strong hold upon its victim, leading him on to his own destruction. The habits of Opium Eating and [illegible] are precisely what eating is to a [illegible], as over-eating first inflames the stomach, which redoubles its cravings until it paralyzes both the stomach and appetite. So every drink of liquor or dose of opium, instead of satisfying, only adds to its fierce fires, until it consumes the vital force and then itself. Like the gluttonous tape-worm, it cries "Give, give, give!" but never enough until its own rapacity devours itself. Samaritan Nervine gives instant relief in all such cases. It produces sleep, quiets the nerves, builds up the nervous system, and restores body and mind to a healthy condition.

SAMARITAN NERVINE

Cures Nervous Dyspepsia, Palpitation of the Heart, Asthma, Bronchitis, Scrofula, Syphilis, diseases of the Kidneys and all diseases of the urinary organs. Nervous debility, caused by the indiscretions of youth, permanently cured by the use of this valuable remedy. To you, young middle-aged and old men, who are covering your sufferings as with a mantle by silence, look up, you can be saved by timely efforts, and make ornaments to society, and jewels in the crown of your Maker, if you will. Do not keep this a secret longer, until it saps your vitals, and destroys both body and soul. If you are thus afflicted, take DR. RICHMOND's Samaritan Nervine. It will restore your shattered nerves, arrest premature decay, impart tone and energy to the whole system.

SAMARITAN NERVINE.

Is for sale by druggists everywhere, or may be had direct from us. Those who wish to obtain further evidence of the curative properties of Samaritan Nervine will please enclose a 3 cent postage stamp for a copy of our Illustrated Journal of Health, giving hundreds of testimonials of cure from persons who have used the medicine, and also their pictures photographed after their restoration to perfect health. J. C. Harrington has returned from Rochester where he has been attending school.

The school in the Emory district will open May 1st with Miss Nellie Wise as teacher.

E. W. Ross of this village was last week granted a patent for a band on fly wheels.

Mr. Frank VanBuren left for Chicago, Ill., this morning, where a position in a dry goods store awaits him.

The Board of Trustees will meet at the police court rooms, Friday evening. at 7:30 to transact business.

Willard Patterson left for Syracuse Monday where he will be employed for the season paper hanging.

Mr. Hubbard of Oneida is in town putting a portion of the Kenyon block in readiness for a fancy goods store.

H. & A. Rosenbloom have rented the store recently occupied by the Boston Clothing House and will occupy it in a few days as a branch of their main store.

Mrs. W. W. Scribner of Oswego who has been spending a few weeks with Mrs. Dr. W. L. Woodbury returned home Monday.

Samuel Green will officiate at the union temperance meeting Sunday afternoon at 3:30 in the S. of T. rooms over Woodin's hardware store.

The musical selections rendered by the violinist, Prof. C. T. Marsh in Nichols Hall Friday evening were well received, the gentleman receiving a demonstrative encore.

Geo. D. Richardson will remove from his temporary quarters on Oneida St. to his old stand, corner Cayuga and Second streets next week. Mr. Richardson will put in a new stock of goods.

The McIntyre Bros. are building the Syracuse Evening Herald, and also the Sunday edition, up to magnificent proportions. Nearly two hundred copies of the Sunday Herald was disposed of in Fulton last Sunday. Leave orders at Tucker's grocery and they will be promptly honored.

The Oswego Falls reading circle of the lower section was held at the residence of Thomas R. Wright. last evening. The exercises consisted of recitations, select reading, vocal and instrumental music, all of which were well rendered, and a very enjoyable time was experienced. The next one will take place at the residence of R. P. Algier, when a play will be introduced in costume and a bountiful repast served.

The Allen house was sold at auction last Wednesday afternoon, James N. Clark bidding it in at $505. Mr. Clark did not take the property, a misunderstanding existing between him and the parties he represented. The trustees subsequently met and sold the house to J. M. Spafford, for the same price Mr. Clark bid it in for. It will be removed to the south-west corner of Third and Academy streets.

The Gilberts Mills twins, Garfield and Arthur [illegible], have been quite sick for [illegible] on a fair way to recovery. They are six months old and [illegible] and three [illegible]. They so closely resemble each [illegible] by placing a [illegible] the neck [illegible]

[illegible] the working crowd of Italian [illegible] look down upon the [illegible] below, commenting upon the [illegible] of the gentlemen and the [illegible] of the ladies, seeming to [illegible] way of spending themselves the most ridiculous thing in the world. Too much like work you know!

Not far from Bordighera is San Remo another resort of invalids, and a marvel of beauty and comfort. Palm trees fringe the road beside the sea for a long distance. We passed Genoa on our return. We reached Pisa at five o'clock in the morning, rested for a time, then started in search of its wonderful square. We entered the Duorno just as the morning lenten service was beginning in one of the distant side chapels. Some of the paintings of the dome are quite fine. After we seated ourselves in front of the high altar and listened to the low chanting of the priests in a chapel beyond our sight.

Then came the Campo Santo. Walking under the arcades that surround it, we read the epitaphs of the illustrious dead so quietly sleeping under the sacred earth brought long ago from Palestine. After the Campo Santo, the wonderful Batisterio of black and white marble. I bring it to you in Parian marble to place beside its old companion, the leaning tower of Pisa. We walked around the tower and admired it; went away and considered it; returned and examined it. Each time our wonder grew that some wild wind or angry storm had not overthrown it long ago. But here it stands with its wonderful bells, its arches, its galleries silent and grim in our day, as it has been for hundreds of years.

From Pisa to Florence, through the fertile and highly cultivated valley of the Arno. Here we see fewer palms and olives, but immense fields of yellow mustard. I think a large portion of the European world must depend upon the valley of the Arno for their supply of this tiny grain. Here, too, the mulberry abounds, and the vines they support are arranged in the most fantastic forms. Surely the mind was greatly exercised that planned the garlands, loops, wheels, bows, etc. ad infinitum, that hang from the trees or climb the trellises. If it was an Italian who thus exerted his fancy, he never stood up to do it. He either lay upon the green turf, his face to the sun, upon a shaded terrace, or swung in a hammock under the orange trees. Along this valley of the Arno we see more of the cypress than at any time before. Large groves upon the hill side, and the roads lined with them for many miles. I do not wonder it is called the funereal and sentinel tree of southern Europe. Surely it expresses sadness, darkness, grief. Arriving at Florence we found everything wearing its holiday attire. No wonder people love to linger long among its studios, galleries, and churches. We admired the wonderful bronze doors of the world renowned Batisterio, that Byron thought beautiful enough for the gates of Paradiso. Some one has placed them at Pisa. We who have one day visited the former, and the following one lingered long beside the bronze pictures that tell the old bible story upon one side, and of warriors stern and bold upon the other, can tell you just where to look for them. We paid visits to the church of San Lorenzo, St. Corce, the Medeci chapel etc., etc. The Bonaparte chapel in St. Croce has a great charm for me. Years ago I read upon one tomb the name of "Charlotte Bonabarte, Digne de son nom."

This inscription so simple, and yet embracing all, stamped itself indelibly upon my memory. It seems so much to do! To live worthy of one's name.

To-morrow we start for the eternal city. Roma—March 5th. Here we are! and hardly believing it. Awake, and scarcely able to realize we are not dreaming. Old Rome is the same but "Nuova Roma" as the coachman insists upon calling it, seems to have grown up in a night. We have visited nearly all the churches that are considered the best worth seeing. Yesterday we heard service in St. Johns in Lateran, and visited its many beautiful chapels. Those of the Torlonia and Corsina families are most beautiful. The catacombs of St. Agnes possessed great interest for us. Our French guide reading the old inscriptions seemed quite at home among the miniature chapels, and told so much of the progress of the excavations.

We have each a veritable souvener from buried Rome. Mine is a lamp that shall be lighted in memory of St. Agnes.

Yesterday, when returning from the catacombs we met a procession bearing the [illegible]. From this we judge there must be a considerable amount of sickness [illegible]. I had forgotten to tell you Antonelli has a beautiful tomb in St. John's in Lateran. [illegible]

Mr. John [illegible] is said to be in an alarming condition. His friends have but little hope of his recovery.

Right Reverend Bishop Huntington will administer the rite of confirmation at Zion church this evening at 7:30.

Mr. B. W. VanEpps has recived a flattering business offer from Canandaigua and thinks of moving to that village.

It may ease the minds of many active local politicians to learn that Morgan VanBuren is booked for a place under collector Lamoree, in Oswego.

Messrs. George M. Case, John W. Pratt and C. S. Eggleston donated towards the cash prizes that were given at the closing exercises of dist. No. 1.

Mr. Harris Rosenbloom has purchased of Mr. S. B. Whitaker his residence on Rochester street, between Frst and Second, and will take possession Monday.

Andrew LaLonde has purchased the Bostwick barber shop in the Lewis house, and would be pleased to see his friends.

The Boston Clothing Store failure remains in statu quo. The various creditors are sparring for the stock. Mr. Shulman says he may possibly re-open some time.

This community was startled yesterday to learn that Dr Stephen Pardee had suffered a severe shock of paralysis, at about 4 a. m. His condition is precarious this a. m., and it is feared he will not survive the day.

The grocery firm of Robinson Whitaker & Co., have dissolved partnership, Messrs Whitaker and Bradshaw retiring. The business will be carried on at the old stand by Robinson & Langdon. Mr. A. E. Langdon of lower Oswego Falls being the new member of the firm. They will be alive to the wants of the public and will be pleased to see all of their friends.

Mr. Horace N. Gilbert, of this village, is negotiating with the proprietors of the Syracuse Sunday Times for the purchase of that paper. This will be news to Fulton people and possibly to Mr. Gilbert. The Times is a paying sheet and if Mr. Gilbert controls it will undoubtedly add new features that will still further enhance its value as a newspaper. Mr. Gilbert is active and able and success is never wanting in any of his undertakings.

Bennett & Moulton's Juvenile Opera Troupe gave two performances in Nichols hall, last week. Wednesday evening Cinderella, or the Magic Slipper was presented and all present were well pleased with the entertainment. Thursday evening came the Chimes of Normandy, The singing and acting was all that could have been desired. Miss Annie Leibsch, the leading soprano, made a favorable impression—with the song "The Cows are in the Corn." A hearty welcome awaits their return.

The Opera House was filled to its fullest seating capacity to witness the entertainment given by Hi Henry's minstrels. Every feature of the program from the delightlul parlor opening scene and overture, to the fall of the curtain upon the scene of a badly dilapidated darkey were more than excellent, and the actors were all stars in their special parts. It scarcely seems just to mention some without mentioning all, and while all deserve special mention, especially do Hi Henry, Otis Bowes, Tom English, J. H. Burton and Ah-ne-wey-o in their specialties. Prof. Burton and his trained dogs' is alone worth double the price of admission. [Utica Herald.

Aaron DeGraw died at the residence of his mother in this village last Friday of diabetes, aged 21 years. He was upon the streets the preceeding Sunday and his death was sudden and painful

Mr. DeGraw was a young man of promise, active and industrious, and he will be greatly missed in many places.

The family, and especially his widowed invalid mother, have the sincerest sympathy of this community in the loss of a loving brother and a dutiful and faithful son.

Funeral services were held at the house Sunday at 4 p. m., Rev. E. Moyses of the Zion church officiating. The fire department and his working companions attended his funeral in a body and accompanied the remains to their final resting place in Mt Adnah cemetry.

Nicholas Althouse, of this village, was fined $25.00 in U S court, in Utica, last week for selling liquor without displaying the government stamp.

At the close of School No. 1, exercises in Nichols hall, Friday evening, Rev J. S. Riggs on behalf of the school presented Prof Simpson with an elegant copy of Whittier's poems complete.

Mrs. A. Clark has secured the services of a lady from Napanee, Ont., who will superintend the trimming department in her new dressmaking and millinery rooms over the Bee Hive.

George A. Taylor, a resident of the town of Volney, for thirty-five years, died Saturday, March 25, 1882, aged 72 years. Funeral was held yesterday at his late residence three miles east of Fulton, Rev. A. U. Hutchins officiating. His remains were interred in Mt. Adnah.

A. B. Cook of this village, who has been employed as telegraph operator at New Haven Conn., for some time was in town Monday. Mr. Cook has been appointed to the responsible position of manager of the Rapid Transit office, in Syracuse, and entered upon his duties yestarday.

W. S. Rogers, of Syracuse, has commenced a suit to have set aside a mortgage for $260 which John McCoon, of Liverpool, formerly of Fulton, gave Dr. C. S. Huntington, of that village, to secure him for professional services. The suit is brought on the ground that the physician did not hold a diploma from a recognized medical college and was not therefore legally authorized to practice and that if he did practice he could not collect pay for his services. Lawyers regard the question involved as an exceedingly interesting one.

Closing Exercises.

The closing exercises of school No. 1, held in Nichols Hall, Friday evening were largely attended, the pupils acquitting themselves with aptness and finish commendable in the highest degree.

This school has grown under the tutelage of Prof. Simpson to be on an equal with any in our midst. The attendance during the term passed has been in all departments such as to more than tax the normal seating capacity, many non-residents being enrolled. At the close of the exercises Rev. J. S. Riggs presented prizes to the following pupils;

DEPORTMENT

The committee on speaking awarded the following prizes:

First Prizes	Mattie Van Buren. Lillian Barrett
Second Prizes	James Brown
Third Prizes	Cora Sylvester Cora Barnes Kittie Maynard Edwin Harvie

Rev. J. S. Riggs' lecture in Nichols hall Sunday evening was largely attended.

The Oswego Falls naturalization cases were called at Utica last week. Hon J T Spriggs, of Utica, and J I Pringy, of Auburn, represented the defense. In the case of Parker, he being the only one arraigned, the objection was raised that the prisoner is arraigned on information and the crime charged being an infamous one an information would not lie. After considerable sparring by counsel the case was adjourned to Rochester, in May and the accused, Parker, and Lyman H Patterson, who is charged with the same offense were allowed to go on their own recognizance to appear at Buffalo in September. The case is now regarded as being practically at an end.

The following appropriations were made at the election yesterday, for the maintenance of the village for the ensuing year:

Highway Repairs	$1000 00
" Permanent Imp'm'ts	1000 00
Cross walks	600 00
Lamps	1100 00
Incidental	1000 00

[illegible] formerly Fultonians might find space in your valuable paper, and be of interest to your readers I again take upon myself the pleasure of submitting them.

Fisher is situated in the northern part of the state, (about [illegible] miles from St. Paul,) on Red Lake river. Two years ago, where this beautiful little village now stands flourished a fine field of wheat. Now, there is sixty well-paying business houses, with a good prospect of one hundred before next harvesting time. There are three elevators here, which buy on an average 50,000 bushels of wheat per month, the year round. The Bulletin is the village paper published by A. Dewey.

To illustrate how fast towns are growing in this section I will mention one or two, which have come under my observation: The town of Larimose, Dakota, situated in the Elk Valley region has a daily and weekly newspaper. The town site was surveyed less than three months ago, and now, where the luxuriant prairie grass waved last summer, is to be seen substantial business houses, numbering some thirty-five or forty. Then, again, Portland, Dak., last December contained one dwelling house, and five days after it boasted of forty-five houses. These are an almost every day occurrence.

Farming is among the most paying avocations of this, the Red River Valley region. Hundreds of acres are sown by the "bonanza" farmers each year. Farming is conducted much differently than by my eastern friends. Machinery does most of the work. The plowing is all done in the fall. and the wheat which is the principal product, is sown early in the spring. A Mr. Webb, of Edna, commenced sowing his wheat the 25th day of February, and has seventy-five acres in.

A man with a very little capital can make him a good home here if he chooses to undergo a few years of frontiersmens' hardships. He can take up a homestead under the following conditions; He must be a resident of the United States; be 21 years old, or at the head of a family; he may enter 160 acres, or any subdivision thereof; the land office fee is $14.00, or, if within R. R. limits, $18.00 He will have to build a house within six months after filing his claim, and live on it five years, or he may take up a tree-claim, which costs him $14.00 land-office faes. It takes eight years to acquire title, but actual residence is not one of the requisites in getting it. The first year he breaks five acres; the second year he cultivates that five acres to crops, and breaks five acres more; the third year he plants the first five acres to trees, cultivates the second five to crops; the fourth year he plants the second five to trees, and then has ten acres of trees growing, so that he can show, on the final day of proof, 6,350 living trees. Willow and Buttonwood shoots are used to set out; just stick them in the earth and they will grow. The soil is the richest to be found the world over. It can't be beaten. There is a small fee in making final proof, but no other expense in securing title. One can hire his tree-claim work done. It costs $3.00 per acre for plowing.

Then there is the pre-emption law which he can avail himself of. Can take the same amount of land as above and within 90 days after settlement, he must file at the local office a notice giving the government survey and the settlement, or first improvement; for this filing he pays $2.00. Within 33 months from the date of this settlement, he must submit his final proof. He must show both a continued residence and cultivation of the land for agricultural purposes, an habitable dwelling, and an amount of other improvements, like plowing, stable, well, &c.—that will prove to the land officers his intentions to comply with the spirit of the law. His land costs him, if within the limits of the Railroad $2.50 per acre, or $4.00 for his 100 acres; if outside that limit, $1.25 per acre or $200.00. A man can take up 320 acres under any two of the above acts, at one time.

Farmers usually build themselves a small house and their barns or stables rather are made of poles, shaped into a sort of frame, with their hay thrown around and on top of it. There is no fencing. One can see for miles out on the level prairie, and it looks like the rippling of water as the wheat nods in the breeze.

The northwest is having the biggest boom in emigration that she has ever before known. There are thirty-six coaches, containing 1,800 Canadian emigrants on the road, north of St. Paul.

The most desirable lands, yet to be taken are in the neighborhood of Red Lake Falls, some little distance north of here. The village site has just been surveyed and emigration (of business men) has commenced. It will soon be a thriving village, with a flattering prospect of becoming a railroad center, and in time a large manufacturing city,—a second Minneapolis—as it has the best water power in Northwestern Minnesota. Should I make Red Lake Falls a visit, I will tell you of its promise.

Yours Truly
G. A. Burtch.

The Spring Grotto.

A little white lace affair, which Geraldine Blake had brought from Paris, was her fan. Everybody said that it was "exquisite," and admired the peculiarly delicate perfume which it exhaled. It suited Geraldine's handsome dark eyes, this bit of fragrant, filmy snow, which she waved in close proximity to her ruby lips and encrimsoned oval cheek; and it was her favorite. It was very becoming to her, yet it might have had nothing to do with her engagement to Vivian Stuart, her brother's tutor, that winter; but her beauty, its ripe perfection, was something marvelous, and who should know this better than the man who saw her daily in her home—beheld her morning freshness and unwearied spirits?

Nor did he need to gaze in vain. Vivian Stuart was not a poor man. He was the possessor of a fair fortune, a gentleman and a scholar. He had accepted the position of tutor to Lester Blake because he had nothing to do, and was very tired doing it. He had known the family from boyhood. The mothers, now deceased, had been intimate friends. Instead of being an inferior at Rosehome, Vivian Stuart was a very important person in the family—as important as Annie Lind was unimportant.

She, once the pride and pet of a wealthy home, was nursery governess at the Blakes' proud mansion. If the young heart pined in its loveleasness and isolation no one appeared to know or care. Not that they were unkind; they were busy and unobservant. She was fragile and hazel-eyed; her delicate face was colorless. She was always busy with the little girls, Clare and Pearl. And thus it had been for a year.

The engagement between Geraldine Blake and Vivian Stuart was announced in the early spring. No one was surprised. Mr. Stuart had attended Miss Blake to balls and parties all winter.

"Of course we expected it," remarked Aunt Dorothea, who presided at Rosehome; "and a very suitable match it is considered by all Geraldine's friends. Miss Lind, you are going by Geraldine's door. Will you let me send up a cup of tea by you. She will not be down to breakfast.

And without more ado the cup of Sevres china was placed in Annie's slender hand, while Aunt Dorothea bustled away.

The nursery-governess walked to the door of the breakfast-room, and spoke to a passing servant.

"Martha, take this tea to Miss Blake," she said.

Returning, she unfastened Pearl's bib, took Clare by the hand and went up to the nursery.

"Mith Annie, what make your lip kiver when 'o' speak to me?" inquired little Pearl with eyes of deep conern.

Annie's hazel eyes were full of pain, and there was a burning red on the soft cheek. She sank into a chair and looked meditatively about the pretty nursery.

She must live on, an alien, forever "climbing other people's stairs." Never now, as she had once dreamed, would a home of her own close about her. And life was so long—so long! When she was very old and could work no longer, she wondered where she would die.

Meanwhile, Geraldine Blake lay among the snowy pillows of her luxurious bed, her eyes wide open, fixed upon the sunshine which streamed through the plate-glass upon the roses of the velvet carpet. She was thinking of her recent engagement.

"This is the end," she murmured, with wide, absent eyes.

A little strange that she did not say, "This is the beginning." The great dark eyes were dreamy, but not happy. There was no love-light in them. She turned and buried her face in the pillow, with a convulsive movement.

"I wish—I wish I could tell somebody who would understand."

But there was no one in the house who was pleased by her engagement would have it otherwise.

There was a knock at the door; but it was Martha, with the tea.

By-and-by, Geraldine rose and dressed. But for the first time in her life she rouged her cheeks.

The family were at lunch. Vivian Stuart rose and brought her a chair.

"Is your headache better, dear?" inquired Judge Blake, who, however awful a personage he might be to offenders of the civil law, roared very gently in the bosom of his family.

"I never knew you to be sick, Geraldine," remarked Aunt Dorothea.

"Oh, I am not sick, Aunt Doro; but Mrs. Thornton's rooms were so crowded last night—"

"The ventilation was not good," said Vivian Stuart, quickly. "I will take you to drive after lunch, in the fine air, Geraldine."

Half an hour later, Annie Lind watched them drive away; and she wished she could be away—away to the ends of the earth. For others, sunshine, flowers and the bravery of life; for her, the sterile pathway, which duty sternly pointed out.

Despite of her friend's advice, Geraldine dressed that evening for another party. She had knotted the last ribbon, fastened the last glittering clasp, and taken up her snowy lace fan, when little Clare stole into the room.

"Gerry," she asked, looking intently at her radiant sister, "does you like Mr. Stuart?"

"Yes, I like him," responded Geraldine, absently.

"[illegible] Miss Lind doesn't," returned the [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible] Vivian Stuart, [illegible] the best of his help-love, [illegible] of the beautiful [illegible]

"No [illegible]. It was Captain Julian Wilton, of the navy," she replied; but every bit of color had gone out of her satin cheek. It came back furiously. "It is very hot in the house," she said, rising. "I am going down to the spring grotto."

And Mr. Stuart sauntered after. The great dog, Emperor, went, too. All around the birds sang, and flowers were blooming.

Musky and hot as was the glowing garden, the spring grotto was a spot sacred to shade and coolness. The water poured into a mossy cavity within a natural arch under a bridge of stone. Shadow-loving vines and branches had crept under, and the further entrance was almost filled by trailing willow boughs. Entering at the free opening, one found rustic seats, a green gloom, a delicious atmosphere, and the tinkling music of the water.

Here Vivian Stuart spent the long forenoon, watching the perfection of Geraldine's face in shadow, and reading aloud the musical meanings of "Lucille." It seemed to him, at last, that the green gloom made his beautiful companion's face too pale.

Did it not occur to him that Geraldine Blake was twenty-three, and that his might not be the first voice which had read beautiful verse to her?

"Miss Lind," said Aunt Dorothea, kindly, a few days later, "you are looking extremely thin and pale. Perhaps the extreme heat and the care of the children are too much for your strength. I think it must be so, and Martin can take care of them for a few days, while you assist Geraldine to prepare for her father's birthday fete. They can be excused from their lessons for a week."

"Oh, no," said Annie, faintly.

But the proposed change was as pleasant relief as the friendly words.

A little color came into the sweet cheek. With a little warm persuasion—for Aunt Dorothea was not unkindly—she yielded, with thanks. So the two girls were busily about house and garden, planning and suggesting new beauties for both.

"Papa invites everybody—even his worst enemies—on these joyous occasions," said Geraldine. "I wish our grounds were twice as large."

They were in an arbor, weaving a garland of roses, on the evening before the fete-day. The sunset light struck Geraldine's dark face with a strange splendor. Annie Lind looked at her without envy, but a sad admiration.

Thrown into Geraldine's special companionship, she could not dislike her, even though she was Vivian Stuart's affianced.

Geraldine's nature was warm and kind. She would have been generous to a worm, Annie thought, feeling dwarfed and colorless beside this glowing beauty, whose jeweled hand sparkled among the roses. Her own little hands fell idly down as her thoughts deepened.

"Are you tired?" asked Geraldine, kindly.

"No," answered Annie, quickly. "But I wish I were strong as you are. You are never tired, are you?"

"I am tired of my life this summer," replied Geraldine, quietly. "Annie, I wonder what you would do in my place? I do not love Mr. Vivian Stuart. I love somebody else, who is good, but poor; and no one would be willing for me to marry Captain Wilton, while they all want me to marry Mr. Stuart. Captain Wilton is so good, so brave, so agreeable! I have tried all winter to keep from loving him—I believe I engaged myself to Mr. Stuart just as a sort of safeguard—and I am afraid Captain Wilton suspects it. But it is all of no use. I do love him, and I suppose Vivian Stuart loves me. I wish I were dead, and safely out of everybody's way! Annie, tell me—what would you do?"

Annie Lind was frightened as she looked into the splendid, tragic face.

"Don't do anything but what is right—please don't," she said, hurriedly laying her little hand softly on Geraldine's jeweled fingers, for some one was approaching.

It was the man who had been instructed to hang the garlands, and Geraldine rose calmly, though Annie trembled so that she could scarcely stand.

All night and all the next day she wondered at Geraldine's coolness. The beautiful garden was thronged with happy guests. She heard Captain Wilton's name spoken, and saw a blue-eyed, refined-looking man, in epaulets, who seemed quite alone in the gay crowd. But all day he was not to be seen in the vicinity of Geraldine's beautiful presence. Her costume was of white and silver, and she waved her little white-laced fan.

Annie's dress was also of white, but her ribbons, flowers and fan were blue. The latter accidentally fell from her hand, and a passing footstep crushed it.

"Take mine," said Geraldine, "I have so much to do, I am afraid I shall lose it."

So, waving the little fan of white lace, as the colored lanterns were hung, Annie passed into the spring grotto for a moment of coolness and rest. Vivian Stuart saw the white fan flutter under the vines into the darkness of the secret nook. He followed. As soon as Annie heard his voice, she knew he had mistaken her for Geraldine. He sat beside her on the rustic bench."

"Do you love me?"

There was an instant's silence, broken only by the tinkle of the rill and the distant music of the band.

"Yes," breathed a voice, too utterly sad for Geraldine's, but Vivian Stuart had no suspicion of the truth.

His eyes were covered by the hand upon which his face was bent. He did not see a white figure flit into the grotto, start at finding it occupied, hesitate, then pause just inside the further entrance, at his next words.

"Oh, Geraldine!" he groaned, [illegible] I admire you, am [illegible] by your beauty, but, before [illegible] belongs to a [illegible]

"Annie! Annie!" he murmured, you have learned the truth. I do not dare to ask for your forgiveness."

A little while before, she would not have believed she could so have spoken, but now the words came very sweetly:

"Vivian, it is yours."

What is to be will be. In spite of everything and everybody, there were two happy and finally acceptable weddings that fall—Vivian Stuart and Annie Lind, and Geraldine Blake and Captain Wilton. The latter, chancing to pause under the willow, wondering at the nearness of voices—not knowing of the existence of the grotto—had heard all, and received Geraldine, after her confession, in his arms—as much to her surprise as his.

THE RESULT OF NECESSITY.

What the ancients for want of knowledge in medical science can only be appreciated by contrasting the vast amount of suffering cured and pain alleviated in modern times, by the use of Swayne's Ointment for skin diseases. Its introduction was characterized by the necessrry withdrawal of a score or more of illusive quack nostrums, whose evil effects have left living monuments to denounce them. Thus is exemplified the proverb, Necessity is the mother of Invention.

CRUEL JOKE ON A YOUNG FARMER.

A young farmer of Clintondale, Ulster county, became deeply enamored of a young lady, a stranger in the neighborhood, who was temporarily stopping in the village, and, after courting her assiduously for some days, popped the all-important question, received "yes" for an answer, and insisted on the marriage ceremony being performed the following evening. Accordingly, a large number of friends were invited, and the couple were made one by a Justice of the Peace of the neighborhood. Immediately upon the conclusion of the ceremony the bride was surrounded by her gentlemen friends, all of whom insisted upon kissing her, greatly to the displeasure of the jealous groom, whereupon she made her escape to an adjoining room, and the bridegroom has not seen her since, or at least has not been able to recognize her. The truth of the matter is that the bride was a pretty boy, and when he left the room he changed his garments and mingled with the crowd and enjoyed the fun. The groom will never get over the rather practical joke which his friends played upon him.—Elmira Advertiser.

A HORSE'S PRIVATE MARK.

Dr. Bender yesterday made an incision into the left shoulder of a fine horse belonging to Mr. H. Hess, the Superintendent of Street Service in the introduction of our water-works system, and removed a silver ten-cent piece of 1876, which was placed there about four years ago by the man from whom Mr. Hess bought the horse in Kentucky. It was intended as a private mark, and was placed just beneath the skin, but considerable tissue had formed over it during its four years' lodgment. It was a well-preserved piece when slipped under the skin, and the only mark it retains of the singular service to which it was put is a greasy substance which adheres closely to the depression in the coin.—Jamestown Journal.

KANSAS PRAISING IT.

"While I was in Topeka last winter, said the Hon Arthur Edgington, I had a pretty rough time of it. I got a bad cold, and, that not being sufficiently severe, was also attackted with rheumatism. The pain was in my left shoulder. At times I almost writhed with agony. I tell you sir, that the pain could not have been greater had my shoulder been screwed up in a vice. I was utterly helpless, and felt like I was destined to remain in that condition indefinately. My friends and a physician were generous in their prescriptions and my room soon became a miniature apothecary shop. But nothing did me any good. One day some one told me I was enduring a great deal of of needless pain when I could invest 50 cents in a bottle of St. Jacobs Oil and be cured. I invested in a bottle of the oil, rubbed it on my shoulder twice, and in two days forgot that I ever had rheumatism. Yes, that is a great remedy, and no mistake. They can't say too much in favor of its healing powers."

The above was uttered by Mr. Edgington while sitting in the porch of the La Gonda House, at Columbus, the other evening, and was overheard by [illegible] who is traveling [illegible]

RESCUED FROM DEATH

William J. Coughlin of Somerville, Mass, says: In the fall of 1876 I was taken with bleeding of the lungs followed by a severe cough. I lost my appetite and flesh and was confied to my bed. In 1877 I was admitted to the hospital. The doctors said I had a hole in my lung as big as a half dollar. At one time a report went around that I was dead. I gave up hope, but a friend told me of DR WILLIAM HALL'S BALSAM FOR THE LUNGS. I got a bottle, when to my surprise I began to feel better, and to-day I feel better than for three years past.

"I write this hoping every one afflicted with diseased Lungs will take DR WILLIAM HALL'S BALSAM, and be convinced that CONSUMPTION CAN BE CURED. I can positively say it has done more good than all the other medicines I have taken since my sickness.

How to Secure Health.

It seems strange that any one will suffer from derangements brought on by impure blood, when Scovill's Sarsaparilla and Stillingia, or Blood and Liver Syrup will restore health to the physical organization. It has been proven to be the best blood purifier eve discovered, curing scrofula, syphilitic disorders, weakness of the kidneys, erysipelas, malaria, nervous disorders, debility, bilious complaints, and all diseases of the blood, liver, kidneys, stomach, skin etc. A single bottle will prove a health restorer, for it acts like a charm, especially when the complaint is of an exhaustive nature.

THE INDEPENDENT.

"The foremost religious newspaper of the United States."—The Rev Joseph Cook.

Established in 1848, as an advocate of anti-slavery and of reforms in religion and politics, the independent at once became a recognized power througout the country. Its influence has ever since been constantly growing. As it has fought against slavery and for cheap postage, so it will fight against Mormanism, for Civil Service Reform, and for purity in politics, and general uprightness in all things. It employs the best editorial talent and speaks fearlessly on all subjects. It pays for contributed articles and for editorial services more than double the amount paid by any other weekly newspaper.

It publishes more religious discussions than the religious reviews, and more poetry and stories popular monthlies, and gives more information than an annual cyclopedia. The long cable dispatches recently published from the great Methodist Council in London are a good illustration of what the Independent is constantly doing. A list of the most prominent religious and philosophical writers, poets and story writers in the country is the list of the contributors of the Independent. Besides the space set aside for these writers and for editorials, there are twenty-two distinct departments, edited by twenty-two specialists, which include Biblical Research, Sanitary, Legal, Fine Arts, Music, Science Pebbles, Personalities, Hymn Notes, School and College, Literature, Religious Intelligence, Missions, Sunday school, News of the Week, Finance, Insurance, Stories, puzzles, and Agriculture. 32 pages in all.

A Telegraphic Error.

December and May, in the persons of Mr. Josiah Blend and Miss Barbara Paul, were united some half dozen years ago in holy bonds of matrimony. People who knew them both were much amazed at the alliance; for the refined and ladylike Miss Paul—had she waited—might have had "something" younger and handsomer than the venerable, ancient and many wrinkled Josiah.

Being a successful Glasgow merchant, the aged Josiah was rich; and naturally their acquaintances concluded that his money was the chief attraction. Perhaps it was. It is not for us to impute motives either good or bad; but there were not lacking prophets enough, even in the small circle of their personal friends, who ventured to foretell a short, sharp, and decisive marriage campaign, in which the young wife would punish the old man, and finally come out of the conflict, under the shelter of a "judicial separation," with spoils sufficient to maintain her in a competency for the remainder of her natural life.

They proved false prophets. Whether money was at the bottom of it or not, the pair lived as happily and as lovingly as any two lovers could hope to do. This was so till a certain year, when two different circumstances conspired to bring matters to such a crisis, that the judicial separation seemed inevitable.

Josiah was on the whole an inoffensive old fellow; but when his usually sluggish temper was once quickened into action, he was prone to let it carry him to such an extreme length that no one could defend him. Barbara was patient to a fault, and tended him with a loving and faithful devotion admirable in one so young. The two unhappy causes which threatened for the time being to end their married life, were very dissimilar in themselves, though in the end they got somewhat mixed up. They were—Barbara's cousin, Charlie Robinson, and a telegram.

"Barbara," said the antique Josiah, one morning, at the breakfast table, "I wish that cousin of yours—'Dear Charlie,' as you call him—would not come here so often and monopolize so much of your time."

"I do not think he does take up much of my time," responded his wife, in a mildly surprised tone. "But I do not see very well how I could prevent him coming, unless I shut the door in his face."

"You might do worse," growled Josiah; "a great deal worse. I hate him, with his pretensions, his stuck-up airs, his general humbug. Why, I heard him call you his 'dear Baba' last night, when he wanted you to sing with him."

"You are not jealous?" laughed Barbara reproachfully; "surely not. That is the name he called me by when we were children. But I'll tell him that you dislike it, and no doubt he'll desist."

"You would do better to tell him not to come at all, as his company is not wanted. I overheard him say last night to that empty-headed chum of his that I was an old fossil. 'Yes, still,' he said, 'That old fogy, Blend, has a pile of cash; but he is a miserable old skinflint, and won't part with it.' That was gratitude for you, after finishing a couple of bottles of my old Burgundy and smoking half a dozen of my finest cigars. He is an impudent scamp."

"There surely must be some mistake," said his wife. "Charlie would never say that."

[illegible]

[illegible] Meikle to telegraph for her; and this was the telegram which was delivered to his wife.

"Mrs. Meikle, L——, To Mrs. Blend, Woodburn House, Glasgow.—Your husband is dead. Come down at once."

Great consternation was the result. On the previous day Mrs. Blend had received a piteous note from Josiah, saying he was "very ill," and stating that he had been "vomiting frequently," and that his head was "splitting," so that she never questioned the accuracy of the telegram. Neither did her father, nor her cousin Charlie, who was sent for in the emergency.

She was fearfully shocked at the unexpected intelligence, and rendered well-nigh helpless, while the two men sagely shook their heads, and attempted to console her with some reflections on the liability of old age to sudden death, which were well-meant but unfortunately ineffective. Charlie undertook—as, of course, he was expected to do—all the arrangements in connection with the funeral. He went to the cemetery that afternoon, and ordered the grave to be opened in three days; he put the usual notice in the papers; issued the customary black-bordered announcements; went to the undertaker's, and ordered a handsome coffin to be taken down to L—— by the first train in the morning, and indeed did everything necessary with his usual business-like promptitude and dispatch. Then he went to the telegraph office, and forwarded this message:

"Charles Robinson, Woodburn House, Glasgow, To Mrs. Meikle, L——. Telegram received. Mrs. Blend very much grieved. Will be down by first train to-morrow. Do best you can till then."

Mrs. Meikle read the message to Josiah, who smiled sweetly at his wife's loving concern and wifely anxiety. It was very good of her to be "much grieved," and to ask Mrs. Meikle to do all she could for him. Mrs. Meikle noticed his pleased expression, and jocularly observed that he seemed to be getting better even with the thought of her coming down, and had no doubt that a sight of her would do him more good than all the medicines he had taken. In the morning he felt so well that he got up; but his happy anticipations of his wife's arrival did not last long. Lifting the telegram, which Mrs. Meikle had left lying on the table, he read it, and was horrified to discover—what Mrs. Meikle had failed to read on the previous evening—that the message was not from his wife, but from the hated Charlie Robinson. The demon of jealousy took possession of his old soul, and dread suspicion set him on the rack of mental torture.

"Charlie Robinson at Woodburn House!" exclaimed he to himself. "Has he actually been there all the time I have been away? I believe her mother's illness has been merely a blind; and yet the telegram says she is grieved, "very much grieved." Ay, ay, that must be because she has to come away from his delightful society. They have had a fine time of it, calling one another 'Dear Charlie' and 'Dear Baba.' Well, this is the last straw, and no mistake; I'll make both of them suffer, or my name's not Josiah."

These and similar thoughts occupied the convalescent merchant fully until the arrival of the train.

That same morning, Mrs. Blend and Charlie took their places in the train. Mrs. Blend had spent a sleepless night, and had been regretting over and over again that she had not been permitted to see her husband in his last illness. She was dressed in deep mourning; her heart was very sad, and her mind was filled with "thoughts too deep for words." Her cousin, the merry and talkative Charlie, had tied a crape band upon his arm, and he, too, was sympathetically silent. The two undertaker's men and the coffin were also in the train. Charlie thought, and rightly, too, that however well adapted the West Coast might be for supplying the necessaries of life, a coffin of suitable size and material was not a thing that could be obtained there on the shortest notice. That was his reason for taking one down with him in order to bring the body up to town.

The four persons formed a melancholy procession to the house of Mrs. Meikle. Barbara leaned heavily on Charlie's arm, while genuine tears of sorrow chased one another down her blanched cheeks, and the two men followed discreetly at a distance with the coffin on their shoulders.

Mrs. Meikle opened the door, and grasped both of them by the hand warmly, observing that "it was a fine day;" but neither of them could reciprocate her greeting, and therefore sadly and silently [illegible]. Charlie dodged round the table to escape the blow which the fierce Josiah aimed at him with his foot.

"It is a mistake," cried Charlie once more, across the table. "The message——"

"Confound you and the message," yelled the aged one, considering the chest. "Nothing would please you better than to see me in my grave. Get out of the room, you confounded whelp."

Charlie got cool as Josiah's fury increased. He was struck with the ridiculousness of running and dodging each other round the table, and then, when he thought of the coffin at the door, he could no longer suppress a fit of uncontrollable laughter.

"Hear me a moment," gasped Charlie—with tears of laughter coursing down his cheeks—"one moment, Mr. Blend, and I'll explain. It's really very ludicrous! That coffin down below makes me——"

"You would bury me alive, would you, and laugh in my face, you vile scamp!" roared Josiah, picking up a carpet footstool and hurling it at Charlie's head, while the latter ducked, as the swirling footstool with projectile force swept the dressing-table clear of its ornaments.

"Out of my sight," screamed Josiah, now fairly demented.

The young man still hesitated, hoping to explain; but Josiah seized the poker, and would have used it as a projectile had not Charlie, still convulsed, fled quickly down stairs and out at the front door. When he got there, he requested the two men to carry the coffin back to the station, and afterward adjourned with them to the only hotel in the place, to explain and laugh immoderately at this most amusing misunderstanding.

Meanwhile, Josiah helped Mrs. Meikle to put his unconscious wife to bed. Thereafter, he hurriedly donned his apparel, threw on his overcoat, and rushed off down stairs.

"Where are you going?" inquired Mrs. Meikle, who had sent for a doctor.

"Going? I am going to my lawyer in Glasgow to get a divorce. I'll not stand tricks like these!" cried Josiah, as he angrily flung himself out and violently slammed the door behind him.

At the station he got a Herald, where he read:

"On the 21st instant, suddenly, at L——, in the sixtieth year of his age, Mr. Josiah Blend, much regretted."

"Much regretted! Hum," muttered the old man, sneeringly. "A month or two would have seen the two married. Oh, I see it all—I see it all."

When he arrived in town, as he was crossing the streets on his way home, he met his old friend Mr. Maxton.

"Dear me, is that you Josiah? You are advertised as dead in to-day's papers?"

"Get out of my way, you old fool," replied the reckless one, his temper in no degree improved by the journey up to town. So saying, he tore along the street, leaving Mr. Maxton gazing after him in speechless amazement.

When he arrived at his house, the servant who opened the door nearly jumped out of her skin with fright; but Josiah pushed past her, and marched into the parlor, where a few male and female friends were assembled, presumably for the purpose of condoling with the widow upon her expected return to Glasgow. They received Josiah at first in silent astonishment; but, immediately afterward, with a hearty cheer, which was the first thing to make him think an error had been made, and that there was no intention to kill him with fear. The shaking of hands and the subsequent explanations tended to cool down his wrath, and as the fever of excitement left him, he began to feel his weakness and physical prostration returning, and ultimately was compelled to accept the situation with the best grace possible under the circumstances.

When the telegram was shown to him, he went to the postmaster to demand an explanation, an apology, and compensation for loss and damage.

"Look here," said he. "I was bad with a bilious attack, and got my landlady to send this telegram: 'Your husband is bad; come down at once.' One of your operators made it 'dead,' and thereby caused a frightful misunderstanding. I think you will admit," said Josiah, with studied severity of tone, "there is a very great difference between being bad and being dead?"

"Yes; there is a great difference, certainly," replied the postmaster, [illegible]; "and I'm glad the mistake is not the other way; for if you had been dead, instead of being bad, I would not have been favored with this visit."

Josiah had not looked at the error in that light, but [illegible] to acknowledge the [illegible] he replied.

"That's all very well; but it does not [illegible] of the [illegible]

SAVING THE PECANS.

"You picked the pecans up there, I suppose you say," said an Austin reporter yesterday to a young man on a wagon filled with pecans.

"Yes, sir," he replied, "that's where they came from."

"Many up there?"

"Plenty of them."

"Believe I'll try a few," quizzed the reporter, taking a big handful of the pecans.

"I'll sell you a whole peck for 50 cents," said the man with swelling eyes.

"Only want a few. Say, do you know any news?"

"Not a bit, sir; everything is very dull up our way."

"Don't you know anything?"

"Well, I believe I did hear some news yesterday."

"What was it?" asked the reporter, cracking a pecan.

"There was a man got eighteen buckshot in him near where I live."

"Who shot him?"

"I did."

"What did you shoot him for?" asked the reporter, aghast.

"For stealing some of my pecans out of my wagon," said the countryman, reaching under the seat for his shotgun.

The reporter hastily replaced the pecans in the wagon, and after calling the countryman Colonel, disappeared around the corner.—Texas Siftings.

WELL MERITED SUCCESS.

A gentleman once asked a distinguished dispensing druggist to explain the secret of the almost universal demand for Dr. Richmond's Samaritan Nervine. He said that it was in fact a genuine medicine—such a compound as every good physician would prescribe for the disease which it was advertised to cure. Of course it cost less than any druggist would charge for the same article supplied on a physician's prescription, and, besides, by buying the drugs in such enormous quantities, and having a perfect apparatus for compounding the mixture, he was not only enabled to get better articles in the first place, but also to present the medicine in better form and at less price than the same preparation could be obtained from any other source. Dr. Richmond has devoted all his energies to the alleviation of human suffering. With this end in view, and with his whole heart in his great labor for the benefit of the afflicted, he has achieved marked and merited success. There can be no real success without true merit. That his success is real is evidenced by the fact that his reputation as a man and physician does not deteriorate, and the fact that there is a steadily increasing demand for his Samaritan Nervine proves that it is no nostrum, but a reliable remedy. He has repeatedly informed the public that it is no patent medicine, and no patent has ever been asked for or obtained. Neither does he advertise it as a cure-all. There are hundreds of diseases that he acknowledges it will not cure. It may be urged that some of these diseases are so widely different that it seems absurd to prescribe the same remedy. They may differ in symptoms, yet in character be precisely similar; and then we must take into consideration the fact remedies may possess various properties. Thus, some medicines are both tonic and alternative; others may be alternative and laxative, the properties differing according to the quantity administered and the time and the circumstances which demand its employment.

In the manufacture of any pharmaceutical preparation the purity and strength of the material used, and the requisite machinery to be employed, are among the chief essentials. The first is insured by purchasing the ingredients in large quantities, whereby the exercise of greater care in selecting the materials can be afforded; and the second can only be accomplished where the business is sufficiently extensive to warrant a large outlay of capital in procuring chemical apparatus. These facts apply with especial force to the manufacture of our medicines, their quality having been vastly improved since the demand has become so great as to require their manufacture in very large quantities. These ideas are not mere speculative remarks to mislead the reader, or to imbue him with false views of the superiority of our medicines. While inspecting Dr. Richmond's establishment you would be surprised to see the admirable facilities, both chemical and mechanical, which he employs in the prosecution of his business. Every thing is arranged in the most perfectly systematic order, and while to the general observer there appears to be no room for improvement, yet new apparatus and mechanical appliances are constantly being procured for the establishment.

THE SUN.
NEW YORK, 1882.

The Sun for 1882 will make its fifteenth annual revolution under the present management, shining, as always, for all, big and little, mean and gracious, contented and unhappy, Republican and Democratic, depraved and virtuous, intelligent and obtuse. The Sun's light is for mankind and womankind of every sort; but its genial warmth is for the good, while it pours hot discomfort on the blistering backs of the persistently wicked.

The Sun of 1868 was a newspaper of a new kind. It discarded many of the forms, and a multitude of the superfluous words and phrases of ancient journalism. It undertook to report in a fresh, succinct, unconventional way all the news of the world, omitting no event of human interest, and commenting upon affairs with the fearlessness of absolute independence. The success of this experiment was the success of The Sun. It effected a permanent change in the style of American newspapers. Every important journal established in this country in the dozen years past has been modelled after The Sun. Every important journal already existing has been modified and bettered by the force of the Sun's example.

The Sun of 1882 will be the same outspoken, truthtelling, and interesting newspaper.

By a liberal use of the means which an abundant prosperity affords, we shall make it better than ever before.

We shall print all the news, putting it in readable shape, and measuring its importance, not by the traditional yardstick, but by its real interest to the people. Distance from Printing House Square is not the first consideration with The Sun. Whenever anything happens worth reporting we get the particulars whether it happens in Brooklyn or in Bokhara.

In politics we have decided opinions; and are accustomed to express them in language that can be understood. We say what we think about men and events. That habit is the only secret of success of The Sun's political course.

The Weekly Sun gathers into eight pages the best matter of the seven daily issues. An Agricultural Department of unequalled merit, full market reports and a liberal proportion of literary scientific and domestic intelligence complete The Weekly Sun, and make it the best newspaper for the farmer's household that was ever printed.

Who does not know and read and like The Sunday Sun, each number of which is a Golconda of interesting literature, with the best poetry of the day, prose every line worth reading, news, humor—matter enough to fill a good sized book, and infinitely more varied and entertaining than any book, big or little?

If our idea of what a newspaper should be pleases you, send for The Sun.

Our terms are as follows:

For the daily Sun, a four page sheet of twenty-eight columns, the price by mail, post paid, is 55 cents a month, or $6.50 a year; or, including the Sunday paper, an eight page sheet of fifty-six columns, the price is 65 cents per month, or $7.70 a year, postage paid.

The Sunday edition of The Sun is also furnished separately at $1.50 a year, postage paid.

The price of the Weekly Sun, eight pages, fifty-six columns, is $1 a year, postage paid. For clubs of ten sending $10 we will send an extra copy free,

The pay of a lock tender is $36 per month and a high salaried canal board compels them to furnish oil for lights used around the lock.

On the opening of navigation the new freight packet Oswego will commence semi-weekly trips between Syracuse and Oswego, leaving Syracuse Mondays and Thursdays at 4 p. m., passing Phœnix at 12 midnight, Fulton 6 a. m. Leave Oswego Wednesdays and Saturdays 12 m. passing Fulton 4 to 6 p. m. Phœnix 10 p. m. Capt. S. Huntley will commence weekly trips between Oswego and Utica, with the freight barge Onondaga.

Superintendent Dutcher returned to Albany from a trip along the canals, Saturday morning. He reports the banks in excellent shape, and says the frost does not penetrate deeper than one foot. Last year at the same time the frost was in the ground to the depth of five or six feet. If the canals open April 11th as now determined, it will be the earliest opening with one exception only, since the establishing of the canals. The first year of the canals, 1825, they were opened April 30. The earliest opening on record is the season of 1828, when navigation opened March 27. The last opening falls on the year 1872, when it was May 15 before they were navigable.

The trial of David McMillen for killing Rev. Jeremiah McCarthy, at Greenfield, Mass., by a pistol shot on the third of last December, will be remembered by our readers. McMillen was tried last week and the jury brought in a verdict of "not guilty" after deliberating for forty-seven hours. McMillen put in a plea of self defense.

The Ithaca Journal relates that a grocery firm in that village has come to the conclusion that it is wicked to sell tobacco, cigars and cider vinegar, and in consequence those articles have been banished from their stock. Now if this firm could only make up their minds that it was not the proper thing to sell for cash what a business they would do for about two days.

About 4:45 o'clock Thursday afternoon, Frederick Hess, foreman in Leroet & Blaisdell's planing mill at the corner of Almond and Water streets, was caught in a shaft and literally torn to pieces by its rapid revolutions. A belt running from a pulley on the line shaft to some machinery on the floor below had become loose, and Hess was standing on a plank some four feet lower than the shaft and twice that distance from the floor, taking the belt apart to tighten it, the belt having been thrown off the pulley which was in motion at the time. He was reaching over the shaft with his right arm when the stout cloth of his coat sleeve caught in the shaft in some inexplicable manner and he was instantly wound round the shaft making three or four revolutions. He then dropped to the floor. As he was hurled round the first time his head struck a joist in the floor above, crushing his skull and shivering the end of the joist into splinters. Both arms were torn off above the elbows and the right shoulder broken; one leg was cut off just above the knee and then broken again between that and the body and the other leg literally pulled from the socket. Nearly every shred of clothing was torn from the body and the floor and ceiling were covered with blood and brains. It is probable that Hess died instantly as he uttered no sound after being caught. I have been very sick over two years. They all gave me up as past cure. I tried the most skillful physicians, but they did not reach the worst part. The lungs and heart would fill up every night and distress me, and my throat was very bad. I told my children I never should die in peace until I had tried Hop Bitters. I have taken two bottles. They have helped me very much indeed. I am now well. There was a lot of sick folks here who have seen how they helped me, and they used them and are cured, and feel as thankful as I do that there is so valuable a medicine made.

Be beautiful! O, be beautiful! for beauty captivates monarchs and conquers kingdoms. Almost every one knows that that celebrated lady and accomplished writer, by title Countess of Blessington, retained her personal charms to an advanced period of her life, and that all the most distinguished statesmen, authors and poets of her time were never tired of eulogizing the peculiar fascination, and the blended pearly purity of her complexion, melted the heart of Lord Byron, captivated Count D'Orsay and brougt N. P. Willis to his knees before her. The great secret of all her successful conquests lay in the fact of her ladyships's habitual use of Princess Louise Toilet Cream. Literary Notes.

The poet Whittier has written for Wide Awake a tender and exquisite poem commemorative of the children's love for Longfellow, and of Longfellow's death. It will appear in the May number, together with a fine frontispiece portrait of Longfellow, engraved by Closson. Chaplain Clark, of the U. S. Training Ship, Portsmouth, will have a story in the May Wide Awake entitled "Lost in Pompeii," giving a young midshipman's adventures among the sewers and yet buried mansions of Pompeii.

ST. NICHOLAS FOR APRIL.

Opens with a charming frontispiece picture by Rosini Emmet, illustrating a timely little poem by Mary Mapes Dodge, entitled "An April Girl." "Brigham, the Cave-dog," is an account of a clever animal that was lost in the Mammoth Cave of Kentucky, but found his way out after wandering for thirty-six hours among a maze or pitfalls and dark windings. Mrs. Abby Morton Diaz contributes "The Story of Wangse Pah and the White Elephant," an illustrated sketch of Siamese life. "Lord Malapert of Moonshine Castle" is a bright comedy for children, by E. S. Brooks. It is easy to learn, not difficult to get up, does not require many speaking characters, and bids fair to be popular with our younger Thespians. The veracious legend of "Mr. Weathercock" is given by "Aunt Fanny" Barrow. Walter Satterlee has drawn four-page illustrations for some æsthetical stanzas, called "Lament of the Cattail."

THE AMERICAN NEWSPAPER DIRECTORY, which will be issued next month by Geo. P. Rowell & Co., of New York, will contain the names of 10,611 periodicals in the United States and Territories which is a gain of 344 in the year just passed. The number of daily papers has increased in a somewhat larger proportion, and is now represented by a total of 996 against 921 in 1881. The largest increase has been in New York—10 dailies, 29 of all sorts. Illinois and Missouri show a percentage of gain which is is even greater, while Colorado leads all others in the percentage of increase, both of daily and weekly issues. California, Nebraska, Nevada, Oregon, South Carolina, Tennessee, Vermont, and West Virginia have follen brhind 1881 in the total number of periokicals issued. In Georgia, Maine and Massachusetts the suspensions have exactly counterbalanced the new ventures. In every state not mentioned above, and in the Territories, there has been an increase.

Remember one fact, Draper has taken the lead in selling goods cheap for the past 18 years, and will keep giving good bargains. Call at either store Fulton or Oswego Falls, and see for yourselves.

Was It Suicide?

Geo. Burrington died in Oswego Monday evening from an overdose of laudanum administered by himself.

Burrington and family are well known in Fulton, having resided here, and having relatives now living here. Burrington was a machinist, 57 years of age, and a man given to periodical dissipation. Sunday evening he was nervous and restless, the fruit of a week's heavy debauch. In order to produce sleep he obtained an ounce of laudanum and remarking that it would induce sleep drank it in the presence of his wife and daughter.

He remained in a semi-unconscious condition until Monday evening he died. A coroner's jury rendered a verdict that George Burrington came to his death by an overdose of laudanum administered by himself.

Burrington was in Fulton last week trying to get parties interested in the manufacture of a bark machine of his own invention. It is thought a failure to awake interest in his invention caused despondency that terminated in his last spree.

We find the very complimentary mention of a well-known Fulton gentlemen in the Musical and Dramatic Courier:

At a recent meeting of the Board of Trustees of the Weber Firm, F. K. Jones was appointed to fill the vacancy of leading salesman in place of Ferd Mayer, now of the Chicago branch house. Mr. Jones is an excellent musician, and is a young man of very attractive address; and it is said that he bears a very striking likeness to the Prince of Wales when the latter was about thirty-three years old. Mr. Jones is one of the lights of the music trade, and it is said he was Mr. Weber's choice for the position.

Bob Ingersoll says there is no day so sacred but that the laugh of a child will make it still holier. The same thing is true of a plug hat. There is no plug hat so holey that a little, brown eyed lisping child, with a good reliable carving knife cannot make still holier. And there is not a suit of clothes, of like grade, in Syracuse, that can be had any where at so low a price as at Kent & Miller's 18 and 20 South Salina street. Their stock of ready made clothing for 1882 surpasses all that they have before displayed. Overcoats for spring wear are in all the latest styles and patterns of goods. Every man, young and old, can be suited in a moment. The gentlemens department, the young men's department, and the boy's department are all full of exquisite shapes. No purchaser of spring clothing can do anything like as well at any other place as at Kent & Miller's, 18 and 20 South Salina street.

CLOAK AND DRESSMAKING.

Miss Mary J. Grierson of Oswego Falls [illegible]

[illegible] Berkshire Medical College, in Massachusetts.

His first location as a practicing physician was at Volney Centre, three miles east of the village of Fulton, in the year 1831, remaining there until 1851 when he took up his residence in this village. During his residence at Volney Centre he was married and three sons were born who grew to man's estate each one embracing one of the three learned professions minister, lawyer and doctor. Of his sons Dr. Daniel Pardee, of Fulton, and Rev. Stebbins Pardee, of Seymour, Conn., survive him, Emory, S. dying last summer.

Dr. Pardee was a man that possessed many admirable qualities, chief of which was his unfailing promptness and liberality to those in need of his professional services. During a half century of practice he devoted his time exclusively to his duties having no desire to come before the people only in the line of his profession. Mr. Pardee was outspoken and frank in his conversation, generous and honorable in his dealings and his loss is an irreparable one to this community.

Up to within four days of his death he was active in the discharge of his duties. For the past few weeks of his life there was a notable absence of his hearty salutation, cheerful laugh and characteristic elasticity of step. In closing up his life Fulton loses an honorable and useful citizen, the medical profession a learned and valuable member and the surviving family a devoted father and husband.

THE FUNERAL.

The funeral was held at the family residence, on Oneida street, Monday, at 2 p. m., under the auspices of the masonic order. Brief family devotional exercises preceded the ceremonies conducted by Rev. E. Moyses, rector of Zion church. The appropriate music was furnished by the choir of Zion church, Messrs Smiddy, North and John and Harold Bacchus.

The masonic arrangements were carried out in the most impressive form. A special train from Oswego conveyed about fifty brethren while large delegations were present from Syracuse, Phœnix, Mexico and surrounding towns, about 300 being in line. A delegation of Sir Knights from Syracuse in uniform were also present. The medical fraternity of this vicinity marched in a body to the grave. At Mt Adnah the ceremonies were grand. The day was beautiful and the streets were thronged with people hundreds escorting the body to Mt Adnah. The bearers were Messrs H. Hulett, Joseph Ward, Peter Althouse, W. D. Patterson, Willard Johnson and Dr. J. Watson. At a meeting held at the lodge room after the funeral a vote of thanks was given to Deputy Grand Master Treadwell, of Oswego, for the able manner in which he assisted Worshipful Master Baker on the occasion; also a vote of thanks to the Sir Knights' Escort from Syracuse.

Wednesday evening March 29, John Barry died at his residence in this village aged 55 years. Mr Barry had been in poor health for over a year. He was confined to his room for several months during last year but recovered sufficiently to appear upon the streets last fall. He was again prostrated during the winter with a fever which terminated in death.

Mr Barry was a resident of Fulton and vicinity for 28 years. During his long residence in Fulton he was employed in various hardware stores and was well-known and respected by all who knew him. He was a quiet, unostentatious man, honorable and generous and the loss of so good a citizen is widely mourned.

Funeral services were held at the church of the Immaculate Conception, Sunday at 2 p: m:, Rev Father Kearney officiating. Hundreds were unable to gain admission to the church. The services were brief and solemn. Father Kearney paid a fitting tribute to his memory and pointed with pride to his character as a man and christian. The remains were escorted to the grave by a large body of friends from this place and Oswego, there being forty three carriages in the procession. The bearers were Thomas Somers, Tobias Burden, Bryan Crahan, James Doyle, Michael Pomphret, George Fitten.

Mrs. Polly Hart of Phœnix died Friday morning at the remarkable old age of ninety-six years. She was of German birth and was the mother and grandmother of over forty persons most of whom live within a mile of Phœnix.

Strangers Visiting

Syracuse and some of their own towns [illegible] have occasion to go abroad, often remark wh[illegible] singular and striking sameness exists in the shape of Ready-Made Garments in their make up and mixture, in comparison with the Clothing sold in other cities, and how far Syracuse is behind other cities in that respect. We were aware of these defects and came to Syracuse to stay, don't forget it; with a big line of

MEN'S, YOUTH'S, BOY'S AND CHILDREN'S FINE CLOTHING!

That are up to the fashion of the day and that are made by the best skilled labor that America can produce, and the most eccentric and exacting connoisieur will regard our

READY-MADE CLOTHING!

As the Style. Merchant Tailors are producing the same styles this season. There can be no dispute about the superiority of quality and make-up of our clothing, they will carry off the honors, attract the multitudes, and a jury made up of every citizen of Syracuse, would by the largest majority award us the leadership of the Ready Made Clothing Trade, in Syracuse. Trade booming, with the pains we take with everyone and the [illegible] of well made Clothing, it could not be otherwise [illegible] arrivals of stylish and well made Ready-Made Clo[illegible] every day; for the little ones too; don't forget it.

In Kansas since the constitution has forbidden the sale of all sorts of drink, beer has taken the name of sea foam. The following is from the examination of a witness in the prosecution of a seller:

Question. Did this sea foam look like beer?" Answer. It did.

Q. Did it foam like beer? A. It did.

Q. Did it taste like beer? A. It did.

Q. Could you discover any difference between it and beer? A. I could not.

Q. What, then, in your judgement was it? A. It was sea foam.

Q. What is sea foam? I don't know.
